CARNEGIE GIVES UP ALL BUT $25,000,000

Announces That Corporation Is to Have Residue of Estate Under His Will.

RIGHT ABOUT EX-PRESIDENTS

He Defends His Offer to Pension Them in a Statement in His Own Reformed Spelling.

Carrying out the promise made on his seventy-seventh birthday anniversary, Andrew Carnegie returned yesterday to his pet subject of pensioning ex-Presidents, offering new and original arguments why such pensions should be provided, supplemented by references to Presidents Cleveland, Grant, and Lincoln. He also announced that, in addition to the $125,000,000 which had been turned over to the Carnegie Corporation of New York, which has charge of the steel master's philanthropies, there was still another $25,000,000 held in reserve by him for odds and ends of pension funds, of which, for personal reasons, he wishes to retain the management for the time being. Simultaneously came the further announcement that in the event of his death all accrued surplus not provided for in his will would be added to the fund of the Carnegie Corporation.

The subject of pensions for ex-Presidents, when it was referred to Mr. Carnegie by reporters on Monday, brought forth a big smile and much enthusiasm. He admitted that the subject was very "near to his heart," and he could barely refrain from talking about it. There were certain facts, however, he said, which he was getting together, and he begged the reporters to hold off a day. These facts were submitted yesterday by Mr. Carnegie in a statement in his own reformed spelling, which he insisted must be followed in the paper. Here it is:

The proposal to pension ex-Presidents is making the desird impression, and my trustees and myself are all hoping that Congress will meet it by proper action. Not one of us but will rejoice should this be the result.

We were very careful to provide that only in case Congress faild to provide pensions to ex-Presidents the Corporation would stand ready to do so. It is properly the province of the Nation to act. We all feel that.

You notis John D. Crimmins's letter in THE TIMES of yesterday? Think of such a man as President Cleveland, of whom my friend Crimmins writes: 'All the time I was thinking of the pitiful position and anxiety of this good man who had a young family.'

Mr. Crimmins is entitled to the credit of securing a home and offering it to Mr. Cleveland, who, however, declind it. Glad am I that I was, as Mr. Crimmins says, a subscriber. I know more about Mr. Cleveland. He and Mrs. Cleveland remaind overnite with us. He told me of an offer he had had to serve as Director in an important institution, which would give him a salary. Finding that other Directors had not salaries he declind the offer, saying his name was not for sale. He was offerd any sum requird to keep him and his family in comfort until he found suitable occupation, but this he declind also in a letter worthy of him.

Reference has been made to Gen. Grant. His case was even more pitiful than President Cleveland's. He fell so far behind in the White House that he was going to stop all diplomatic and ceremonial dinners, which cost $800 each. George W. Childs of Philadelphia is here entitled to great credit. He objected strongly, and securd a fund from a few, only too glad to provide it, and the dinners were continued by arrangement; I believe Grant never knew how.

Gen. Grant, after retirement, at last was advisd to write his memoirs as the surest means of obtaining funds. He was then in failing health, but the memoirs provd an exceptional success His first attempt to write was an article in The Century, and under the kind guidance of editors Messrs. Gilder and Johnson he was advisd to dwell upon personal incidents, what he himself thot, did, and said, for this chiefly interested the public. Following this advice made his future book the success it became. He was disposd to ignore himself and give in detail his officers' action.

Imagine the year or more of misery spent by this 'augur that could bore' whom Lincoln found, who achievd victory for the Union, and imagine the Nation which faild to provide its hero with means necessary to prevent pecuniary cares in old age, and kept him in poverty when a small pension would have ensurd a happy old age.

Other Presidents have sufefred more or less. Here is a copy of a letter I have recently receivd, but having no express authority to give the name of the sender, I omit it:

> The following is from a letter written by Mrs. Abraham Lincoln to my father, dated Soldiers' Home, Sept. 23, (year omitted, presumably 1864)—
> The President's own salary is not over $10,000 in gold; taxed $900 with such an establishment to keep up, you may imagine that we have not enriched. In truth I have had to endeavour to be as economical as possible, more so than I have ever been in my life. It would have been a great delight to me to have had the means to entertain generally, as should be done at the Executive Mansion; it would have been my pride and pleasure. So when the world dares to insinuate against us the public should take them in hand. MARY LINCOLN.

This will give some an idea how even our great Lincoln must have suffered, knowing in case of death his family would be left comparatively poor, and such was the sad fact. The present salary of Presidents is now sufficient, but leaves no surplus. Surely a pension should be provided to preserv them and their widows from such suffering as return to private life without means involvs.

Fortuante indeed for our country that the highest offis is rarely or never held by one of independent means. Better far that our Presidents and their widows continue to be and remain poor, but ever under pension and the fatherly care of the Nation they have so nobly servd during their lives.

"I have often been asked my opinions about 'The Gospel of wealth,'" continued Mr. Carnegie when he had given out the statement about the pensions. "I want to set that down in black and white also."

This is what he dictated to his stenographer:

"I resolvd to fulfill the requirements of the 'Gospel of Wealth' by transferring my funds, and have done so except that I have found it desirable to retain for a while personal distribution of my United States Military Telegraf Corps pensions and Pennsylvania Railroad pensions to Pittsburgh division men and their widows, because my old boys would dislike the change, and so, no doubt, others on the pension list. To meet these payments and others under my will twenty-five millions of bonds upon which the New York State tax has been paid have been reservd. But the New York Corporation has been made my residuary legatee, and all surplus left

DANES KEEP ST. THOMAS.

Reported Plan to Turn It Over to Germany Dropped.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent learns that the concession conveying possession of the harbor of St. Thomas, West Indies, to a powerful syndicate of Danish financiers has now been revoked, and control has passed back to the Danish Government. It is stated that the revocation was due to demonstrations made in Denmark against it because of the possibility of the syndicate transferring the concession to a foreign power. Germany was the nation chiefly feared in this connection.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Rumors of the possible German acquisition of St. Thomas, now held by Denmark, were first heard many years ago, when Denmark wanted to interest the United States in purchasing the island. Captain Christmas came to this country and offered the island for $4,000,000. Since then, at intervals, the story has been circulated that an international syndicate was on the point of acquiring St. Thomas and that Germany planned to buy or lease it as a naval base in Western waters. Such a suggestion is absolutely fantastic, and was never seriously considered by the State Department.

CORRIGAN BEQUEST VALID.

Court of Appeals Gives $310,212 to Estate of the Archbishop.

ALBANY, Nov. 26.—The Court of Appeals to-day sustained the lower courts in upholding the will of John Laden of New York, who died in 1894, leaving a great part of his estate, amounting to $310,212, to the late Archbishop Corrigan.

Laden left a trust fund of $40,000 for the benefit of his daughter and her children, and made other bequests to certain persons and charitable institutions.

One-half of the residue of the estate was to go to Archbishop Corrigan after the death of the other legatees, who were to have the income during life. The daughter and a granddaughter contested the will, alleging that the gift to Archbishop Corrigan was a secret trust for the benefit of the Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum of New York City, and that one-half of the residue should not pass under this provision of the will because they contended that it violated the statute which prohibits a person from leaving more than one-half of his estate to religious institutions if the decedent had a wife or children living. The courts, however, held that there was no secret trust, and that the will was valid.

NO CONCESSION TO RUSSIA.

Washington Government Not Planning a Retreat on Trade Treaty.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Reports indicating that the United States Government is inclined to retreat from its position in regard to the denunciation of the treaty of commerce with Russia, it can be stated, are unfounded. In view of the fact that the treaty was denounced by joint resolution of Congress, which, with the President's signature, has the force of law, it is asserted that only by act of Congress could the provisions of that treaty be continued.

Recently a report was put out from a certain quarter here suggesting that a modus vivendi had been agreed on by which the strictly commercial sections of the treaty should remain in force while the question of injustice to American Jews in Russia would be left for later settlement. Lawyers here at once pointed out that such a course would yield to Russia everything she desired. The Jews would still be maltreated, and in the face of Congressional action the treaty would to all intents remain in force.

The suggestion that American tariff rates on Russian products will remain unchanged in spite of the denunciation of the treaty and its consequent lapsing on Jan. 1, 1914, is true in so far that this Government will not take the initiative in levying the maximum tariff rates on Russian products. The tariff act gives the President no authority to impose the maximum, save on account of commercial discrimination. It is understood, however, that a tariff war may result from the abrogation of the treaty. Russia's tariff laws provide a general tariff—which is the maximum—and give lower rates only by treaty. With the abrogation of the treaty it is feared that automatically American goods will meet the Russian maximum, and in that case the American maximum would also be applied.

At the State Department it is said that there is no change in the situation.

WILSON FOR MONEY REFORM.

Has Asked House Leader to Press the Currency Question.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Representative Carter Glass of Virginia, Chairman of the Banking and Currency sub-committee of the House, charged with the consideration of banking and currency reform legislation, to-night gave THE NEW YORK TIMES a statement which he hoped would dispose of some wrong impressions.

Mr. Glass said he had not submitted to the sub-committee or to any other member of the House of Representatives or to Gov. Woodrow Wilson or William Jennings Bryan any tentative draft of a Banking and Currency bill. When the time comes, however, he will consult the President-elect.

"Gov. Wilson has said to me that he regarded the reformation of our currency system as an imperative necessity, and has said that it should receive immediate consideration," he explained. "I do not know, nor does any member of our sub-committee know, what Mr. Wilson's views are on the subject."

Mr. Glass has made a draft of a tentative bill, which is subject to modification, but has not submitted it to anybody. As to reports which ascribe to him a purpose to substitute "Governmental central" control for the "Aldrich central reserve association" he said:

"It has been merely a matter of deduction. In my view the declaration of the Baltimore Convention precludes consideration by our committee of the Aldrich plan for a central reserve association or the plan for a central bank. This being true, it has been somewhat naturally conjectured that any plan which I may have in mind would lodge in the Treasury Department any central control for which provision may be made."

Speaker Clark to-day said he favored currency reform, especially in view of the present troubles in the West at crop moving time, but would not say whether it should be considered at the coming special session of Congress. He remarked that the present currency system was "not elastic, but cast iron."

10,000 HAIL ETTOR AND COMRADES FREE

TO LEAD ANOTHER STRIKE

Little Falls Calls Ettor to Direct I. W. W. in Knitting Mill Dispute There.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Nov. 26.—Thousands of persons greeted with red lights and cheers the return to this city to-night of Ettor, Giovannitti, and Caruso, who were acquitted at Salem to-day of charges of murder in connection with the death of Anna Lopizzo during the textile strike here last Winter. Women with babes in their arms joined in the demonstration, which gathered in volume as the crowd surged with the three acquitted men through the principal streets of the city to Lexington Hall, the headquarters here of the Industrial Workers of the World. The cheering was continuous. From every side street in the tenement district flocked hundreds of operatives carrying red lights.

The throng in Lexington Hall finally made conditions in the building so dangerous that Ettor was forced to ask them all to leave. Then from an open window he addressed fully ten thousand persons, the red glare flickering upon the upturned faces of the multitude made up of mill workers of a score of nationalities.

Both Ettor and Giovannitti declared that they owed their lives to the "solidarity of the industrial classes of the world." Ettor, during his speech, was again and again interrupted with cheers, and as he closed there was an outburst that eclipsed all previous efforts.

"We will see," he said, "that those who belong to the Industrial Workers of the World shall be protected to the full limit of our power, energy, and ability. You won your strike to get your wage advance, but you will never get enough until the mills belong to the working classes. You have got to band together in a union to gain more bread."

He spoke of the arch erected for the flag demonstration in this city on Columbus Day, and, saying that the motto, "For God and Country—the Stars and Stripes Forever—the Red Flag Never," was a sham, he denounced the Citizens' Committee.

"From now on," Ettor continued, "you know but one religion, one God, and one country, that is working class solidarity.

"I have been informed that through an agitation of politicians some of you workers have been discriminated against in the mills. Giovannitti and I are now in your midst once more in order to give you strength. Brother Giovannitti and I stand ready to go with you as far as necessary."

Giovannitti spoke next, saying:

"We owe our lives and liberty ot the working class, who have stood by us You have won your strike, not because Ettor and I helped you, but because of your power and solidarity. But for you my voice would not be heard to-night. It would have been strangled. When pressed the thing for you to do is to cross your arms, strike, and you will win."

Later to-night Ettor said that he would probably leave here Thursday night or Friday morning for Little Falls, N. Y., where, there have been labor troubles, and from there he hoped to go to his parents in Tacoma, Wash. Ettor announced his decision to go to Little Falls on receipt of the following telegram from the Industrial Workers in that place:

"Congratulations on your acquittal. We knew you would triumph in industrial freedom. The Industrial Workers of the World will never lose. We are in a fight here now, and the pleas of hundreds of workers go to you."

ACQUITTED, THEY KISSED.

Ettor, Giovannitti, and Caruso Thanked Judge and Jury.

SALEM, Mass., Nov. 26.—"Not guilty" was the verdict of the jury in the case of Joseph J. Ettor, Arturo Giovannitti, and Joseph Caruso, on trial for the murder of Anna Lopizzo, who was killed in a Lawrence textile strike riot last Winter.

When the three men heard the words freeing them from the charge against them they embraced and kissed one another in the prisoners' cage. Giovannitti then sprang to his feet.

"Gentlemen of the jury," he said, his face beaming with joy, "in the name of justice, truth, and civilization, I thank you."

As he sat down the court interpreter, Alfred Sacco, rose and said:

"Mr. Caruso desires me to say that he wants to thank you all, and now that he is free he says that he was innocent of the crime."

Ettor, the leader of the strike at Lawrence, then addressed the jury:

"May it please the court," he said, "I thank you, not only for myself, but in the name of my companions. I also feel impelled to thank the court for the fair manner this trial has been conducted. The thanks we offer are not only ours, but thanks in the name of the working class."

Wore Red Carnations.

The jury entered the courtroom at 8:20 o'clock this morning. Immediately thereafter the prisoners, each wearing a red carnation, were brought to the cage in the centre of the room. All were smiling, even Caruso. At this hour the courtroom was not half crowded. Judge Quinn ascended the bench at 8:24 and asked if the jury had agreed upon a verdict.

"We have," said Foreman Robert S. Stillman as he handed it to the court bailiff.

"Joseph Caruso, stand up," commanded the Clerk. As Caruso obeyed the Clerk called:

"Caruso, face the jury; jurymen, look at the prisoner. Gentlemen of the jury, is Joseph Caruso guilty or not guilty?"

"Not guilty," was the unanimous reply.

Ettor and Giovannitti were likewise commanded to rise, and again the jurors chorused a verdict of "not guilty" for each defendant. The jury, which for more than six weeks had listened to the evidence in the trial, was then excused from further service, with the thanks of the court. The jurors hastened from the building, and were cheered by the crowds of mill workers in the streets.

When the jurors had left the room the court announced to Caruso that there was another indictment against him, charging him with assault with a deadly weapon, with intent to kill, and that the court would release him on his own recognizance. When the prisoner had taken oath to appear in court when summoned he was released from the cage. His wife, waiting at the rail behind the prisoners' cage, fell into his arms, and a dozen of

CLEAN UP $5,000,000 BY RARE BOOK FRAUDS

11 INDICTMENTS FOUND HERE

Disclosure of the methods of firms engaged in selling supposedly rare volumes to persons ignorant of the true value of books, made in the recent suit brought in the Federal District Court by Mrs. Emma Bird of Salt Lake City, Utah, against James J. Farmer, a former member of the Kellar-Farmer Book Publishing Company, in which she recovered $42,977, caused the Federal Grand Jury to find indictments yesterday against eleven persons who are accused of carrying on the same kind of fraud. Post Office Inspectors said last night that by means of misrepresenting the real value of books, $5,000,000 had been taken from the victims of the swindlers, and that the trade has been a profitable one for the past ten or fifteen years.

Three of the eleven men indicted—Glen Farmer, Col. William J. Hartley, and William H. Scott—were arrested yesterday by Post Office Inspectors H. A. Barber, Nathan Nolle, Hugh McQuillan, William G. Swain, and William Kenyon. They are said to have been salesmen of the Kellar-Farmer Company and the Anglo-American Authors' Association, which have offices together at 225 Fifth Avenue. The three were taken before Commissioner Shields and held in bail, Farmer in $5,000 and the other two in $2,500 each. The Illinois Surety Company went on their bonds

James J. Farmer, who is also indicted, was arrested immediately after the trial of Mrs. Bird's action and is now out on $3,500 bail. He agreed to come in to-day and put up a new bond for $5,000. The Post Office Inspectors have arranged that two other defendants shall surrender this morning, and expect to arrest the other five in a day or two.

The alleged fraud for which these men were indicted consisted in the deception of persons with more money than knowledge of books who wished to buy their libraries ready made. They were approached, it is alleged, by representatives of the Anglo-American Authors' Association and the Kellar-Farmer Company and informed that they could purchase some rare volumes exquisitely bound which would be a pride to any book collection, but must, of course, be prepared to pay a very high price.

In this way the men obtained, the Post Office Inspectors said yesterday, $30,000 from Mrs. James A. Patten, wife of the sensational wheat and cotton operator; $100,000 from Mrs. Durand, wife of the founder of Wellesley College; $150,000 from a Mr. Moore of Greensboro, Penn.; $100,000 from Alexander Sellers of Philadelphia; $8,500 from Clinton S. Martin, a cheese merchant of Hudson Street; $6,000 from Jesse Watson, one of the Federal bankruptcy receivers, and as much as $130,000 from a woman 80 years old who lives in this city and is connected with one of the largest charitable institutions, but whose name Inspector Barber refused to make public. She is in a delicate state of health and is shunning publicity, but Inspector Barber said she had engaged to pay $22,000 for an edition de luxe of Col. Roosevelt's works.

The books these men supplied, the Post Office Inspectors declare, are worth perhaps from $10 to $15 a volume. They are bound in levant and are handsomely engraved, but they sold them for whatever price they could induce people to pay, up to $200 a volume in some cases. It was represented that they were works of great rarity and of limited editions, and in some cases that they were autographed by their authors. As a matter of fact, it is alleged, there was nothing at all out of the way in the books themselves, and though their bindings were expensive they cost but a small part of the prices placed on them.

One method adopted by the salesmen, it is contended by the Post Office officials, was to make prospective customers believe that a millionaire was in active negotiation for the set under consideration, and that unless the bargain was closed at once the books must go to complete a library of a well-known book lover. This usually worked well with the person who was buying his library by the yard, and ordinarily was quite sufficient to clinch the bargain.

Much of the evidence on which the indictments were found was collected by Post Office Inspectors immediately after the conclusion of Mrs. Bird's suit. They made a raid on the offices of the Anglo-American Authors' Association at 225 Fifth Avenue, and there, they declared yesterday, they discovered a number of damaging accounts and letters. Among the latter were letters from Col. Hartley to the elder Farmer, in which he signed himself, "Your friend and fellow-robber, Bill," and "Your co-conspirator, Bill."

Col. Hartley is a member of the New York Athletic Club and was arrested yesterday after an exciting chase. The Inspectors had an idea he was at the offices in the Fifth Avenue building, and went for him there. He had just gone. So they hurried to the Hotel Victoria, where he lived. He was said not to be in, but they detected him coming down the stairs. He seemed ill, but they arrested him and took him immediately to the Federal Building for arraignment before Commissioner Shields.

According to the Post Office Inspectors, every kind of inducement was held out to compel possible patrons to purchase the books of the defendants. In one case at least they obtained a hold over one of their customers, and forced him to purchase books which his better judgment told him were not worth the money.

In the case of Mrs. Durand, her love for Wellesley College was the string which was pulled. The books she purchased, they impressed on her, would make a splendid addition to that institution's library, and this was all that was needed to make her unloose her purse strings.

$50,000 GOLD STOLEN; BIG BANKS OUTWITTED

SEALS AND WEIGHT MATCHED

Band of International Thieves Believed to Have Made Substitution on Hamburg-Trieste Train.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—A remarkable theft of £10,000 ($50,000) in gold coin from a consignment of £200,000 ($1,000,000) dispatched from the Bank of England to the offices of the Crédit Lyonnais at Alexandria is bewildering the police not only of England and Egypt, but those throughout the Continent.

The crime is one of the most daring of recent times and is believed to have been carried out by a gang of international thieves to whom information of the intended consignment of the money leaked out by some unknown means. The exceptional care with which the robbers laid their plans is revealed by the fact that, although some twelve days have elapsed since the dispatch of the gold from England, it is not yet known at what point en route the money was stolen.

The most unusual feature of the robbery is that, when the cases containing the gold were opened at Alexandria, the heavy seals put on at London were apparently intact. This shows that the dispatch of the consignment of money must have come to the knowledge of the thieves some considerable time ago, for the work of making duplicate seals could not have been done readily.

Careful Precautions Taken.

The whole £200,000 was first packed in strong bags, each containing £1,000, and five bags were placed in each case. There were, therefore, forty cases, and eight seals were placed on each case. The entire work was carefully superintended by representatives of both banks, and the cases were finally handed over to the representatives of the Crédit Lyonnais, who gave a receipt for the money to the Bank of England.

The specie was dispatched from the Bank of England on Nov. 12. Its removal was supervised by three representatives of the Crédit Lyonnais. After the boxes had been screwed down, clamped with iron bands, and sealed they were placed in a van. Following the usual practice, there were no armed guards with the van on the way to the docks when the consignment was given into the charge of agents of the Argo Steamship Company of Bremen.

The journey to the dock was uneventful. The boxes were placed on board the steamship Schwalbe, and in the ordinary course of business the bill of lading was received and signed. Aboard the Schwalbe the specie was placed in a strong room on the main deck, which had three locks, one on the door and two padlocks. The Captain of the vessel had one key and the chief officer the other two, so that neither the Captain nor the chief officer could enter the strong room except in the presence of his colleague.

Put in Baggage Room of Train.

When the Schwalbe arrived off Bremen a storm was raging, and the entry of the ship into port was delayed, but the specie was taken ashore in a specially chartered tug in order to catch a train. On the quay the bullion boxes were received by the postal authorities and representatives of the Crédit Lyonnais and placed in the baggage room of the train for Trieste. The guard of the train on its journey was changed four times.

At Trieste the forty cases were put aboard the steamship Helonan, owned by the Austrian Steam Navigation Company, to be taken to Alexandria. Again the bullion was placed in a strong room aboard the ship. It was when the Helonan put out the bullion at Alexandria that the robbery was discovered. The gold had been packed in London, so that the entire inside space in each box should be filled, thus preventing any movement inside the box. As the cases were being handled, however, some of the officials noticed that in the case of two of them the contents seemed loose.

The dock authorities sent for representatives of the Lloyds Underwriters. The seals were first examined, and apparently all were intact and genuine. The boxes were then weighed. The weight was correct, but the fact remained that two out of the forty boxes had contents which were loose. It was then decided to open these two boxes, and inside, instead of the gold, the officers found lead.

Police inquiries lead to the belief that the substitution of the lead for the gold took place on the train journey between Bremen and Trieste.

Special to The New York Times.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Nov. 26.—Gov.-elect Sulzer of New York, a guest at Monticello since Saturday, is greatly enjoying his visit to Albemarle County and is making many friends.

Last night he went on a 'possum hunt and bagged four coons and three 'possums. He was accompanied by Dave Sloan, a local sporting celebrity, and Councilman J. H. Montague, a member of the Albemarle County Hunt. Sloan had with him his two coon dogs, "Grover" and "Lit," which have treed twenty-five 'possums this Fall. Congressman Sulzer, who is an experienced hunter, greatly enjoyed the sport. To-morrow he will go in quest of wild turkeys.

The Governor-elect declines to discuss political subjects, but talks interestingly upon the future of the Democratic Party and its certainty of meriting, by its wise conduct of affairs, a long lease of power.

Special to The New York Times.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 25.—Gilbert D. Raine, editor and publisher of the Memphis News-Scimitar, was severely beaten with a cane in the hands of Rees Lee, Superinendent of the Lee line of Mississippi River packets, this afternoon in front of his office. Friends of the editor say the attack was made from behind.

The men had formerly been friends, but quarreled yesterday when Mr. Lee took the editor to task for supporting Col. Roosevelt in the recent campaign and for announcing after the defeat of Roosevelt that he would soon offer his paper for sale at public auction.

A fistic encounter was narrowly averted yesterday, and to-day the fight went on until bystanders interfered and picked the editor up from the pavement, to which he had been felled. Lee has not been arrested.

OFFERS CITY ASSAY OFFICE.

Treasury Asks Mayor to Dispose of Historic Wall Street Building.

Sherman Allen, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, called on Mayor Gaynor yesterday and offered to the city, on behalf of the Federal Government, the historic Assay Office Building on the north side of Wall Street, between William and Nassau, if the city would consent to take down the structure and put it up again on a new site. The Assay Office, which is in a dilapidated condition, was vacated last January and the United States Treasury Department is to put up a new building on the site.

The Mayor is of the opinion that some historical or other society should take steps to preserve the building, which is said to be one of the best samples of architecture of its period in the city. Either the front of the building or the entire structure may be had by the city or any organization to which the city may assign its privilege. The building was erected in 1823 by Martin E. Brown for the New York Branch of the Bank of the United States.

A JEAN VALJEAN OF TO-DAY.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 26.—A petition for the pardon of a modern Jean Valjean is being largely signed here. The case is that if Emile Dealon, arrested two days ago for a crime committed thirty-three years ago. For many years Dealon had been considered a model citizen in New Orleans. His arrest was caused by an anonymous letter.

Before attaining his majority, Dealon and Edward Broderick, who since has died, set fire to a church on St. Charles Avenue, as a prank. They were arrested, and Broderick turned State's evidence. Dealon, who did not reveal his real name, was sent to the State penitentiary for fourteen years. After a few months he dug his way out from the prison, and for years drifted about the world. Eighteen years ago he came back here, settled down and married. Three children were born of the union. His wife was prostrated by the arrest, and is now in a hospital.

CHILDREN WORK 16 HOURS.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Nov. 26.—A word picture of children working in canneries for so many hours that they cried to be allowed to return to their homes if only to be whipped by their parents was one of the many revolting details of child labor in canneries presented to the State Factory Commission at its hearing at the Capitol to-day by Miss Mary Elizabeth Chamberlain, a New York City girl who was graduated from Vassar College in 1909.

Miss Chamberlain was picked as a detective by the commission, of which Senator Robert F. Wagoner is the Chairman, to visit the largest canneries in the State. She told the commission of seeing children from the age of 4 years up working sixteen or more hours a day snipping beans, husking corn, or sorting vegetables until their hands bled and had to be bandaged so they might continue their work.

J. F. Connor, formerly a District Attorney of Livingston County, was spokesman for the canners, and declared it would be impossible to operate the plants under a fifty-six or sixty-hour a week labor law. It was admitted that in some cases women had worked 119 hours a week, and that the weekly average during the busy season for women and children is seventy and eighty and sometimes ninety hours a week.

"It is impossible to legislate humanity up to heaven," said Mr. Connor.

"No," said Senator Wagoner, "but we can save our coming men and women, and that is what this commission is going to do, fairly and honestly, without injuring any one."

Among those who attended the hearing were Miss Pauline Goldmark of the Consumers' League, New York City; Miss Florence Kelly of the National Consumers' League, and George W. Alger, counsel for the Child Labor Committee.

Likely to Result in the Failure of the Peace Negotiations—Porte Sides with Dreibund.

CONSUL PROCHASKA FOUND

WILL REFUSE A CONGRESS

Austria Will Not Let Dispute Be Settled at International Meeting—Calls Out 180,000 Reservists.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 27.—Some changes have come over the general aspect of the European situation in the past twenty-four hours, though its main features remain the same.

First of all, there has been a decided détente in the anxiety which Austro-Servian relations were causing. The rumors that the Austrian Consul at Prisrend, Herr Prochaska, was shot by Servians are shown to be unfounded by his arrival at Uskub. Next, a more hopeful view is taken of Austro-Russian relations.

As against these two favorable modifications of the situation must be set the growing belief that the negotiations between Turkey and the Balkan league will prove abortive, and that hostilities in the peninsula will have to be carried much further before the Porte recognizes that it is irretrievably beaten.

To take this last point first. In a dispatch from Constantinople, G. Ward Price, The Daily Mail's special correspondent there, says:

"The Bulgarian and Turkish peace delegates met for the first time at the village of Bagchakeul, near Tchatalja, on Monday. The meeting was only formal. Negotiations will be opened at a second meeting on Wednesday.

"Each side is believed to have assured the other of its desire for a speedy settlement.

"It is unlikely that the negotiations will go far if the Bulgarians are obstinate in their maintenance of the demands which M. Gueshoff, the Bulgarian Premier, communicated last week.

"The delegates are empowered to go on directly and treat for peace if an armistice is arranged.

"I hear from credible sources that the Bulgarian demand for the surrender of Adrianople arose as the first point of great difficulty. The Austro-Servian crisis is also likely to have a retarding influence on Turkish action in the negotiations.

"Well-informed Russian circles here speak of a Russian occupation of Constantinople as a probable reply to an Austrian seizure of Durazzo or other hostile step on Austria's part."

Turkish Troops Busy.

From another quarter comes a report that Turkey is being encouraged to resume the war by two of the great powers, from one of which she recently received large supplies of ammunition. Turkey's power of resistance is stated to have been greatly increased, while her determination not to accept the terms proposed by the allies is said to be so strong that she is prepared to sacrifice 100,000 men in the trenches at Tchatalja rather than bow the knee to the allies.

The reports of Austria's mobilization which have reached Constantinople have still further stiffened Turkey's back. The Constantinople correspondent of The Daily Telegraph says:

"The Ottoman view, that resistance should be maintained in the expectation of a general war, is becoming more accentuated, Turkey meanwhile accumulating the largest possible number of troops and then throwing these troops to the side of the Triple Alliance and restoring her own position by means of the support which the Triple Alliance would lend her at the moment of the final conference, owing to community of interests in the Balkan question, and as recompense for assistance given.

"A high official, speaking of the recall of the Austrian warship from the Aegean, said:

Turkish Officials' Statement.

"'This is very significant. We know also that Austria has notified certain powers that she will not admit the access of Servia to the Adriatic. We know also that Bulgaria is exhausted, that she has lost half her effectives and has no reserves to fill up the gaps. We are disposed to come to an understanding with the Balkan States, but if the Bulgarian delegates insist on the surrender of Adrianople, the abandonment of Macedonia, or any such impossible things, it is obvious that a rupture of the negotiations may be regarded as certain.' "

The Constantinople correspondent of The Morning Post says:

"In official circles it is stated that unless the conditions of the allies are considerably modified an agreement is impossible. The plan of the allies is believed to be to force Adrianople to capitulate and to effect an important landing in the Gallipoli Peninsula. The allies hope to carry out this plan and confront Turkey with a fait accompli during the pourparlers for the conclusion of an armistice."

The Vienna correspondent of The Times says:

"The Austrian Lloyd Company received to-day (Tuesday) from its liner the Graf Wurmbrand, stationed off Durazzo, a telegram stating that Servian troops had reached Milota, seven miles from Durazzo. It is assumed that by this time Durazzo has been occupied without resistance."

Austro-Servian Tension Relaxed.

As regards the Austro-Servian situation, the elimination of the Prochaska incident as a cause of immediate danger has appreciably relaxed the tension of the last few days. The tendency to hope for the best is strengthened by a reassuring statement of the North German Gazette, the semi-official organ of the German Foreign Office, that the Albanian and Adriatic questions will have to be settled in conjunction with other issues raised by the war. This is taken to mean that both Germany and Austria-Hungary adhere to the policy recommended by Premier Asquith in his Guildhall and Nottingham speeches.

In Paris more explicit assurances as to Austro-Hungarian intentions are still desired, but it is felt that to have postponed a dangerous crisis may help to avert it.

The general feeling in Vienna is much less agitated, and, according to a dispatch from The Daily Mail's correspondent, "there are good grounds for believing that the Kaiser has counseled the Archduke Francis Ferdinand, heir to the Austrian throne, who has just visited his Majesty, not to present an ultimatum to Servia and also to accept the international standpoint first presented by Mr. Asquith in his speech at the Guildhall, where he declared that the British Government deprecated raising or pressing isolated questions while the war in the Balkans continued."

Against a Conference.

One fact comes out clearly in all the Austrian dispatches — that the Dual Monarchy will not submit her interests in the Balkans to an international conference. She will go to an international conference only after a definite settlement with Servia. In this connection Dr. Dillon, The Daily Telegraph's special correspondent at Vienna, says:

"No international tribunal unhampered by preliminary and binding postulates can be invested with the authority to adjudicate on matters deemed vital to the dual monarchy. Questions of this character are the autonomy of Albania and the refusal to acquiesce in Servia's claim to annex the Albanian coast or the Port of Durazzo.

"The Austrian Government believes that a congress or conference like that of Algeciras or Berlin, competent to deal with every topic on its merits, is not a suitable instrument for settling international differences peacefully and with finality. Consequently Austria-Hungary will be unable to give favorable consideration to a proposal that such a conference be summoned."

This statement of Dr. Dillon as to the attitude of Austria regarding a conference receives corroboration in another dispatch, from Berlin, which shows that Germany takes an identical view. "The Berlin Foreign Office," says this message, "refuses to identify itself with the theory that the Austro-Servian controversy is ripe for settlement by an international conference. It declares that Servia's demand for a strip of the Adriatic coast is simply undebatable and that the talk of a conference to discuss that point is designed to retard rather than facilitate an amicable adjustment of the dispute. Germany would not be disinclined to go to a conference later, but considers the project at this hour very premature."

Austria's military preparations continue. According to information received by The Daily Mail, the exact number of reservists called to the colors by the Austrian Government is 180,000. Then the men whose terms of service expired in the years 1909, 1908, and 1907 in the military districts of Vienna and Gratz are being placed on an "enhanced peace footing," which includes all reservist officers. This enhancement began at Vienna and Gratz on Monday, continued yesterday, and will proceed further toward completion to-day.

The Russo-Austrian Situation.

Next as regards Austro-Russian relations. According to a St. Petersburg dispatch to The Times, a communiqué published in the Rossiya emphasizing the pacific intentions of the Czar's Government had a good effect on the Bourse, but Russian public opinion regards the situation as one of unprecedented tension.

St. Petersburg, which on Monday was optimistic compared with Vienna, yesterday seemed to have caught the infection of alarm from the Austrian capital. Two dispatches in this morning's Times, read in conjunction, throw a vivid light on the situation between the two countries. In one a St. Petersburg correspondent says:

"The fact that M. Sazonoff (the Foreign Minister) and Gen. Sukhomlinoff (War Minister) are almost daily at Tsarskoe-Selo shows that the situation is tense. Rumors that Austria-Hungary is on the eve of important action' here and at Belgrade, coupled with the concentration of her warships in the Adriatic, complete a picture which, in spite of the efforts of professional optimists, compels the gravest apprehension." In the dispatch a Vienna correspondent refers to the difficulty of removing the menace of the situation "created by the Austro-Hungarian response to the military measures of Russia."

This response, it is added, "has already involved on this side of the frontier an outlay calculated to amount to several millions sterling. In the light of the pacific official assurances issued from St. Petersburg, however, it is hoped that the audience granted to-day by the Czar to the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador at Tsarskoe-Selo will pave the way for a slackening, if not for a revocation of these extensive precautionary measures."

Until, however, the Austrian belief that Russia is encouraging Servia is entirely removed, it is hardly to be expected that there will be any cessation of the military measures of precaution. It is a matter of certain knowledge in Paris, according to the correspondent there of The Times, "that the Russian Government has been very far from inciting Servia to put forward unreasonable demands. The story that the Servian Ministers possess somewhat occult knowledge of Russian plans which favor their more extravagant demands is absolutely unfounded. In particular, none of the Russian Grand Dukes, Nicholas Nicholaievitch, or any other, has been in Belgrade or has in any way intervened in the conduct of Russian policy."

This will serve as an indication of the sort of denial issued from Russia designed to satisfy Austria on this point. Something more definite is required, for, as a London paper points out, "We cannot forget the Czar's telegram to King Peter of Servia congratulating him on the success of his army without the need of invoking outside assistance. There has never been any explanation of that telegram. The defiantly provocative attitude of Servia can only be due to a belief in the ultimate support of Russia."

Russia May Seek Revenge.

Another point which suggests an element of further danger in the present relations of the two countries is raised in a Times editorial. "There is reason to fear," says the article, "that the humiliation to which Russia was subjected in 1909 still rankles and has served in her case as additional stimulus for those military precautions which both powers have set in motion with much zeal and some mystery. The precautions need not unduly disturb us, but the motives which lie behind on both sides are sufficiently potent and embittered to account for the alarm now felt throughout the Continent.

"If Russia and Austria reach the stage of hostilities they may both expect their friends to help them, and that is a prospect which cannot yet be said to be remote. At the same time, it is not precisely near, and the statement that Austria-Hungary and her German ally no longer insist upon a settlement of the Austro-Servian issue before the general negotiations at the close of the war will, if confirmed, appreciably lighten the situation, which has been growing extremely dangerous."

Meanwhile the continued disquiet is causing serious disturbance to business. The $50,000,000 which Austria is reckoned to have already spent in mobilization by no means represents all the losses created by the war alarms.

It is suggested that the period of disturbance might be reduced if a more expeditious method could be arranged for the exchange of views that is taking place between the Governments. At present every issue that is raised is discussed by six different Foreign Ministers, each with six different Ambassadors, who report to their own Governments. It is believed that progress might be easier and swifter if the discussion were conducted in some one capital by representatives of the powers sitting round the same table. These representatives, who would, of course, be in constant communication with their Governments, would act as a kind of clearing house for the different ideas that are being brought forward.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, Nov. 26.—The announcement printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES that China had decided to resume negotiations with the six powers for a rapid conclusion of a loan on practically the old terms has been received here with satisfaction. It is felt that the resumption of negotiations by the powers is an absolute reassurance that there is no possibility of a general or a particular European war next year or for some time thereafter, that the Turkish-Balkan war will be settled soon, that the Servian-Austrian differences regarding an Adriatic port will be settled without complications, and that there will be no change in the status of Constantinople to upset the balance of power in Europe, thus assuring normal and undisturbed markets next year and thereafter for the absorption of the immense sums and securities involved.

An Ominous Remark.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 27.—A Belgrade dispatch says:

"After sevelal hours' conversation today (Tuesday) with King Peter, M. Hartwig, the Russian Minister to Servia, said to leading Servian journalists:

"These words are interpreted to imply that the situation is extremely serious."

A telegram from Berlin to THE NEW YORK TIMES, printed yesterday, said: "Both the Russian and Servian policies are believed to depend very largely on the Czar's astute and aggressively Pan-Slav Minister to Belgrade, M. Hartwig. It is not going too far to say that the peace of Europe at this hour is very much in his keeping."

Thirty more heavy guns were brought to the fortress at Belgrade yesterday and strong forces have been recalled from the seat of war to the Servian capital, according to the Belgrade correspondent of The Standard, who adds that there are still a considerable number of fresh troops there. The Turkish and Albanian prisoners are employed in strengthening the fortifications.

The withdrawal of the Austrian warships at Constantinople to join the fleet is taken as an unfavorable sign, and the imminent Servian occupation of Durazzo on the Adriatic Sea tends further to bring Austria and Servia toward the breaking point.

The mobilization of the Austrian and Russian Armies requires weeks for what Germany and France can accomplish in days. In Russia's case this is on account of the great distances the troops must travel; in Austria's because the units of the army are on a peace footing, which is only one-third of their war strength. Therefore, it is said, considerations of safety compel these powers to prepare when the danger signals are remote.

The efforts of England, France, and Germany are directed, apparently, toward keeping the powers together in a compact to refrain from taking up piecemeal the question which the war raises and to defer their consideration until a general conference is held.

"Public opinion is slow to express itself in Russia," says a St. Petersburg dispatch to the Reuter Telegram Company, "but indignation has been growing in the last few weeks at the alleged lack of virility in upholding Russia's international and military dignity. A few brief statements have been issued, denying all military preparations, and Russians are allowed to know nothing more about the Government's attitude.

"In a country where every family is represented in the army, serious resentment is inevitable. The officers complain that they are treated as supers, while any display of enthusiasm for the Balkan States has been repeatedly repressed.

"Nevertheless, pro-Balkan feeling is developing, and societies to carry on the campaign are being formed in St. Petersburg and the provinces. A street collection at Moscow yesterday for the war reached $100,000.

"The fourth Duma will assemble on Thursday, and the Government's policy of secrecy will undoubtedly be assailed."

Herr Prochaska's Safety.

VIENNA, Nov. 26.—Herr Prochaska, the Austro-Hungarian Consul at Prisrend, arrived at Uskub yesterday from that city. The news reached the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Office in an official telegram this morning, and disposes of the rumor that the Consul was assassinated.

No direct news had been received from Herr Prochaska for a month, and his silence gave rise to rumors that he had been killed and caused great tension in the relations between Austria-Hungary and Servia.

Because of the publication by The Arbeiter Zeitung of the peace manifesto issued by the International Socialist Congress at Basle, to-day's issue of the paper was confiscated.

The President of the Chamber refused to allow an interpellation on the subject by the Social Democrats. Herr Seitz protested against the confiscation, and the President's ruling created an uproar in the Chamber.

The President said that in view of the present difficult position of the State, the matter should be considered behind closed doors.

Herr Stoelzl, amid cheers, declared that the people wished for peace, but it must be peace with honor. The people were ready to defend the honor and integrity of the empire with all their guns and with all their power.

The sitting proceeded behind closed doors.

BULGARS' CHANCES GONE.

A Correspondent's View—Peace Between Turkey and Greece Reported.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 27.—The Daily Telegraph's Constantinople correspondent wires under yesterday's date:

"The Bulgarians have definitely retired and cannot again hope for success.

"The Turkish Army is being daily reinforced. The troops are being well fed.

"The cholera is diminishing."

The Daily Chronicle's Constantinople correspondent says he was informed last night on very good authority that Greece had concluded peace with Turkey. The main condition is stated to be the retention by Greece of Salonika. The minor terms, it is added, are being arranged.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 27.—A majority of the Ministers at Constantinople favor continuing the war, according to a dispatch from the Turkish capital to The Standard. The Minister of War has been ordered not to accept the Bulgarian proposals, but to wait for fresh instructions.

In diplomatic circles in London it is stated that Turkey has presented the following as an acceptable basis for an agreement:

First—No war indemnity.

Second—The retention by Turkey of the territory bounded by the Maritza River, the fortress of Adrianople to be included.

Third—The maintenance of the sovereignty of the Sultan in Albania.

SOFIA, Nov. 26.—The peace plenipotentiaries of the Balkan Allies and Turkey yesterday appointed Commissioners to establish formally the existing positions of the Bulgarian and Turkish forces. The opposing troops are to be confined to these positions pending the result of the negotiations.

The lines of demarcation are to be drawn to-day and negotiations will be resumed to-morrow.

As soon as Turkey shows that she really wishes for peace Bulgaria will, it is authoritatively declared, demonstrate her willingness to spare as much as possible Turkish susceptibilities by still further moderating her demands.

In addition to not insisting on the evacuation of the Tchatalja lines by the Turkish troops and allowing the garrison of Adrianople to march out, provided guarantees are given that the troops will not engage in further hostilities, Bulgaria will probably consent to Turkey withdrawing the artillery from that fortress. In other ways also the Bulgarian Government will be prepared to do everything possible to aid in establishing a permanent peace.

By the express wish of the Queen of Bulgaria $30,000 brought by delegates from London for the relief of the war sufferers will be distributed among the destitute inhabitants of Adrianople after the siege is over.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 26.—The special railway carriage built to convey ex-Sultan Abdul Hamid to Salonika has been dispatched to Tchatalja to serve as a meeting place for the Turkish and Balkan plenipotentiaries. It is a large, roomy car, and will easily accommodate twelve persons around a central table.

The plenipotentiaries had another meeting to-day, and the final meeting will be held to-morrow unless the unexpected happens and possibilities for an agreement manifest themselves.

TURKS HAD WOODEN BULLETS.

Cartridges Intended Only for Manoeuvres Were Sent to the Front.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 27.—The rout of the Turkish troops in Macedonia appears in a new light with the discovery that the Turks, besides being badly organized and badly led, were in part provided with dummy cartridges fitted with wooden bullets.

William Le Quex, in a letter to The Daily Mail, states that he found such bullets on the battlefield.

Frank Magee, The Daily Mirror's war correspondent, brought back from the battlefield at Kumanova cases of these cartridges which had been thrown away by the Turks in their flight before the Servians. The cartridges were packed in clips of five, and had the ordinary metal cases, while the wooden bullets were painted red. These cartridges were supplied to Turkey by the Deutsche Waffen and Munitions Fabriken of Karlsruhe. They were intended solely for use in the manoeuvres with the Turkish Mauser rifle, and were labeled "wooden manoeuvre cartridges." By what means they came to be served out to the soldiers who had to face Servian shells and bullets is unknown.

THE BULGARS' GREAT HOPE.

King Cannot Tell Them Yet if They Will Enter Constantinople.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 27.—A dispatch to The Times from Sofia says:

"A telegram stating that Ferid Pasha conferred with the Grand Vizier yesterday on the subject of Albania seems to indicate that hope is still entertained in Constantinople that Turkish authority can be maintained in that country. I have reason to believe that the allies will insist on the complete evacuation of Albania by the Turks, whose presence there is as little desired by the Albanians themselves as by the Greeks, Servians, and Montenegrins.

"While King Ferdinand was visiting the wounded at Jamboli on Saturday a wounded officer asked him whether the army would be allowed the satisfaction of marching into Constantinople.

"The King, observing tears in the officer's eyes, sighed deeply, and replied in a low voice, 'Providence only knows this.'"

TO-MORROW, we're all allies to partition turkey. To-day, like the mob in "Ben Hur," every clothier shrills the same cry in the same key—"Best Overcoats In Town!" Adjectival rhapsodists and polysyllabic prodigies lash themselves into trances and transports over clothes which, against true style, are greater atrocities than the Turks ever committed. They violate every agreement of the Hague Tribunal on Good Taste.

This is a season when the chalkline between fashion and folly in Overcoats is thin. So, turn to Stein-Bloch for not only the newest, but the truest in good form and good taste—Overcoats which will neither impale your vanity, nor impeach your sanity.

A Test of Railroad Efficiency

Thirty-two special trains, carrying MORE THAN 50,000 PERSONS to and from the Yale-Harvard football game at New Haven were moved by the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad IN ADDITION to its NORMAL, DENSE TRAFFIC.

And these special trains were handled PRACTICALLY ON TIME and WITHOUT MISHAP.

It was a test—A SUPREME TEST—of the New Haven's traffic facilities. And the results tell HOW WELL the Railroad RESPONDED.

Just consider what a TASK it was.

The New Haven's NORMAL BUSINESS constantly places INTENSE PRESSURE on its facilities. Now, on top of an ordinary day's business, think of moving the ENTIRE POPULATION of a city like BROCKTON, HOLYOKE, HAVERHILL or NEW BRITAIN. And moving them SAFELY and ACCORDING to SCHEDULE.

Doesn't this exemplify TRANSPORTATION EFFICIENCY?

Doesn't it demonstrate THE NEW HAVEN'S POWER EFFECTIVELY TO PERFORM THE TRANSPORTATION SERVICE OF NEW ENGLAND?

¶ It is smaller than such coats used to be, trimmer, a little less coat, a little more man.

¶ The fronts are narrower, being a sort of half-drawn curtain effect, exposing a lot of linen and waistcoat.

¶ It has a satin collar, and satin lapels that roll away from the shirt with after-dinner irresponsibility.

¶ Through the waist of this full dress garment there is a wealth of shapeliness—yet it is not ridiculously pronounced, because it has lost the accentuation which obsolete shoulders once gave it.

¶ True, any full dress garment may have the above features, but it is not features alone which give a Saks garment its inimitable style, but rather the manner in which they are featured.

Declares They Cannot "Have It Both Ways"—Must Be Loyal to Allies if they Want Aid Against Germany.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 27.—Once again the question whether British interests primarily, and the interests of the world secondarily, are best served by a compact which ranges this empire in one of the two camps into which the great powers of Continental Europe are divided is brought into the foreground by the developments in the Near Eastern situation.

As The Westminster Gazette puts it, "It is a wild absurdity that on such a question as the access of Servia to the Adriatic we should even have to dream of Russia coming to blows with Austria and of either or both dragging their partners in the Alliance and the Entente after them into a European Armageddon."

Such a possibility, it is argued, could not arise were it not for the policy which has divided Europe into two camps. The Westminster Gazette proceeds:

"The logic of the matter is this: If Servia is obdurate and Austria threatens her, guns may go off, and if the guns once go off anything may happen. The Russian people may get excited over the coercion of the Serbs and compel their Government to go in. Then, if Russia goes in, Germany must follow, and if Germany, then France, and if France and Germany then Great Britain. So eventually on an issue on which the powers profess to be unanimous and about which no one in Western Europe has either emotions, interests, or parti pris, millions of men are to fly at each others' throats and the whole world is to be impoverished for a generation.

"If that were really to be the result of the Alliance and the Entente and of the pledges which the two groups were supposed to have made to each other, it would be the obvious duty of the sensible people of all countries to assert themselves without delay and make a clean sweep of all existing combinations and entanglements."

This "clean sweep" is urged by both The Westminster Gazette and The Daily News, among Liberal journals. England, they declare, should make it quite clear that she is not going to be entangled. She has been loyal to her engagements in Europe and has gone beyond the letter of the law in supporting her friends when they had a fair claim upon her, but she is under no obligation to plunge into the racial rivalries of the Near East or pledge support to one group or the other if they are foolish enough to let the Austro-Servian quarrel spread.

On the other hand, another Liberal paper, The Daily Chronicle, considers that the interests of peace can be best served if Great Britain presents a united front with France and Russia to the Triple Alliance, while J. L. Garvin in The Pall Mall Gazette (Unionist) argues that for England now to repudiate her obligations would be to court destruction.

"We cannot have it both ways," writes Mr. Garvin. "We cannot play fast and loose in Europe, asserting the privilege of detachment when we like and claiming the benefits of partnership when it suits us. We must choose between the fatal dangers of renewed isolation and the responsibilities imposed upon us, as upon France, by loyal combination.

"If England cannot make up her mind she will drive Russia into the arms of Germany, she will lose the Balkan League and the Turks alike, and she will well deserve her fate."

What that fate will be Mr. Garvin leaves to the imagination of his readers, who can safely be counted upon to complete his argument by a mental picture of the day when Great Britain is left alone to face Germany in that death struggle which many Englishmen believe to be inevitable.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 27.—The possibility and danger of a greater war than that between the Balkan States and Turkey absorb public interest far more than the first bout of diplomacy between the belligerents outside Constantinople.

The steps toward mobilization, which Austria and Russia are taking, although but preliminary precautions, have made possible a vision of vast consequences, which, as far as Great Britain is concerned, are considered nothing less than appalling.

The British public apparently has no desire to sacrifice lives and money, paralyze commerce, and risk the navy over the settlement of the status of the Balkan Peninsula. Yet it is uneasy, because it is ignorant of how far Great Britain's diplomatic engagements with France and Russia extend in the direction of an alliance.

The Liberal press is unanimous in urging Great Britain to preserve neutrality. The majority of the Conservative papers demand the same policy.

There is reason to believe that Great Britain has given Servia, as well as Russia and France, to understand that she has no interest in Servia's demand for a port on the Adriatic Sea. She has also told them that she has no intention of supporting Servia's claim by force of arms or of aiding any other power to do so.

TURKS KILLING ARMENIANS.

Massacres in Asiatic Turkey—Russian Troops May Be Sent.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 27.—Telegraphing from Odessa, a correspondent of The Morning Post says reports received there from Kars, Russian Trans-Caucasia, allege that Turkish massacres of Armenian villagers have taken place in the districts of Bitles, Van, and Mush, Asiatic Turkey.

It is stated, the correspondent adds, that Russia is holding a strong Caucasian force on the frontier ready to enter Armenia should the massacres continue.

DEPUTIES CHEER GIOLITTI.

ROME, Nov. 26.—An enthusiastic demonstration was accorded to Premier Giolitti at the re-opening of the Chamber of Deputies to-day. He presented the treaty of peace between Italy and Turkey and was greeted with great cheering when he referred to the Italian success in the war in Tripoli and to the happy conclusion of peace.

The treaty, according to the Italian constitution, must be discussed and approved by Parliament, as it involves financial responsibilities. The examination of the document has been entrusted to a committee of the Chamber, appointed by the Speaker.

The Premier in his speech expressed the nation's greetings to the Italian army and navy as well as to the Italian diplomats, all of whom, he said, had been factors in bringing about the Italian success.

Greek Ecumenical Patriarch Dead.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 26.—The death of the Ecumenical Patriarch of the Greek Orthodox Church has produced a deep impression on the Greek community and the public generally. Joachim III. was Archbishop of Constantinople. He was 78 years old. He had a noteworthy career and had been Patriarch for eleven years. His body will lie in state for three days and the funeral services will be conducted with great pomp.

YOUNG TILLMAN CONFESSES.

Admits One-Time Drinking Habit in Court—Tells of Reform.

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Nov. 26.—Humiliating himself by admitting in court he had been a gutter drunkard, but asserting he had reformed for the woman who divorced him, B. R. Tillman, Jr., son of United States Senator Tillman, to-day began his fight in the Supreme Court to regain possession of his two little daughters, who were awarded to the mother two years ago, after they were given to Senator Tillman by his son. After getting the children, young Mrs. Tillman went to Cincinnati, where she divorced her husband for outrageous drunkenness and cruelty. She returned to South Carolina, resuming her family name, and is known as Mrs. Lucy Dugas.

Tillman gazed at his former wife, but she ignored him. He asserted the children were being taught to hate him, and that Mrs. Dugas intended to re-marry and leave South Carolina. He said he still loved Mrs. Dugas and gladly would remarry her, but she had rebuffed all his efforts for reconciliation, and had ordered her servants to drive him away.

Mrs. Dugas in her answer denied Tillman had reformed. She said he still was a drunkard and submitted affidavits to prove he was drunk a few days ago. She recounted the indignities she suffered when Tillman's wife, and said no self-respecting woman ever could again accept him as a husband. Mrs. Dugas denied the children were being taught to hate the Tillmans, but explained she ordered young Tillman to be kept off her property, as she had been told he might try to kidnap the children. She asserted she had no intention of marrying again and cited in proof of that the fact that she recently had joined the Roman Catholic Church, which forbids the re-marriage of divorced persons.

Even if she did give the children a stepfather, she commented, they as well might have a stepfather as a stepmother. She explained Tillman, she understood, intended to marry another.

after meeting the provisions of my will goes to it.

"I am happy in getting all this off my mind. It is a gruesome business, but I find that this earth is rapidly becoming more and more heavenly, so many good men and women I know labor for others. Surely Luther, Franklin, and their followers were rite who held that 'Service to man is the highest worship of God.'"

DOESN'T INTEREST ROOSEVELT.

Pensions Should Be for Wage Earners and Widows, He Says.

Col. Roosevelt was in the city yesterday attending to his duties at The Outlook office. Asked if he had anything to say regarding Andrew Carnegie's proposal to pension future ex-Presidents, the Colonel grinned and said:

"Inasmuch as the pension offer does not apply to me, I have nothing to say on that side of it. In any event, interest isn't in pensions for ex-Presidents, but in pensions for the small man who doesn't have a chance to save, and who, when he becomes superannuated, faces the direst poverty. I think that the smaller Government employe who gives his years of faithful service at a small emolument should be pensioned upon his retirement.

"And, more than that, I feel that in this country we have got to work out some system of insurance and pensions which will relieve the ordinary working man, who has been honest and industrious, of the haunting dread of extreme poverty in old age. And, even more, I believe that the widow left by the death of husband with dependent children must receive from the State what is needed so that she may live and bring up those children, and if the husband deserts her, he should promptly be tracked up and captured, and set to work and his earnings turned over to his wife and family."

The Colonel refused to comment on the local political situation when he was asked if he favored fusion in next year's Mayoralty campaign.

Democrats Spent $17,877.20.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 26.—A statement was filed with the Secretary of State to-day by Gen. Dennis F. Collins, as Treasurer of the Democratic State Committee, showing that $19,515 had been received during the recent campaign and $17,877.20 expended. Of the entire amount given to the committee the Democratic National Committee donated $11,000.

WHEN you look at two one inch lines placed side by side, few people can tell whether they are parallel. Extend them ten inches and you may find them far apart.

Ten years ago our capital and surplus amounted to $8,000,000, and the leading title companies in New York seemed to be on a basis of business equality.

The profits and the losses of the ten years' business have produced for the different companies, very different results.

To-day, our guarantee fund is greater than the combined capital and surplus of all the other companies put together and our capacity to meet the exigencies of the business correspondingly bettered.

NEW HAVEN ROAD SCORED BY PUBLIC

Mass Meeting Protests Against Management as the Cause of Many Accidents.

PUBLIC DEMANDS PROTECTION

Special to The New York Times.

SOUTH NORWALK, Conn., Nov. 26.—At a mass meeting held here this evening the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad was likened to a cancer of Imperialism; to a financial despot, worse to grasp than the Czar of Russia; to a thousand-armed octopus, which ignores the public.

The meeting was held in Lockwood's Hall, and was attended by about 800 prominent men and commuters on the railroad, while on the stage were the Mayor, city and town officials and many ministers of the town.

The meeting was the result of a pulpit announcement from all the churches of the town, backed by the indorsement and support of the Boards of Trade.

The Rev. L. B. Howell, rector of St. Paul's Church, presided, and the speakers of the evening included Mayor Edward J. Finnegan, Representative-elect Lynn W. Wilson of Bridgeport, the Rev. James Benton Werner, the Rev. Lincoln Hollister Caswell, and Lewis A. Lehmar.

The father of the movement of protest was Attorney John J. Walsh. In addition numerous letters of indorsement were read.

The speaker said the meeting was not called to abuse anybody, but to give voice to the public opinion of protest and indignation.

Mayor Finnegan said he was in sympathy with the movement, and he and the Common Council of the city were pledged to do anything in their power to end the slaughter of the innocent, and to make the railroad do what was right.

Representative Wilson said the Coroner had recommended many things, such as metal cars, more help, longer crossovers, yet the Utilities Commission of the State had only seen fit to order the last-named remedy. He said it was up to the public to see that the Public Utilities Commission of the State did its duty, and demanded such things as would safeguard the public. He said it was the aggrandizement policy of the railroad and its watered stock which caused a cutting down of running expenses which resulted in the accidents.

The following resolution was adopted:

> Resolved, Whereas it has been made to appear by a series of horrible accidents that the New York, New Haven, & Hartford Railroad Company has religiously neglected to keep its roadbeds and equipment in safe and proper condition, and as a natural consequence many lives have been sacrificed and many people have been injured and maimed for life, and whereas in the opinion of this meeting such accidents might have been averted and said railroad company compelled to render safe and proper service to the traveling public, if the various officials, having in charge the administration and execution of the laws regulating public service corporations had performed the duties which they owe to the public; therefore be it
> Resolved, That people here in mass meeting assembled call upon said railroad company and said officials to perform the respective duties which they owe to the public.

Attorney Walsh, the former Chairman of the State Democratic ticket, said:

"The State is helpless in the grasp of this gigantic trust. It is the cancer of imperialism and of a financial despot. It is up to the public to regain control of the Government, rescind the laws which give the railroad a monopoly, and restore the public to its own."

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 26.—Following the orders of the Connecticut Public Utilities Commission after their investigation of the Westport wreck, President Mellen of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company issued instructions today ordering that where practicable all cross-overs between parallel main tracks, used for trains going in the same direction, and through which trains are detoured, be constructed with No. 20 cross-over frogs.

Instructions have been given, also, requiring all trains having a scheduled speed of fifteen miles an hour or over on straight tracks to come to a full stop before making cross-over movements. Towermen must not set switches for cross-over movements until all such trains have been brought to a full stop.

The work of installing the new frogs is ordered pushed to completion with the utmost possible speed, and the order is not limited to the State of Connecticut, but applies to the whole system wherever four tracks are used.

TO EXTEND INTERURBAN LINES

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 26.—The abandonment of the Southern New England Railway project by the Grand Trunk may result in the Boston & Providence Interurban Electric Railway Company applying for a charter in Rhode Island and utilizing the Southern New England layout.

James F. Shaw, a former member of the Massachusetts Senate, the originator of the Boston & Providence Interurban, and the President of the Providence & Fall River Railway Company, held a conference with Gov. Pothier at Woonsocket to-day for the purpose of ascertaining the details of the situation in this State.

The Boston & Providence officials, it is stated, are considering the advisability of taking over, in the event of the final abandonment of the Southern New England, its layout from Providence to Woonsocket, and of establishing a line through that section of the State.

BOSTON, Nov. 26.—A protest against any measure that would permit the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad to control proposed trolley lines west of the Connecticut River, unless it could be shown that the small towns would benefit, was made to-day by Chairman Fred J. Macloid of the State Railroad Commission. The protest was made before the special legislative committee which is investigating the Western trolley situation. Freelon Q. Ball of Monson favored the building of the lines and hoped they would be extended to Stafford Springs, Conn.

Testimony in support of charges of freight delays in the handling of lumber was submitted to-day to Special Commissioner Prouty of the Inter-State Commerce Commission who is investigating the service on several New England railroads.

HOUSE INQUIRY INTO TRUSTS.

Judiciary Committee Will Make One After the Archbald Trial.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—The House Committee on the Judiciary will begin a general investigation of the trust question as soon as the trial of Judge Robert W. Archbald of the United States Commerce Court has been concluded in the Senate. The committee filed the charges and its members will be engaged in the Senate proceedings as long as they last.

Representative Clayton of Alabama, Chairman of the committee, made it plain to-day that the inquiry to be undertaken was not aimed at any particular corporation, but was intended merely to develop what would be necessary to make the Sherman law more effective. The inquiry would be specific, he said, only in the sense of developing the operations of particular corporations and not with a view to showing that particular corporations were conducting their business in an unlawful or improper way.

LACK OF EFFICIENT TEACHERS

Idea That Anybody Can Instruct in English Ridiculed at State Convention

BUFFALO, Nov. 26.—"The efficient teacher has not arrived."

This statement was made by President Charles E. Rhodes of the State English Teachers' section at the sixty-seventh annual convention of the New York State Teachers' Association.

"Many seem to think anybody can teach English," he said, "and anybody only too often gets the job."

Every phase of educational work, from the kindergarten to the university, was taken up to-day by the 6,000 delegates, and to-night an immense crowd gathered to take part in the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the establishment of the public school system in the State.

The principal addresses were made by Adelbert Moot, State Regent of Buffalo, and Thomas E. Finegan, Assistant State Commissioner of Education.

James A. Shea of Syracuse and Miss Anna A. Green of Troy addressed the New York State Council of Elementary School Principals and Teachers at a meeting held at the Broadway Auditorium during the day.

The section for teachers of "subnormal" children was addressed by Dr. William Shanahan, Superintendent of the Craig Colony, Sonyea, N. Y. Miss Elizabeth E. Farrell, Inspector of undergrade classes, Department of Education, New York, submitted an informal report, and was followed by Prof. Ivan T. Smith, Superintendent of Schools, New York Reformatory, Elmira, who read a paper on "delinquency and mental deficiency."

The State English Teachers' Association was addressed by Frank A. Gallup, Principal of the Albany High School, and discussion was opened by Eugene D. Holmes of Albany. A feature of the afternoon session of this section was an address by Dr. Talcott Williams, director of the School of Journalism, Columbia University.

Addresses were delivered before the rural educational section by Dean H. E. Cook of the State Agricultural School at Canton, W. H. Jordan, State Experiment Station, Geneva; Anna B. Comstock, State School of Agriculture, Ithaca, and S. J. Preston of White Plains.

SENATE SURELY DEMOCRATIC.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—The latest returns compiled to-day makes it certain that the next Senate will be safely Democratic, even during the incumbency of the Republican successor to Mr. Rayner of Maryland. The smallest margin to which the Democratic control of the upper house can be reduced is that of a single vote. If the Tennessee Legislature, which, though split into factions, is overwhelmingly Democratic, fails to elect a Democratic Senator a deadlock will ensue, and that will leave the Senate divided between 48 Democrats and 47 Republicans, with one vacancy. An election in Tennessee will make the Senate's alignment 49 to 47.

There is a possibility, too, through deadlocks in Republican legislatures, that the Democratic majority will be raised to three or four. Some Democrats still insist that one or two additional Democratic Senators will emerge from the tangled Illinois situation. There is a stronger possibility, however, that the Republican Legislature of West Virginia, where Davis Elkins, son of the late Senator Stephen B. Elkins, is the strongest candidate, will fail to elect, owing to factional differences between the stand-patters and the Progressives. The same condition exists in Maine. Illinois also may fail to elect.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 26.—While the regular Republican organization favors the appointment by Gov. Goldsborough of William P. Jackson, the wealthy Eastern Shore man, as Senator to fill the unexpired term of the late Mr. Rayner, the Progressives and a number of the independent Republicans oppose it.

It is charged that the Governor, in his appointment of Jackson, would be paying a political debt. The statement is made that Jackson financed Goldsborough's campaign for Governor last year, and politicians say the Governor was to, in turn, support Jackson for the Senate.

TRAFFIC CLUB ELECTION.

A. F. Mack Named President at Annual Dinner and Meeting.

The Traffic Club of New York held its annual meeting for the election of officers last night, preceded by an informal dinner at the Alpine Club, 209 Fifth Avenue. At the dinner the 700 club members present were entertained by a cabaret.

A. F. Mack, traffic manager of the United States Steel Products Export Company, was elected President. Other elections were as follows: Vice Presidents—R. H. Wallace, General Passenger Agent of the Erie Railroad; F. R. Raiff, Traffic Manager of the American Smelting and Refining Company; W. J. L. Banham, Traffic Managers of the Otis Elevator Company; W. C. Bates, Eastern Traffic Agent of the Central Railroad of Georgia, and Joseph T. Lilly of Norton & Bon; Board of Governors—J. A. Moore, Traffic Manager of the United States Motor Company; H. E. Maynard, Assistant Traffic Manager of the Clyde-Mallory Lines, and A. L. Langdon, Traffic manager of the Long Island Railroad; to fill unexpired term—J. L. Carling, Traffic Manager of Arbuckle Brothers; Secretary—C. A. Swope, Eastern Freight Agent of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad. F. C. Earle, Treasurer of the organization, was retained in office.

his male companions rushed forward and kissed him.

Ettor and Giovannitti were also under indictment of the charge of conspiring with William D. Haywood of the Industrial Workers of the World, and others in a conspiracy to incite riot in the Lawrence strike. On this they were released in bonds of $500 each, which were furnished by Helen S. Dudley of Boston.

The Lawrence strike leaders were then freed from the prisoners' cage and besieged by a crowd of men and women in the court room. For several minutes they were the recipients of kisses from the men, and congratulations from the women. The defendants and their attorneys held a jubilation meeting in the court room when court was adjourned, and a few minutes later, followed by a cheering throng of mill workers, they marched through the streets from the court house to the local office of the Industrial Workers of the World, where they remained for some time.

"I have no immediate plans," said Ettor, "but I am going as soon as possible to my home in Tacoma, where I have a paralyzed father. He has been paralyzed since my arrest."

"I am not going to my home in Brooklyn for a day or two," said Giovannitti. "I have so far only met the police and detectives of Massachusetts, and now I hope to get acquainted with its gentlemen." Giovannitti said he expected to visit friends in Boston and the neighborhood. Both prisoners were very happy. They declared that they had not words to express their joy. Caruso and his wife, who had been sitting near him outside the cage for many weeks, danced about like children, and rushed away with the crowd to the I. W. W. headquarters. They expect to return to their home in Lawrence at once.

The liberated leaders and their friends, after leaving the I. W. W. office, went to Salvation Army Hall, in Church Street, where they made the echoes ring with Italian songs and speeches. Ettor and Giovannitti spoke in their native tongue, and even Caruso, who never made a speech in his life, was forced to say a few words.

The trial of Joseph J. Ettor, member of the Executive Committee of the Industrial Workers of the World; Arturo Giovannitti, a Socialist writer of Brooklyn, and Joseph Caruso, a mill worker, came about in consequence of the strike in the textile mills in Lawrence, Mass., precipitated on Jan. 12 last, and continued for two months. Ettor and Giovannitti were accused as accessories before the fact to the murder of Anna Lopizzo, who was killed in a street riot. Caruso was accused, with Salvatore Scuito, who never has been apprehended, with actual participation in the riot.

ROME, Nov. 2.—The verdict of acquittal rendered at Salem, Mass., in the case of Ettor, Giovannitti, and Caruso, charged with murder, has been received here with the greatest satisfaction and puts an end to the agitation and the threats of a general strike.

Increase in Stage Service

MOTOR 'BUSES are now running between the Pennsylvania Station and Riverside Drive, via 32d Street and Fifth Avenue, every five minutes throughout the day. Besides this we have started on Fifth Avenue and Riverside Drive a very much more frequent service throughout the day and evening, particularly during the evening, and regardless of weather conditions. This is an experiment designed to induce regular traffic, and we hope that the improvement in the service will be met with such increased patronage by the public that we will be warranted in continuing it and even increasing it during the year.

$100,000 KENNEDY GIFT TO BIBLE SCHOOL

Banker's Widow Donates That Sum to the Cause of Training Teachers of Religion.

MAY BE BIBLE UNIVERSITY

When the Faculty and students of the Bible Teachers' Training School, at 541 Lexington Avenue, assembled yesterday afternoon for their regular conference hour, Dr. Wilbert W. White, President of the school, announced the gift of $100,000 to its permanent establishment fund from Mrs. John Stewart Kennedy, widow of the banker, whose will gave nearly $30,000,000 to charitable and religious institutions.

Mrs. Kennedy's gift is the first great single one toward the school's establishment since 1906, when Miss Helen Miller Gould gave $75,000 for the erection of the nine-story building which the institution now occupies. More than 700 subscribers are now recorded, but no single one of them has given more than $1,000.

The school is now in its twelfth year, having begun its work in Montclair, N. J., in January, 1901. In December of that year it was removed to New York City, and held its classes in the old Broadway Tabernacle Sunday School rooms, at Thirty-fourth Street and Broadway, afterward in the Brick Church, and still later in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church. In 1906 it acquired the home purchased by Miss Gould's gift.

The distinguishing feature of the school, and that which has attracted the attention of the religious educational world, is its Bible-centric curriculum. The idea of the founders was to make the Bible the organizing centre of the entire curriculum.

"What we are aiming at," Dr. White said last evening, "is the establishment in New York of a Bible university, which shall have among others a School of Theology, a School of Religious Pedagogy, a School of Missions, a School for Bible Teachers, a School for Young Men's Christian Association Secretaries, and so on. In connection with this Y. M. C. A. department the Board of Directors is making extensive plans. We will be greatly aided in the work by the railroad men's branch of the Y. M. C. A. which will be directly opposite the school.

"The school hash a unique record as an interdenominational institution. More than forty different demonimations have been represented in its student body since its foundation.

Indorsement of the school's methods has been given by representative bodies of missionaries in China, Japan, and Korea. The Union Bible School of Nanking, China, has been organized on the model of this school in New York, and now includes three former theological seminaries, those of the Presbyterian, the Methodist, and the Disciple.

The student body at present consists of 177, of whom 102 are resident in the building in Lexington Avenue. The membership represents 20 counties, 17 nationalities, and 28 States of the Union. More than 1,800 students have been in the school since its foundation. It has a Faculty of twelve and its annual budget calls for $50,000. The Board of Trustees is composed of Joseph T. Brown, Dr. James M. Farrar, Alvin I. Findley, Frederic W. Frost, William Phillips Hall, Orrin R. Judd, Dr. Howard A. Kelley, D. W. McWilliams, W. W. Adair, Dr. David J. Burrell, D. F. Merritt, Levis W. Miford, Fred E. Tasker, Leslie J. Tompkins, William H. Van Steenberg, Alexander M. Welch, J. Campbell White, Burt B. Farnsworth, and Dr. H. Franklin Schlegel.

Although the late John Stewart Kennedy was never interested in this particular institution for Bible study, similar institutions were numbered among the beneficiaries of his philanthropy. In his will he gave $750,000 to the American Bible Society and $1,500,000 to Robert College, in Constantinople, Turkey. For several years he served as President of the American Bible House at Constantinople.

By his will his widow received about $13,000,000, and she has made a number of large gifts, among them one of $200,000 to build a Waldensian Church in Rome, Italy; another of $150,000 to the New York City Mission and Tract Society for a home for its women workers, and one of $90,00 to New York University for a new building, to be known as the Cornelius Baker Hall of Philosophy.

TREE TO VISIT NEW YORK.

English Actor Coming to Consider Century Theatre Management.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 26. — Sir Herbert Beerbolm Tree will sail next Saturday on the Caronia to pay a long-expected visit to America, where he has not been for sixteen years.

When THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent saw Sir Herbert in his offices in the dome of His Majesty's Theatre, he said that there was no ostensible purpose for his visit beyond the fact that he had long wished to make the trip. Just now a favorable opportunity presents itself, owing to the huge success of "Drake," in which this leading English actor-manager himself is not playing.

It is not too much to say, however, that at the back of Sir Herbert's mind there are ideas which may have ultimate development of capital importance for the American stage. He has undoubtedly been approached by certain well-known New Yorkers whose interest in developing dramatic art in America has already been shown in various enterprises and who command financial resources of such magnitude that they are in a position to make a tempting offer even to the most successful of British theatrical managers.

Sir Herbert's visit will be a brief one, and during the nine days he will be in New York his time will be fully occupied in studying the American stage and acquainting himself with the conditions with which he would have to deal in the event of his accepting the proposals that have been made to him.

A report from London that Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree might become the manager of the Century Theatre in New York was received on the day "The Daughter of Heaven" opened at that house. George C. Tyler, for the Liebler Company, and Paul D. Cravath, for the Founders of the New Theatre, took occasion to deny the report, both stating that Sir Herbert was to make a visit to this country to look over theatrical conditions here. Another cable from London shortly after that time confirmed the first report, but subsequent advices have again denied it.

It was said at the first that Sir Herbert would have control of the theatre for three days a week, for his productions, and that the rest of the week would be devoted to light opera and ballet.

SUFFRAGISTS LOSE ELECTION

London Voters Turn Out Laborite Who Favors Them and Elect Unionist

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Woman suffrage received a setback and the Unionists gained a seat in the bye-election held today in the Bow and Bromley Division of Tower Hamlets, London. The Unionist candidate, Reginald Blair, defeated G. Lansbury, Laborite, by 4,042 to 3,291 votes.

Mr. Lansbury resigned his seat in the House of Comons in order to test the feeling in his constituency regarding woman sufrage, of which he is one of the warmest champions. He was enthusiastically supported by the suffragettes, who provided him with an abundance of motor cars to convey the voters to the polls.

Mr. Blair is an anti-suffragist.

ART PANEL FOR NEW YORK.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—At the first day's sale at Lepke's art auction rooms of the collection of the late Friedrich Lippmann, a panel of the Chairming Naivette, "The Adoration of the Three Kings," by Hieronymus Bosch, was purchased for the Metropolitan Museum, New York, for $13,750.

Berlin collectors paid $13,000 for a fine small painting of "The Birth of the Virgin," by Hans Suss, and to France went a beautiful triptich of the Holy Family, by Adriaen Isenbrandt.

PLAYWRIGHT A SUICIDE.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—At the inquest on the body of William John Jones, brother of Henry Arthur Jones, the dramatist, and himself a playwright and theatrical manager well known under the name of Silvanus Dauncey, letters were read in which Jones had written:

"I do not know how to write you. I can never get back my health, and the rest of my life would only be one of most terrible misery and pain. You know I have tramped the streets day after day, and all night I cry and pray for death. I haye asked the doctor to kill be. The doctor said there was nothing organically the cause of my pain; it was quite mental. To leave the world as I am doing may seem cowardly; to do so without a word may seem churlish. I have suffered and borne such inhuman torture as few human beings know. Fourteen years ago I had the misfortune to get a severe nervous breakdown, and I have not known a single day's rest since."

RUSSIAN MUTINEERS SHOT.

Strikes in Various Parts of Country to Protest Against Executions.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 26.—Eleven men of the Black Sea Fleet, who were recently condemned to death for inciting mutiny, were shot at Sevastopol to-day by firing parties from the warships.

CZAREVITCH IS RECOVERING.

Russian Embassy Makes Public a Reassuring Cablegram.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—The Russian Embassy made public to-day a cablegram announcing that the young Czarevitch was recovering rapidly from the attack he sustained recently.

Officials of the Embassy declared that the message should set at rest erroneous reports regarding the condition of the young Prince. There was no foundation, it was stated, for the reports that he was suffering from a permanent injury or an incurable illness.

Denniston Estate $86.718.

Robert F. Denniston, President and Treasurer of the Biddle Piano Company, who died on Sept. 2, 1911, at Point Pleasant, N. J., left an estate of $86,718, according to the appraisal filed yesterday in the Surrogates' Court. The principal asset was 225 shares in the Biddle Piano Company, valued at $72,750. This is the largest holding in the company, as the entire capitalization is only 500 shares. The interest of the decedent in the good-will of that company was appraised at $13,954. The net estate, after making deductions of $2,741, was $83,977. His widow was the principal beneficiary.

GOV. WILSON GUEST AT STATE DINNER

REPRESENTATIVE ASSEMBLY

Morning Spent at Lighthouse—Afternoon in Shops—Plans for Future Entertainments.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Nov. 26.—Gov. Wilson has been compelled to enter the social whirl, after all. Gov. Bullock's state dinner at the palace, given in his honor this evening, was the most brilliant social function which Bermuda has seen for years. Old residents say that it was the most important affair since the visit of Prince, now King, George in 1880.

When the President-elect and his wife and daughters arrived in the official carriage, they found a company representative of the army, navy, and civilian society assembled to do them honor. At the dinner toasts were drunk to King George, President Taft, and the President-elect. The palace was decorated with British and American flags, and the tables were covered with flowers.

Lieut. Gen. Sir George M. Bullock, the new Governor, appointed in succession to Lord Kitchener's brother, did not send for his wife and daughter to join him until last month, and this was their first opportunity to meet Bermuda society in a formal way.

American official life was represented at the dinner by Consul Maxwell Greene and Mrs. Greene, the Royal Navy by Capt. Hodges, the army by Col. and Mrs. Brooks Smith, Bermuda society generally by Sir Thomas and Lady Wadson, Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Trott, Capt. Lawrence, and Ambrose Gosling.

For the dinner planned for Saturday has been substituted a tennis tea at which the families of the Governor, the President-elect, and the army officers will be present.

This morning Gov. Wilson and his wife and daughters visited Gibbs Light. For the lightkeeper's benefit the Governer drew a diagram in the sand with his cane, showing that a straight line drawn from England to the Panama Canal would pass near Bermuda. "This," he said, "should make Bermuda important."

Gov. Wilson wished to climb the lighthouse tower, which has 180 steps. Mrs. Wilson protested; the Governor persisted for a time, but his wife carried her point. She and her daughters went shopping in the afternoon. Gov. Wilson followed them to town, and drove home with them.

Gov. Wilson and Sir George are invited to dine next Tuesday with members of the Bermuda Yacht Club.

A Thanksgiving Thought

So handsome are Interwoven Silk Socks that our Puritan fathers would probably have called them "worldly."

Interwovens are the only silk socks that are Interwoven at every wear-point—toe, heel, sole and ankle. No other silk socks can equal them for wear.

Socks to be thankful for, surely.

Pure thread silk (in light weight or medium weight) 50c. Mercerized lisles (in five weights) 25c, 35c, 50c. Be sure to find the name "Interwoven" stamped on the toe.

When Popularity steps in Fashion steps out.

Popularity means the Commonplace. And what has Style to do with the Common and Usual?

That which is labeled "Favored Style" is not Style at all to him who would be abreast of the moment. Rather is it the Style of a time gone by.

Yet Masters in Tailorcraft, by the very pressure of the conditions under which they ply their art, must as a rule produce only the Popular and not the Fashionable.

Here, where we personally make all our clothes, and the average time from the bolt of just-selected and just-delivered fabric to the wearer is but a few weeks, there is the Coveted Opportunity to produce clothes that are Style itself.

Remember these facts. They will explain your unusual sense of supreme satisfaction in your purchase, when the present attractive matter of special price is forgotten.

BIG PARTIES FAILED TO CAST FULL VOTE

Table of Popular Balloting in All States Shows Totals Well Under Those Four Years Ago.

DEBS VOTE ALMOST DOUBLED

Although the canvassing boards in many of the States have not yet taken formal action, it is now possible, through figures gathered officially and unofficially, to give with practical accuracy the details of the popular vote for the Presidency in the recent election. The table printed herewith will settle in the main the many questions that have arisen on that subject.

The chief feature of the complete figures is the falling off in the vote for the chief candidates as compared with 1908. Gov. Wilson did not poll the full Bryan strength, and the combined votes of President Taft and Col. Roosevelt came even further from the aggregate rolled up for President Taft four years ago. Wilson's total is shown to be 6,156,784, against 6,393,182 for Bryan, a decrease of 236,434. Roosevelt and Taft together had a total of 7,304,562, which is 333,114 below Taft's vote of 7,637,676 in 1908. Thus a total decrease of 569,584 in the vote of the two old parties is shown.

In the split of the Republican vote Roosevelt got 3,928,140, a lead of 521,718 over Taft's total of 3,376,422. The two together had a lead over Wilson of 1,147,814, which was almost 100,000 less than the figure by which Taft beat Bryan.

In many cases the full returns have not been sent in on the Socialist and Prohibition tickets. Enough is shown, however, to indicate that Chafin, Prohibitionist, will get close to his total of 253,840 four years ago, while Debs, Socialist, has almost doubled his strength. In the table Iowa, Michigan, New York, Ohio, Oregon, and Utah are left blank in the Debs column because satisfactory figures are not available. These States cast about a fourth of the Socialist vote of 420,793 in 1908. With them out, the Debs total is 684,432. Should the same proportionate gain be shown in the remaining States, the grand total will be in the neighborhood of 830,000, a gain of about 390,000.

BURTON MAKES HIS ISSUE.

Demands to Know if Senator Should Be Spoilsman or Statesman.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Senator Theodore E. Burton of Ohio intends to go before the people of his State as a candidate for re-election two years hence on the issue whether a United States Senator shall act as a messenger to obtain patronage for his State or devote his time to the study and discussion of legislative matters of supreme importance to the country. In a statement to-day formally announcing his candidacy for another term, Mr. Burton said:

"One of the most unpleasant features of a Senator's life is the attention which is demanded for matters of comparatively small importance and the neglect of questions which should be of chiefest interest to all the people. It would seem at times as if there were a more eager interest in appointments to Post Offices than in great policies which have to do with the general welfare. I have steadfastly refused to permit the minor questions of patronage to distract my attention from the larger problems which face the American people and for which I have a right to believe I was elected to represent Ohio.

"I shall be glad to enlighten the people of Ohio as to the motives which have inspired the antagonism of certain men and papers. I shall be prepared to explain and if necessary, defend, my vote on every bill which has come before the Senate during my term of office. I propose to know whether the people of Ohio wish their representatives in the Senate to take a part in framing and debating bills which involve the great issues before the American people, or whether they prefer to have them act merely as messengers for selfish interests and dispensers of patronage and spoils."

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 26.—Official figures given out by the State Board of Canvassers here to-day show that Gov. Wilson's plurality in New Jersey over Col. Roosevelt was 32,879, while he beat President Taft by 89,454.

The official vote of the State on the Presidential ticket was as follows: Democrats, 178,289; Progressives, 145,410; Republicans, 88,835; Socialists, 15,801; National Prohibitionists, 2,878; Socialist Labor Party, 1,321. In 1908 the Democratic Presidential candidate got 182,507 votes in New Jersey, while the Republican total was 265,326.

SUFFRAGISTS PRAISE TAFT IN CONVENTION

ASK ONE MORAL STANDARD

Indorse International Arbitration and Efforts by the Government to End Commercialized Vice.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 26.—What was called one of the most successful conventions ever held by the National American Woman's Suffrage Association came to an end to-day after the adoption of resolutions on several important subjects. The resolutions demanded an equal standard of morality for men and women, commended the Government for its efforts to end commercialized vice, and favored arbitration among nations, to the end that wars might be prevented. One resolution ran:

"We deeply deplore the exploiting of children of this country in our labor markets. We commend the creation of a National Children's Bureau and President Taft's appointment of a woman as head of the bureau."

Mention of the President caused applause. A delegate asked whether it was necessary to incorporate Mr. Taft's name in the resolution. Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, President, amid more applause, said it was, as Mr. Taft had removed the office from politics by choosing a woman without political influence. Dr. Shaw added that Theodore Roosevelt, when President, promised to make such an appointment, but failed to do so.

An amusing incident of the morning was the reading of a cable dispatch of congratulation from Rotterdam, Holland. The message was addressed, "Mr. Convention." The "Mr." caused much merriment among the women, which increased when Dr. Shaw said the telegraph company had been trying to find the "Mr." for three days. The dispatch was from Martina Kramrs.

It was announced by the auditors that since the convention was begun almost $10,000 in cash and pledges had been received to carry on the work of the association.

After a lively debate the convention decided to give its moral support to The Woman's Journal, but the delegates did not approve a suggestion to make the paper the official organ. They took the ground that the association had no control over its policy.

A change in the method of voting so that delegates might cast their ballots individually instead of by States was the only important revision of the constitution made. The place of the next convention will be selected by the Executive Board, which is to meet in New York tomorrow.

Four mass meetings were held in Independence Square.

TAFT TO LEAD, NOT TO RUN.

Will Work for Party Success in 1916, but Wants No Nomination.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—President Taft has quietly informed friends that, no matter how active his participation in a reorganization of the Republican Party may be, he is not to be regarded or publicly referred to in political speeches by Republicans as a possible candidate of the party in 1916.

The President has made it plain that he does not wish to be considered as in any way having an eye on the first place on the Republican ticket four years from now. He intends to do all in his power to help rejuvenate the party, and probably will make many political speeches before March 4 and after he re-enters private life; but he is in the fight to continue the party and to try to return it to power, as a man who has been its standard bearer for four years and not as a man seeking a renomination four years hence.

These facts have been developed here in the last few days in connection with discussion of a proposed gathering of Republican leaders during the Winter to formulate plans for bringing Republican factions together. Within the last week nearly a dozen Republican National Committeemen have called at the White House for brief conferences either with the President or with his Secretary, Charles D. Hilles, who was Chairman of the Republican National Committee during the campaign.

Such a meeting of Republican leaders, to be held at New York or Washington, some time early in January, is now being considered; but plans are as yet indefinite. President Taft and ½Mr. Hilles are being urged to take part in the movement to establish active, "militant" headquarters for the party, to open at once, and to lead a general party reorganization movement.

It is said that President Taft may actually become the leader of the movement to strengthen party ties; but if so, it will be with the understanding that he does not undertake it with any prearranged plan that he is to be the candidate for President four years hence.

The Republican Committeemen have offered various suggestions. The majority favor a general publicity and educational campaign, to strengthen public support of Republican principles, and to place the party in a position to take advantage of any mistakes the Democratic Administration may make.

The President is expected to speak at a Republican dinner in New York some time in January, but it is said here that there has been an understanding that no speaker at that dinner, whenever it is held, shall refer to him as the prospective Republican standard bearer of 1916. His indorsement of the dinner idea is said to have been contingent upon such an understanding.

HARTFORD WAITS FOR MORGAN TO DECIDE

Will Take No Action to Obtain Homeless Collection in Storage Here.

CITY MORE THAN HOPEFUL

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 26.—An old axiom, made familiar here by the former neighbors of J. Pierpont Morgan and his father, Junius Spencer Morgan, was quoted to-day by leaders of civic organizations as a reason why Hartford residents should not adopt a policy of seeking aggressively to obtain the Morgan art collection now in storage in the Metropolitan Museum of Art, but instead should adopt a passive policy of waiting for Mr. Morgan to act.

The axiom is: "A Morgan knows his mind." It was quoted by Mayor Cheney in asserting that a public agitation could not affect Mr. Morgan's decision in the slightest degree. It was quoted also by Charles Hopkins Clark, Treasurer of the Wadsworth Atheneum Corporation, which controls the Morgan Memorial Building, as an expression of his confidence in Mr. Morgan's preparedness to do what was best for Hartford without any outside pressure.

The Rev. Francis Goodwin, a cousin of Mr. Morgan, fell back upon the familiar axiom in urging that the Common Council do nothing to interfere with the situation as it now is.

The fact is that Hartford citizens are entirely confident they will obtain the Morgan collection from London, or at least a large portion of it. They are taking much hope from the tardiness of the Board of Estimate in New York and from the fact that, however speedily the New York authorities may go ahead after they reach the consideration of the budget next January, it will still be a year, or possibly two years, before the first of the new space to be provided in the proposed south wing of the Metropolitan Museum of Art will be ready for occupancy.

On the other hand, there will be ready in six more weeks in Hartford a building that rivals in dignity and magnificence of design the New York Library building, at Fifth Avenue and Forty-second Street. It is similar in appearance to the northern portion of the present Metropolitan Museum of Art, and will have a larger exhibiting space than the south wing it is proposed to erect when the Board of Estimate decides it can spare the money.

Splendid Building Almost Ready.

This magnificent new building, erected by Mr. Morgan as a memorial to his father, was placed in conformity with a plan for a great civic centre for Hartford, drawn by the architectural firm of Carrère & Hastings of New York. Directly adjoining it on the south the city is expending $1,400,000 in the erection of a new Municipal Building. When Mr. Morgan decided to erect the memorial structure he not only purchased ground enough to accommodate it, but ground enough to permit the removal of all unsightly structures for a long distance from it. It is on this ground, in part, that the new Municipal Building is being erected. From other sections of the tract ugly buildings will be destroyed and a large public park created.

"Are we confident of obtaining the Morgan collection for this city?" repeated Mayor Cheney in answer to a question from THE TIMES correspondent this afternoon. "Suppose you go down and look at our new civic centre and see if New York has anything finer to offer in the way of dignified and stately buildings. And see if New York has an art gallery that can compare with the Morgan Memorial as a depository for rare works of art."

Mayor Cheney, in common with most of the people of Hatrford, is familiar with the nature of the Morgan art treasures now in the Metropolitan Museum's store rooms. The de luxe editions of Mr. Morgan's art catalogues, including the catalogues of his collection of miniatures and bronzes, have been on exhibition here for some time.

The Rev. Mr. Goodwin has seen the exhibits personally upon the occasions of visits to the home of Junius Morgan in London and on visits to the South Kensington Museum. The people of the city have long had ample opportunity to become familiar with art objects through the work of the Wadsworth Atheneum, an organization founded to carry on study in art and to provide an art gallery for Hartford, to forward the work of which Junius Morgan gave $100,000 and J. Pierpont Morgan gave $50,000 many years ago.

The works of art now in the building of the Wadsworth Atheneum are in many instances notable examples of the works of the great masters. Several of the best examples are the contributions of J. Pierpont Morgan.

The Atheneum structure adjoins the new Morgan memorial on the north, and is connected with it through a specially constructed corridor. The Atheneum is a plain building in native granite, while the Morgan Memorial is of Tennessee marble similar to the stone used in Mr. Morgan's library in East Thirty-sixth Street, New York. The connecting corridor, built by Mrs. Samuel Colt as a memorial to the inventor of the Colt revolver, was constructed of stone shading down from the reddish granite to the softer-hued marble, so that there is no clash of colors.

A Historical Location.

If Mr. Morgan's London collection comes here the leaders of social endeavor maintain that it will come into an entirely fitting location, both historically, and because of the company it will join of art collections of similar importance.

There is gathered here for instance the only complete collection of American-made pottery of the colonial period. On the platters are such familiar legends as "Hard Times in Jersey," and "To Elizabeth." There is here the strong box brought to this country by Elder William Brewster, aboard the Mayflower, on the top of which was written out the first governmental charter ever devised for an American commonwealth. It was the agreement under which the pilgrims who came on the Mayflower agreed to govern themselves and act together as a community.

The ground on which the Morgan Memorial Building stands is the ground on which Washington stood in conference with French advisers when he first learned through the capture of Major André that Benedict Arnold had turned traitor at West Point. In an old building, the home of the Rev. Daniel Wadsworth, which was taken down to make room for the Wadsworth Atheneum, was a room on the third floor which was used by Washington for conferences with Lafayette, Rochambeau, and other French advisers through the period of the Revolution. In the Atheneum itself, waiting for transfer to the Morgan Memorial upon its completion, is a brace of pistols presented by Lafayette to Alexander Hamilton when he was a member of Washington's staff.

The paintings, to keep company with which the masterpieces from Europe may be brought here, include a painting of the battle of Trenton by Trumbull, and also famous pictures of the death of Montgomery at the battle of Princeton. There is among the curios the maul with which Abraham Lincoln split rails while he was preparing himself for the Presidency.

The building was not undertaken primarily to afford a memorial to Mr. Morgan's father, but because of a persistent demand for more room to house Hartford's art treasures, which Mr. Morgan decided to recognize by erecting the building. It is actually a new step in the development of the Wadsworth Atheneum. Most conspicuous of [illegible] for the atheneum [illegible] of the plant to [illegible] century ago, has been [illegible] Francis Goodwin. He himself gave heavily toward the building fund, and he put the needs of the atheneum before his relative, Mr. Morgan.

Morgan Provides Income.

One feature connected with the possible decision to bring the London collection here has removed all hesitance about it in the mind of the average taxpayer. When Mr. Morgan came here to attend the dedicatory exercises last Summer he handed to Charles Hopkins Clark, Treasurer, who superintended its construction, a little present in the form of 2,200 shares of the preferred stock of the United States Steel Corporation. This stock produces an annual income of $15,000, which, with other available funds, will provide for the entire cost of maintenance of the structure as a museum.

Mr. Clark made the arrangements by which THE TIMES correspondent, accompanied by H. V. Proskey, secretary to Mayor Cheney, was able to go through all of the galleries, both completed and uncompleted, of the Morgan Memorial Building this afternoon. Mr. Clark, who, among his other achievements, contributed the tariff plank to the Republican platform adopted at Chicago, suggested that it might make "some New Yorkers gasp to learn that such a fine art museum as the Morgan Memorial could exist so far from Fifth Avenue."

The building was found to occupy the length of an entire city block, while in width it covered the south half of a block occupied on the north by the Colt Memorial, the Atheneum, and an annex to the Atheneum. Its eastern entrance is on Prospect Avenue, opposite the Hunt Memorial Building, and the buildings of the Hartford Club and the Elks' Club. A principal entrance facing Main Street on the west is opposite a number of rather shabby buildings, which will soon make way for a large park as a portion of the city's new civic centre.

Great Space Available.

In the buildings connected with the Morgan Memorial were found to be concentrated the Hartford Public Library, the library of the Connecticut Historical Society, and the Watkinson Reference Library, a collection of books which preceded the days of free libraries in Hartford.

As soon as Supt. Alfred B. Clifton threw back the bronze doors of the Morgan Memorial an unbroken vista of 259 feet was disclosed. This was pointed to by Mr. Proskey and by the Superintendent as the only answer needed to the question whether Hartford could adequatley display the old masters among Mr. Morgan's collection of paintings. But there were many other large rooms. On the main floor is the principal exhibit hall, under a glass roof and 100 feet in length by 35 feet in width. It was declared to be larger than any single exhibition room of the Metropolitan Museum. In all 26 ample art galleries were found in the Morgan Memorial, four of them large ones, and the rest of the size of the usual art galleries of the Metropolitan.

On the second floor beneath a glass roof, a space of 15,000 square feet is available for exhibition purposes. In the basement, which has been carried far enough above ground to permit of excellent lighting facilities, arrangements have been made for the display of sculpture and casts.

Directly to the left of the main entrance, in a room which has already been completed, was found the collection of Morgan catalogues, while on the wall hung a portrait of Junius Morgan. In the main corridor a space 20 feet by 20 feet had been reserved for a memorial tablet to Junius Morgan.

It was so arranged that visitors to the museum will walk directly across it. In large bronze letters this simple legend is outlined in the marble floor:

> This building has been erected in loving memory of Junius Spencer Morgan, a native of Massachusetts, a merchant of Hartford from 1836 to 1851, and afterward a merchant of London. Born April 14, 1813; died April 8, 1890.

The bronze letter in the floor is the only thing about the building to suggest its memorial character. In one room on the second floor are hung the rare tapestries comprising Mr. Morgan's principal tapestry collection. They are said to be worth $400,000. In another room is a group of Colonial silverware, and a link from the chain that the colonists stretched across the Hudson as a defense measure against the British fleets during the Revolution.

Except for a group of rooms on the western façade, the building is finished. A force of 400 plasterers was found at work on the second floor and in the basement. The news that Hartford has a chance of obtaining the Morgan London collection had caused Mr. Clark to order work rushed in every corridor and gallery.

Mr. Morgan and Hartford.

The Rev. Francis Goodwin explained at his home to-night to THE TIMES correspondent some of the reasons why a part at least of the Morgan London collection should be placed in Hartford.

"When there grew up an ambition to have a free library," he said, "I went to Mr. Morgan, and he urged me to go to London and see his father. I met J. Pierpont Morgan in London, and he was present at my interview with Junius Morgan. Junius Morgan said he would gladly give $100,000. His son then took me by the arm and said he would add $50,000 to that sum. So that the interest of Mr. Morgan and his father is very well established and attested in the expansion of our work. It would be very natural for him to place here a part of his collection, especially the portion collected in London by his father.

"We realize that New York has the first claim on some of the more famous art objects, and even if we should get them for a year or two we would expect to turn them back to the great city when room could be provided for them. But at the same time I do not like to see priceless miniatures kept in packing cases, as that is harmful to them, and I hope that one collection at least will be unpacked either here or in New York. With the fund provided by Mr. Morgan and his father, our original Atheneum Building was enlarged and remodeled. In the structure he has now added adjoining it a total of $1,000,000 has been expended."

HELD FOR AUTO KILLING.

Driver, Who Ran Down Boy, Admits He Was Unlicensed.

Coroner Jacob Shongut held an inquest yesterday into the death of eight-year-old Theodore Brody, killed Monday evening by an automobile. He held Joseph Ring, the 18-year-old chauffeur, who ran down the boy in East 165th Street, in $2,500 bail for the action of the Grand Jury. No bail was forthcoming and young Ring went to the Tombs.

Ring admitted he had no chauffeur's license, and was merely a washer in the Morris Garage at 1,005 Morris Avenue. He said he had been authorized to take out automobiles when no other chauffeur was available. In this he was corroborated by Jacob Kessler, one of the proprietors of the garage.

Arrange 59th Street Transfers.

The New York Railways Company, the Third Avenue Railway Company, and the Central Park and East River Company informed the Public Service Commission that they had agreed to abide by the agreement by which a modified system of transfers would be exchanged among them along the Fifty-ninth Street line. It is understood that the nickel will be divided on the basis of 2 cents to the crosstown company and 3 cents to the other companies. The Second Avenue Company has not yet been able to complete its consent to the plan, as it is necessary for its receiver to get the assent of the court to the arrangement.

STRIKER INTERMENT HELD UP BY DISPUTE

Wife and Daughter Each Determined on Burial in Trinity Grave She Opened.

RECOURSE TO LAW LIKELY

Mrs. Striker Says Stepdaughter Spirited Dying Man Off to Hospital and Hid His Whereabouts.

The dispute as to which of the two graves opened in Trinity Cemetery—one by the second wife, and the other by the daughter of Ellsworth L. Striker, descendant of one of the oldest families of Manhattan, who died last Friday in Fordham Hospital—shall receive the body is still undecided. The dispute arose between the daughter and the wife immediately after the funeral services had been held on Sunday at the undertaking establishment of A. Eichelberg, 934 Eighth Avenue.

Mrs. Josephine Striker of 110 West 104th Street declared yesterday that it was her husband's last request that he should be buried in the old Striker plot in old Trinity Cemetery, east of Broadway. Mrs. Albert Farrington of 568 West 173d Street, the daughter, maintained, on the other hand, that her father's body should be interred in the plot he had bought in the new cemetery west of Broadway, and in which are the graves of his divorced wife and five of their children. Mrs. Striker and Mrs. Farrington said emphatically that they would not give in to each other, so a settlement apparently will have to be reached by law. Meanwhile the body of Mr. Striker lies in the receiving vault.

Mrs. Striker said that she had brought her husband to New York City about four weeks ago from Mt. Vernon, where she had taken him for the benefit of his health. With their twelve-year-old son they took a small suite of rooms at 910 Columbus Avenue, but on account of her invalid husband, Mrs. Striker explained, she had to look for a more comfortable place. While searching for an apartment, she said, she had left Mr. Striker in the care of his daughter, Mrs. Farrington, because he had pleaded not to be taken to a hospital.

"The whole thing is a trick," said Mrs. Striker. "I left him with his daughter, Marie, with the understanding that she was to take care of him and not send him to a hospital. He had begged not to be left with his daughter any longer than was necessary because her husband, he believed, didn't like him. He said he felt he wouldn't live longer than Thanksgiving Day, and he feared that if his daughter sent him to a hospital it would hasten his death.

"Nevertheless, they shipped him away to a charity hospital, and then they refused to tell me where he was. My son and I called up Marie every day to ask her where he was, so that we could go to see him, but each time she would put us off by saying that he was in a private hospital and under the care of a private physician. They sent him there against his wishes, I know, and kept him there from me merely because they didn't want me to bury him. Why, couldn't I have taken him to a hospital myself as well as they? You see, I left him with his daughter until I could find a place to care for him.

"He was such a gentle and thoughtful man. He used to pet the back of my hand and say, 'Josie, dear, I won't live much longer, and I beg you to see to it that nobody puts me in a hospital!' That's why I left him with Marie.

"Mr. Striker so frequently spoke of the arrangements for his burial that I finally concluded it would be best to send for his daughter and reach some kind of understanding. He had many times expressed his wish to be buried by the side of his favorite brother, Joseph, in the old plot, where his ancestors were buried. He was proud of his name, and he wanted his remains to rest with others of his family who bore it before him. He had said that he bought the plot in the new cemetery for his maternal grandmother, and when his divorced wife was buried there, he told me, he had lost all interest in that burial place. This was all made clear to Marie at a meeting we arranged several weeks ago."

Mrs. Striker declared that she was going to carry out the last request of her husband, and that she was not going to relinquish his body to be interred in the plot with his divorced wife.

DENIES ARMOUR DEFENSE.

Federal Court for Plaintiff in Action for Illness After Eeating Ham.

Armour & Co. have put up in the Federal District Court a defense for an action for damages for injuries arising from the eating of their smoked ham which was infected with trichinae that the Government by its rules and regulations does not require any examination to detect trichinosis in swine, and that the Government Inspectors were not required by the Board of Agriculture to make such tests. They expect to prove that the Government authorities stamped the meat as "inspected and passed."

Judge Noyes struck out yesterday this part of their answer at the request of the plaintiff on the ground that the Secretary of Agriculture has no right to change the law, and that the Federal statute required such examinations to be made. Moreover, even the common law, he said, forbade a manufacturer to market ham or other meat without proper inspection.

The case is being brought by Alfred Heimerdinger, one of the family of Edward C. Heimerdinger, the dress manufacturer. Four suits have been instituted by the family, and a servant in their employ is also suing. Two of these cases are ready for trial.

FOUND 605 ORPHANS HOMES LAST YEAR

Children's Aid Society Also Reports Care and Attention for Thousands of Others.

FARM LIFE RECOMMENDED

As a Cure for Future Gangsters—Funds Needed for Development of Industrial Training.

The annual meeting of the Children's Aid Society was held at the Union Trust Company's offices yesterday, and the work of the organization for the year was reviewed. According to the sixtieth annual report read yesterday the society in the last year placed 605 orphans and homeless children in family homes; assisted 596 boys and girls with their parents to emigrate; returned 594 runaway boys and girls to their relatives; kept 2,296 boys and girls in family homes under its eyes; trained 1,059 at its Farm School, or a daily average of 74; sheltered 7,619 boys and girls at its lodging houses, or a nightly average of 471; sheltered 673 homeless mothers and children, and enrolled 11,923 children in its Industrial Schools.

Relief was given to 5,935 children in their homes and 408 were treated in the school dental clinics; 8,591 received Summer outings of from one to ten weeks at various country homes of the society and 12,930 women and children received daily outings at the seaside and in the country. All told, there were 21,531 beneficiaries of the society's work in the past year, including 2,780 children treated by its Sick Children's Mission.

The report contains figures showing the degree to which its work among children has enabled them to raise themselves in communities throughout the country. It has had one Governor of a State, two Congressmen, and one Justice of the Supreme Court.

Special success was met with in the placing of unfortunate children in farming homes, it was pointed out, and great hopes were entertained of destroying, in this way, the tendency of children in the tenement districts to grow up into gangsters and vagrants. The report says:

> We are convinced that nothing done for society has been of greater value than returning to the soil the many thousands of homeless and friendless boys, many of whom but for this society would have become gangsters and vagrants. We feel confident that we can meet this problem so far as relates to the Teutonic races, but the recent immigration presents difficulties we cannot cope with in this simple way. Many young men of Jewish faith from Russia and the Italians from Sicily and Calabria do not readily adopt our customs and ways and decline to accept work on farms. These, through their desire to remain in the large cities, soon develop idle habits and will graduate into the criminal classes. Unless continuous effort is made toward fitting these boys and young men for honest labor the outlook for them will be dark.
> Recognizing this grave situation, the friends of the Children's Aid Society long ago established evening classes and social clubs for these older boys and girls, and through its industrial schools reaches out to the younger children as well. The solution of this problem lies, we believe, along this line of endeavor.

In enumerating the needs of the society the report mentions that of a new building in Little Italy to house industrial school classes of the children of Italian immigrants. A committee of the organization has already succeeded in raising among former pupils of its Italian school $14,330 for this purpose, and it already has some land at 114th Street and First Avenue that could be used for the building. The report points out another need.

> Friends of the society have made it a yearly practice to contribute to the placing of orphan children in good family homes in the country, where many of them are legally adopted. Fifty dollars enables us to place a child in wholesome surroundings of this kind where he will have a chance to become a good and useful citizen. The society's agents visit the children and carefully guard their interests. Reports of a child's progress are made to his individual patron. Twelve hundred and fifty dollars given in trust to the Children's Aid Society's emigration fund will provide an income to send one homeless child each year to a good home.

The following officers were elected at the meeting yesterday: President—William Church Osborn; Vice President—William Douglas Sloane; Treasurer—Edwin G. Merrill; Secretary—C. Loring Brace. Arthur Curtiss James, William H. Wheelock, and Eugene H. Pool, M. D., were elected Trustees to serve until 1915. The annual reports of the Secretary and Treasurer were also read.

TAKE CRIPPLE FOR ROBBERY.

Harry Magnus, 17 Years Old, Arrested for Elevated Railroad Raid.

Detectives Cohen and Lonergan arrested Harry Magnus, a cripple, at 36 Clinton Street yesterday as the assailant of David von Bromen, the ticket agent of the Second Avenue Elevated Railroad, at Grand and Allen Streets, who was beaten and robbed Monday night.

"Don't beat me. I did it. I'll take a plea," cried Magnus when the police found him.

They hurried him to Gouverneur Hospital, where von Bromen identified him.

Magnus, who is only 17 years old, told the police he made the attack because he wanted a new bicycle. He said he had gone on the platform to attack the day ticket agent, but dared not do so "because he was too big."

In the struggle Monday evening, in which Von Bromen saved $90 of his own money hanging in his coat and $70 in the company's open safe, the robber, who got only $4.05 from the cash drawer, dropped his cap. This clue led to the arrest of Magnus.

VERDICT AGAINST ADRIANCE.

The trial of the $50,000 alienation suit brought by James P. Berney, a machinist, against Benjamin Adriance, the Brooklyn manufacturer, was terminated yesterday when the jury which has been hearing the case before Supreme Court Justice Blanchard returned a verdict of $2,500 for the plaintiff.

Berney married the present Mrs. Adriance in 1883. After nineteen years his wife left him and procured a divorce in South Dakota, shortly afterward marrying Adriance, whom she had met several years before. Berney alleged that his conjugal unhappiness dated from the acquaintance of Adriance and that it was the future husband who supplied the money for the procurement of the decree in South Dakota.

It was ruled in court that in New York State the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Adriance was void and the woman was still legally Mrs. Berney, although she had lived with her second husband since 1910.

For the sake of thrashing out the question of the legal status of Mr. and Mrs. Berney, their counsel, G. O. Redington, announced that he would enter an appeal. C. R. Bradbury of 51 Chambers Street, the attorney for Mr. Berney, announced that he was satisfied with the verdict.

DIED TO ESCAPE BEING ALONE

Husband and Children Busy, Mrs. Druckerman Killed Herself.

Mrs. Sarah Druckerman, wife of Simon Druckerman, committed suicide by drinking carbolic acid in her rooms at 212 East Broadway yesterday. Mrs. Druckerman was despondent because her husband's book business at 50 Canal Street and at Third Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street kept him and their two children away all day. She had said she was "going mad of lonesomeness."

Mr. Druckerman said he had sat up all night with his wife Monday night and had spent part of the day with her to cheer her up. He had thought she was in a happier mood when he left her to go to business.

SHOT BY REJECTED SUITOR.

After Killing Her a Fellow Employe Put a Bullet in His Own Head.

After finishing luncheon with three girl chums, Margaret Schrader, 19 years old, of 17 Madison Street, Guttenberg, N. J., employed as a packer in the candy factory at 416 West Forty-fifth Street, went to the washroom on the third floor, but when she had not returned twenty minutes after the luncheon hour was over the girls became worried and reported the fact to Supt. Lazare Rorthuro.

On investigation the Superintendent found the door securely fastened on the inside with a rope. With the help of several men employed in the factory he forced the door open far enough to cut the rope, and then sent in a hurry call for an ambulance and the police.

On the floor, side by side and face to face, lay the dead body of the girl and the unconscious form of Michael Graffeo, her rejected suitor, both covered with blood. Between them on the floor was a revolver. The girl had been shot through the right temple. The man had shot himself through the left ear. A knife with a tapering blade five inches long accounted for a gash in the girl's breast.

Dr. Vernon L. Oler, arriving in the automobile ambulance of the Polyclinic Hospital, dragged the man and the girl out of the three foot by five room. One glance told him that Miss Schrader was past help, and he hurried Graffeo in a dying condition to the hospital. The girl's body was removed to the morgue.

Police investigation by Lieut. Kerr and Detective Burgess pointed to unrequited love as the motive for the crime.

According to Miss Schrader's friends—Tessie McDonald, Elizabeth Tolan, and Caroline Adams—Graffeo, who was 29 years old and described by his employers as a model employe, always neat and respectful, had been infatuated with the girl, who was unusually beautiful, with light, wavy brown hair and deep blue eyes, ever since she went to work in the factory, about a year ago.

At first, it was said, she did not take his attentions seriously until finally he became insistent. Last Saturday night he made a final appeal, and on being rejected by the girl who, it was said, knew that her parents would not approve of her marriage with an Italian, Graffeo told her the should marry him or no one. The girl had lived in terror of him ever since, but, unfortunately, failed to make a complaint against him as her girl friends urged.

Graffeo lived with his brother John in the rear of the barber shop in the basement of 504 West Forty-ninth Street, but little was known of him there. He died at 8:55 last night without having regained consciousness.

ALLEGED BOY SLAYER HERE.

Said to Have Made Damaging Admissions About Written Cards.

J. Frank Hickey, who was arrested last week at Toms River, N. J., charged with the murder of Joseph Josephs, a little boy, at Lackawanna, a steel-smelting suburb of Buffalo, was brought to New York Police Headquarters last night by District Attorney Wesley E. Dudley of Erie County and Police Chief Ray Gilson of Lackawanna. He was lodged in the Mulberry Street Station over night, and will be taken to Buffalo on the Empire State Express to-day.

Inspector Faurot brought Police Captain Arthur Carey, and Police Capt. Price, who, as detectives, investigated a similar murder of a boy in Central Park a number of years ago, to see Hickey. Capt. Carey recognized Hickey as a man detained at Buffalo in connection with that case and later released. Hickey said he remembered seeing Capt. Carey.

District Attorney Dudley said Hickey had made damaging admissions in connection with postal cards written to John Jepson and John Hopkins. These letters were called to the attention of Tallmadge Blass, Superintendent of the Lackawanna Steel Plant, as similar in handwriting to the anonymous cards received by the Lackawanna police and reproduced photographically in Buffalo newspapers in which the writer accused himself of the Josephs, the Central Park, and other similar murders of small boys.

WEDDING NIGHT IN CELL.

Couple Locked Up for Assaulting a Policeman at Celebration.

Antony Phillips and his bride of a few hours spent their wedding night in the Greenpoint Avenue Police Station. They were charged with having assaulted Policeman John E. Solon, warrant officer of the Manhattan Avenue Court. The policeman was looking Monday night for Paul Byalt of 43 Box Street, Williamsburg, and was referred to 54 Box Street, where Byalt was a guest at the Phillips wedding festivities. When Policeman Solon attempted to arrest Byalt the bridal couple, assisted by Michael Hones, another guest, are alleged to have turned on the policeman, beat him up badly, and threw him downstairs.

Solon blew his whistle and Policeman Thull came to his rescue. After another fight, which terminated only when the police drew their guns and fired into the floor, the newly married couple, Byalt, and Hones were arrested. Byalt is charged by Benjamin Teerda, a neighbor, with having assaulted him.

DONOHUE AUTO KILLS BOY.

Melbert Law, the 9-year-old son of William Law of Avenue C and Third Street, Bayonne, was playing in front of his home yesterday afternoon with other boys of the neighborhood, when Dr. Lucius S. Donohue, leader of one faction of the Democratic Party in Bayonne, came bowling along the street at the wheel of his automobile. He was on his way to visit a patient.

The boys scattered from his path, but the little Law boy became confused. He dodged directly in front of the machine, which knocked him down and ran over him. He died before Dr. Donohue could get him to a hospital. The doctor was arrested on a charge of manslaughter, but was released when the police decided that the accident had been unavoidable.

TOMKINS GIVES PLANS FOR WEST SIDE PIERS

LENGTH TO BE 1,200 FEET

He Wants to Spend $84,389,500—Mitchel's Alternate Plan More Likely to be Recommended.

Dock Commissioner Calvin Tomkins submitted to the Board of Estimate yesterday his plans for building new piers along the North River to accommodate new passenger steamships. The Commissioner presented eleven different estimates, but favored one which provide for the construction of six whole piers and two half piers between West Forty-fourth and West Fifty-seventh Streets, the piers to be 1,200 feet long and 130 feet wide and the slips to be 350 feet wide. The Commissioner is of the opinion, however, that the best results will be obtained by extending the area of pier construction to between West Thirty-eighth and West Fifty-seventh Streets. The entire cost is figured at $84,389,500; immediate expenditures to be $47,474,000 and deferred or future expenditures to $36,915,500.

The Board of Estimate will consider the plans to-day, but it is not thought that it will favor the Tomkins plan, but rather the plans for west side terminals and piers submitted by John Purroy Mitchel, Chairman of the Board's Committee on Terminal Improvements. The Mitchel plan provides for the modification of the pier headline in the North River, between Thirtieth Street and the Battery, and for the construction of long piers between West Forty-fourth and West Fifty-sixth Streets.

Commissioner Tomkins suggests that if his Study No. 2 is adopted, dredging should be done to a plane of forty-five feet, the cost of which he estimates at $32,756,146. The Commissioner said that he was preparing a new layout for submission to the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund for long piers in the district between Thirty-eighth and Fifty-seventh Streets, subject as to precise location to the direction of the Mayor.

For piers between Forty-fourth and Fifty-seventh Streets, the Commissioner offers these suggestions:

> Study No. 1 provides for the construction of eight piers, each 1,600 feet long and 125 feet wide, with slips 290 feet wide, located between West Forty-fourth and West Fifty-seventh Streets. The estimated cost of work under this plan is $22,041,260 with dredging to 40 feet; $23,737,260 with dredging to 45 feet, and $25,433,260 with dredging to 50 feet.
> Study No. 3 includes six whole piers, 1,500 by 130 feet, with slips 350 feet wide, and two half piers, at $46,060,525, $48,460,525, or $50,860,535.
>
> Study No. 4 includes three whole piers, 1,200 by 100 feet, with slips 300 feet wide, and two half piers, at $14,463,750, $15,040,350, or
> Study No. 5 includes the construction of two whole piers, 1,200 by 150 feet each, with slips 350 feet wide, and two half piers, at $15,057,255, $15,390,255, or $15,723,255.
>
> Study No. 6 includes the construction of three whole piers, at 1,500 by 100 feet, with slips 300 feet wide, and two half piers, at $22,435,940, $23,344,940, or $24,253,940.
> Study No. 7 includes the construction of two whole piers, at 1,500 by 150 feet, with slips 360 feet wide, and two half piers, at $22,482,150, $23,395,150, or $24,808,150.

The other studies relate to the construction of piers from West Thirty-eighth to West Forty-ninth Street. In this section rock excavation is not so difficult, but there are leases to be considered.

TAUGHT TO IMITATE HAWTHORNE'S HAND

BUT HE GUARDED CHECKBOOK

Before Judge Hough in the Federal District Court yesterday Assistant United States District Attorney Thompson opened the case of the Government against Julian Hawthorne, the writer; Josiah Quincy, ex-Mayor of Boston and ex-Secretary of State under President Cleveland; Dr. W. J. Morton, and Albert Freeman for using the mails to exploit certain mines in Ontario which, it is alleged, were worthless. In their campaign they obtained $3,000,000 from investors, it is charged. It was noted that as they took their seats neither Hawthorne nor Morton, though they were friendly enough toward each other, paid any attention to Quincy and Freeman.

When the court convened there were still some peremptory challenges for talesmen left to either side. Several of these were used, and when the jury was finally sworn in it consisted of John McGoun, real estate, 590 East 167th Street; Daniel F. Twomey, agent, 730 East 168th Street; Frank E. La Compte, dry goods, 130 Riverside Drive; George W. Jump, lumber, 175 West 102d Street; Arba C. Thomas, Secretary, 313 West Fifty-seventh Street; William C. O'Brien, retired, 7 East Thirtieth Street; Augustus May, broker, 15 West 102d Street; A. J. Bien, braids, Sherman Square Hotel; John M. King, President, 601 West 168th Street; Joseph Citron, printer, 63 East 106th Street; George A. Legg, flowers, The Wyoming, and Michael Kehoe, retired, 36 Sixth Avenue.

In explaining the Government's case to the jury Mr. Thompson said that Freeman and Quincy conceived the scheme of obtaining barren mining claims close to the productive mines of Cobalt. Dr. Morton, he declared, spent the Summer of 1907 in Ontario, and was carried away by the glitter of the mining discoveries and gathered twenty-one claims which he believed would prove valuable. He invested $14,000, and then realized that he had made a poor bargain. He went to one well-known firm to get them to finance his mines, and when it refused resorted to Freeman. It was Morton who introduced Hawthorne to Freeman and Quincy.

Mr. Thompson went on to explain how a force of girls in the offices of the Hawthorne companies were trained to imitate Hawthorne's handwriting so that they could send out what purported to be personal letters to his friends. They also wrote letters which were said to have come to Hawthorne from a mining man named Brooks, which depicted Cobalt conditions in glowing terms.

"There is a Brooks," said Mr. Thompson, "but he never wrote to Hawthorne. He never was in a mine except once, when at the age of 5 he was taken into a coal mine, and he never was in Cobalt. He was a clerk in Freeman's employ until Freeman made him Vice President of the Temagami Company."

It was represented, Mr. Thompson went on to say, that not a dollar would be charged for brokerage, although the Continental Syndicate, Freeman's personal corporation, had already underwritten all the stock. Literature was sent out to the prospective purchasers with what were supposed to be reports from competent engineers, but the language of these, Mr. Thompson declared, the Government would show was almost identical with that used by Hawthorne and Freeman in other lines. Moreover, the Government was prepared to prove, he said, that some of the very engineers thus quoted were regarded by the defendants themselves as incompetent and that one of them was referred to in a letter as a "crook."

Mrs. Zuella Platt of 300 West 109th Street was the first witness called. She was manager of the circulation department of Freeman's offices on the fifth floor of the Cambridge Building, 334 Fifth Avenue, from April to November, 1908. Freeman and Hawthorne had offices in the same floor, and Morton, she said, was frequently in and out. She has eight assistants, some of whom signed letters with Hawthorne's name after they had been multigraphed. At the period of greatest activity as many as 10,000 letters were sent out in a single day.

In cross-examination the witness declared that Hawthorne saw his name being signed to the letters, and then Thomas M. Proctor of counsel for the defense said:

"I trust you did not leave the employ of Mr. Freeman for any difficulty."

"I trust you don't consider that a difficulty," replied counsel.

Olga McKenzie, who worked under Mrs. Platt and after she had left had charge of the office, gave much the same testimony.

"Did Mr. Hawthorne ever comment on the way the girls were imitating his signature?" she was asked.

"Yes; he remarked once that he wouldn't want to leave a check book about among them."

William G. Burns, an incorporator of corporations, who had an office adjoining that of Quincy at 27 State Street, Boston, in 1908, was the last witness examined yesterday. He described the incorporation of the Temagami-Cobalt Company for Quincy and the way in which he acted as President, Secretary, and Treasurer till he turned the corporation over to Quincy.

Mr. Thompson wanted to find out if he was ever an officer of the Continental Syndicate, but he could not remember it. Shown his signature to a proxy signed "Continental Syndicate, Ltd., W. G. Burns, Secretary," he replied.

THE DECEMBER CENTURY Contains in its new "After-the-War" Series
The Impeachment of Andrew Johnson

THE CAUSES OF THE IMPEACHMENT
By HARRISON GRAY OTIS
Editor Los Angeles Times, Veteran of the Civil War, Brevet Major-General in the war with Spain, and an active journalist in the contest he describes.

EMANCIPATION AND IMPEACHMENT
By GEN. JOHN B. HENDERSON
The Senator who proposed the 13th Amendment (abolishing slavery) and one of the seven who thwarted the attempt to impeach Johnson.

The New York Sun said of the first article in the "After-the-War" Series (November CENTURY):

"Would that all political history could be written with the verve, the wit, the straightforward, devil-may-care cussedness and the Washingtonian veracity which distinguish Colonel Henry Watterson's reminiscences in THE CENTURY MAGAZINE on the subject of the nomination of Horace Greeley. It would then be a true delight to look backward, instead of being so often a bore. The two brief extracts which appear elsewhere are printed by the Sun mainly as an incentive to the discriminating to procure and enjoy the entire text of this work of genius."

Here is the story of the attempted "recall" of a President, told in a way that will bring it before the readers of to-day as if it had happened yesterday. It is one of a great series of articles which is just beginning in THE CENTURY, written by famous American editors most of whom were actors in the dramas they describe, with supplemental articles by other men who took part in the events.

"These papers promise to be to the history of the period since the Civil War what THE CENTURY'S famous Civil War papers were to the history of the Great Conflict itself."

"Personal narratives that make the most interesting side-lights on history."

The above is only one of many features of a strong Christmas number, containing exquisite illustrations in color and tint, good stories, and many striking articles.

You can hardly afford to be without THE CENTURY in 1913. New yearly subscribers who begin with this December number CAN HAVE NOVEMBER FREE by mentioning it, and so get Henry Watterson's article referred to in the New York Sun notice above. Remit $4.00 to the publishers,

Orientals

The Largest Specialty Rug House in America.

Thanksgiving Rugs

At the mention of Thanksgiving, one thinks of New England and the shrewd economy that made the New Englanders of old devout in their yearly thanks.

In no other portion of the country are good Oriental rugs more appreciated, because of their ENDURING VALUE as well as their richness in decoration.

Oriental rugs are things for family discussion, family decision and family pride.

They belong to the house, or to the room, rather than to the individual.

They quickly become close, integral parts of HOME, as do the heirloom furniture and the paintings handed down from one generation to another.

Moved to the new rooftree of a younger member of the family, they conjure up loving recollections of the older home.

The spirit of Thanksgiving is in them.

Wild's Orientals are not purchased as makeshift floor-coverings, to serve until the family fortunes improve, when something better is to be substituted.

You may select a $100 Wild's Oriental now, and ten years from now a $1,000 Wild's Oriental may take its place—but BOTH rugs will be at home in the same house.

The $100 rug may then be used in one room and the $1,000 rug in another, with perfect taste and propriety.

Or the $100 rug, cared for as it will be in the average home, will still have its full value at the end of that time—in fact, will be actually improved—and may be used in part purchase of the $1,000 rug.

Of what other $100 floor covering will this be true?

To make sure you are getting this enduring value, you must purchase your Oriental rug from a house whose permanence in the rug business is assured.

Sixty years spent in bringing Wild's Orientals to their present recognized pre-eminence is THE BEST assurance that when you are ready for your $1,000 rug, your $100 Wild's Oriental will have its value.

There is a gratifying assortment of smaller rugs, at $15, $20, $25 and up to $100 in this collection.

INVOLVES THE POLICE IN THIEVES' ESCAPE

PAID FOR THEIR BAIL BOND

Jacob Goldberg Says a Lieutenant Gave the Instructions That Enabled Burglars to "Make a Getaway."

The story of a burglary that occurred nearly three years ago; that stirred up the Governors of two States and the District Attorneys of half a dozen counties; that caused the censure of a Magistrate by the Appellate Division, and made trouble in the Police Department, was told over again yesterday before the Curran Investigating Committee with new features added.

On Feb. 26, 1910, the jewelry store of Samuel E. Ullian, at 1,118 Washington Street, Boston, was robbed of 3,650 pieces of jewelry valued at $15,000. On March 27 of the same year the police of this city notified Ullian that three men had been arrested. On one of them had been found $2,600 in cash, several pawn tickets for jewelry, and a steamship ticket to Austria. The three prisoners were Harris Rothstein, alias Smith; Jacob G. Goldberg, known as "Itsky," and Joseph Goldberg, known as "Joe the Red."

Ullian hurried to New York. He met Lieut. William Duggan and Detectives Val O'Farrell and William Kinstler at Police Headquarters. Ullian said he had expected to find these policemen anxious to investigate the burglary, and was surprised to discover a marked coldness on their part. According to Ullian he had great difficulty in gaining the permission of the detectives to let him help them in their work.

The detectives didn't seem to want Ullian to go about with them, and when the prisoners were arraigned in court the victim of the burglary was there on his own account and not by invitation. He said that after the prisoners had been held, each in $10,000 bail, and were about to be committed, a lawyer, Moses A. Sachs, bustled into court and said he appeared for the prisoners. Sachs found bail for them. The bondsmen were David T. Gluck and Harry Scherry. It was said that this bail bond was signed by Magistrate Barlow. When the prisoners fled and the bond was forfeited the property pledged yielded only $139. It was Barlow's carelessness in this matter that brought the Magistrate a censure from the Appellate Division.

Affidavit from a Convict.

Ullian's story yesterday retraced all of the devious threads that were spun when the story was new. The most interesting development of the day, however, was an affidavit made on Nov. 18 by Jacob Goldberg, who is in the Massachusetts State Prison at Charlestown. Goldberg said the only part he had in the burglary was to receive some of the stolen property. He said Rothstein was one of the burglars and that the others were a man named Kraus, alias "Krausosky;" David Cohen, and Isaac Rosenberg. Kraus turned State's witness.

The affidavit was obtained from Goldberg by Louis Lande, one of Emory R. Buckner's assistants. Lande also procured affidavits from other persons who participated in the crime. All of them, it was said yesterday, corroborated each other.

"About two weeks after the burglary," runs the Goldberg affidavit, "I was arrested by Lieut. Duggan. Rothstein and Joe Goldberg were arrested at the same time by other officers. Duggan told me he was a detective from headquarters. On the way to the Delancey Street Station Rothstein offered Duggan some money. Duggan asked him how much money he had and Rothstein said he had a couple of hundred dollars. Duggan said:

"'You fool, why didn't you come over to me? You knew where to find me. I was sending a man to look after you. I had a good $6,000 job for you somewhere on Broadway.'

"When we got to the station Duggan searched me and took the jewelry and everything. I had bought the jewelry from Kraus. Duggan found on me two watches, several pins, a chain, and two or three rings. Rothstein and Joe Goldberg also had a lot of jewelry, and Rothstein had a big pocketbook. There was nearly $200 in it. Rothstein said to Duggan:

"'I want you to do me a favor. I have got some jewelry in my safe and I want you to go down there and get it and give it to my partner. I don't dare trust my wife. She would "holler about it" and then we would be lost.'

"Duggan said he would do it and Rothstein gave him the combination of the safe. In about an hour and a half Duggan came back and said everything was all right and that the jewelry had been sent away to Rothstein's partner."

Mr. Buckner called the special attention of the committee to this statement. It had come out in preceding examinations that Duggan had found the combination of the safe to be wrong and that he could not open it. It also appeared that when he got from Rothstein another combination the safe had been opened. It had been intimated that this safe held the greater part of the jewelry taken from Ullian's store.

"The next day," continued the affidavit, "we were put in a patrol wagon and taken to Headquarters. Rothstein asked Duggan what he had been arrested for and Duggan replied:

"I learned that you people 'pulled off a job' in Boston and you didn't come to me. When you came to New York you didn't have sense enough to come to me. If you want me to do business I will send Sachs, and whatever he says, you should do.

Saw Some Jewelry Turned In.

"Rothstein told Duggan that if he wanted $200 he should take it, but Duggan said he couldn't let us go for that. When we got to Headquarters Duggan gave all the jewelry he had taken from us to somebody at the desk. On the way back to the cells Rothstein told me Duggan wanted $300 and that Sachs would come. A little while afterward Sachs did come and Rothstein asked him how much he wanted for all of us and Sachs said:

"'I want $500. You know I don't have all the money for myself. I have to give some of it to the man who sent me here.'"

Goldberg told of the trouble they had in raising the money. Then, regarding the release on bail, the affidavit ran:

"Sachs took us across the street from Jefferson Market and into a saloon. Sachs said he wanted some security to be sure we would not skip our bail, and he told Joe Goldberg that he wanted the money he had in the bank. Joe said he already had given $500, and Sachs told us that was all right and that we would not lose the money. When we came out of the saloon Sachs told my wife to have me go away as quickly as possible."

Then Goldberg told of going to Canada, and from there to Europe.

Ullian's testimony was given before this affidavit was read. A smile ran around the room when he told of his efforts to get the jewelry found on the prisoners and the $2,600. Mr. Ullian said all he got was the pawn tickets, and that he had to pay $26 to get back $60 worth of the $15,000 worth of jewelry he had lost.

The hearing will be resumed to-day.

FEW ELECTION VIOLATIONS.

Mayor Glad to Note Only Three Were Held Out of Sixty-seven Arrests.

Mayor Gaynor wrote to Police Commissioner Waldo yesterday commenting upon the Commissioner's statement that of the sixty-seven persons arrested on Election Day only three were held for trial. This is his letter:

City of New York,
Office of the Mayor,
Nov. 26, 1912.

Sir: I am now in receipt from you of full returns of arrests made on last Election Day for alleged violations of the election law. It appears, therefrom, that in all sixty-seven persons were arrested, namely, twenty-six on warrants, thirty-two without warrants, and nine were summoned. It further appears therefrom that all were discharged after a hearing by the Magistrates except three, who were held for trial. This shows how honest and orderly the elections in this city are, and it is not unusual at all. I notice that all of the thirty-two who were arrested without warrants were discharged. This rather shows that the police were too free in making arrests without warrants. Not one whom they arrested without warrant was held. Of all days in the year, each citizen is a sovereign on Election Day. He performs an act of sovereignty, and should not be interfered with without cause.

It is also plain from the figures that warrants were altogether too easily obtained, since of the twenty-six thus arrested, only three were held by the Magistrates. And of the nine summoned all were discharged by the Magistrates. It is also very gratifying to know that no disorder, but the contrary, resulted from not permitting the police to stand in the polling places or in the doorways thereof, as used to be the case, but that the conduct of the elections was left to the election officers who are appointed by law for that purpose. The sole duty of the police is to maintain peace and order at the polls. They have no right to interfere with any one while voting or prevent any one from voting. The law has not delegated that power to them, and nothing but growing abuse could result from the exercise of that power, as past experience fully shows. Very truly yours,

W. J. GAYNOR, Mayor.

R. Waldo, Esq., Commissioner of Police.

Acting upon advice from the Mayor, Commissioner Waldo ordered the police to keep out of the polling places on Election Day unless they were called in by the inspectors to make an arrest.

SERGT. LAUGHLIN REDUCED.

Now a Patrolman on New Civil Service Recommendation.

Sergt. Michael J. Laughlin of the Elizabeth Street Station was reduced yesterday to the grade of patrolman by Commissioner Waldo at the suggestion of the Civil Service Commission. This is the second time McLaughlin has been set down. The first time was by Commissioner Cropsey, who heard charges against him for loafing in a stable when he should have been on duty. Commissioner Waldo submitted the case to the Civil Service Commission, which looked into the matter, and recommended that McLaughlin be restored to his old grade.

A few weeks ago the McLaughlin matter came up before the Curran Investigating Committee. This brough a recent recommendation from the Civil Service Commission which resulted in setting McLaughlin down again a step in the ranks.

SELESKE FOUND GUILTY.

Former Detective Sergeant Is Convicted of Extortion.

Robert E. Seleske, formerly a Detective Sergeant of the Stagg Street Station, Brooklyn, and eighteen years on the police force, was convicted last night of extortion by a jury before Justice Crane, in the Supreme Court. A recommendation for mercy was suggested.

Seleske was indicted jointly with Detective James J. Doyle. Doyle is out on bail awaiting trial. The complainant was Victor Filmon, a chauffeur of 27 St. Mark's Place, Manhattan. Filmon said he was accused by the detectives of knowing something about a robbery at 155 McKibbin Street last July, and was told if he did not put up some money he would be arrested. He asserted that he gave $32 to the detectives, and was told he must raise $100. He complained to Commissioner Waldo, and Lieut. Dan Costigan was assigned to investigate the case.

Filmon was told to keep his appointment with Seleske, and $100 in marked bills was given to him to pass to the officer. On Oct. 21 Seleske met Filmon at the Grand Street Ferry, and the two walked a short distance, when they met Doyle, who left them shortly afterward. Filmon and Seleske went on, and the former waved a handkerchief, the signal agreed upon between him and Costigan that the money had been passed. Costigan then appeared and arrested Seleske, but no money was found on the prisoner when he was searched at the Stagg Street Station.

Both Seleske and Doyle, who was arrested the day after, were later dismissed from the Police Department by Commissioner Waldo.

LAST HOE BOOK AT AUCTION.

The sale of the miscellaneous books, belonging to the estate of Robert Hoe, but not forming a part of the Hoe library, was concluded at the Anderson Auction Co.'s rooms yesterday afternoon. The 202 lots sold brought the small total of $780.65, making the total for the two days $1,927.10. The highest price yesterday was $27 for "Fu Gaku Hiyaka Kei," ("One Hundred Views of Fuji,") by Hokusai, the famous Japanese artist, who was known as "the marvelous old man, painting mad." The work is in three parts, original limp covers, and was published "in the Tempo Period" (Circa 1830.) It was bought on order.

F. S. Ferguson, who has represented Bernard Quaritch of London, during the last two weeks at the sale of Part IV. of the library, sailed on the Mauretania early this morning. He takes with him about $23,000 worth of Hoe books, representing his purchases in Part IV. He brought over with him some of the many treasures from Mr. Quaritch's collection, and disposed of the greater part of them during his sojourn here.

FIRE RESCUES BY MOTORMAN.

Special to The New York Times.

PASSAIC, N. J., Nov. 26.—Making his last trip early this morning, Thomas A. Tuffnell, motorman on a White Line trolley bound for the car barns, noticed smoke issuing from the roof of a house at 28 Russell Street, Clifton. He stopped the car and, grabbing his crowbar, ran to the building. He broke down the front door with the bar and awoke the family of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Libak with his cries.

Unaided, he carried out six children who were asleep on the second floor. Satisfied that everybody was safe, Tuffnell went back to his car and continued on his way. The house was destroyed.

GRANT ESTATE $6,761,651.

An accounting of the estate of Hugh J. Grant, once Mayor of New York, was filed yesterday in the Surrogates' Court by John M. Bowers and Julie M. Grant. They reported that property valued at $8,762,142.58 came into their hands in November, 1910, and that this grew to $9,117,999.57. They have paid out, they reported, $825,767.08, including $687,348.07 to beneficiaries of Mr. Grant's will, and had in their hands on Nov. 20 $6,761,651.27. From the principal account they report that $800,000 was paid to Mrs. Grant.

ONE 'SERVIAN PRINCE' A PLAIN AMERICAN

HE IS "JIMMY" ANDREWS

Chief Claim to Fame So Far Found In Secret Marriage 30 Years Ago to Charles Fargo's Daughter.

There was much surprise yesterday in Serb circles here and among those who had been of the fashionable Summer colony at Amagansett, L. I., when it was reported that Prince Stefan Nemanjich-Dushanjich, who had been carrying on a lecturing campaign ostensibly for the Servian-American Red Cross Society, and who built a fine Summer cottage overlooking Neapeague Beach in 1910, and mingled in the social life there, was neither Servian nor a Prince, but plain James Curtis Butler Andrews, better known as "Jimmy" and "Alphabet" Andrews, who achieved considerable notoriety in the public prints by secretly marrying a daughter of Charles Fargo of Chicago thirty years ago.

Prof. Michael I. Pupin of Columbia University, who, with other Servian authorities in this city, had denounced as bogus the "Servian Prince's" pretensions to nobility, learned yesterday what purported to be a history of Prince Stefan Nemanjich-Dushanjich. According to this account, he was a son of the late James Andrews, whose ancestors fought in the Revolutionary War, and from whom he inherited a large fortune. He got his degree and his nickname of "Alphabet" Andrews at Williams College, where he was considered a bright student. Soon afterward he broke into print with Miss Fargo of Chicago. He got further notoriety by shooting a man for ogling from a window at a woman companion with whom Andrews was dining in a restaurant.

Not long after the birth of the first child, Mrs. Andrews obtained a divorce. Andrews soon afterward married his stenographer, with whom, and their three sons and one daughter, he lives now at the Touraine Apartments, 23 Clinton Street, Brooklyn.

They first appeared at Amagansett in 1906, when Andrews rented a cottage of Rossiter Johnson, of 3 West Eighty-seventh Street. Around them was an air of mystery that was not lifted when the Andrews suddenly departed, leaving many gossiping neighbors and many disappointed and clamorous tradesmen. They returned in 1909, however, when Andrews paid all his debts, and enlightened his neighbors by announcing that he was really Prince Stefan Nemanjich-Dushanjich of Rashka, a lineal descendant of their Imperial Highnesses James Stefan Basil and James Basil Stefan, and a son of Her Royal Highness Konstantia-Marja, these being sovereigns of all the Servian lands and sea coasts, conquerors and sovereigns of all the Bulgars, seigneurs and protectors of Nissa and Ipek, and a good deal besides. That brought them into the centre of social prominence.

Prof. Pupin said yesterday he had seen a copy of a pompous and title-heavy document drawn up when, on July 26, 1910, an imposing array of Servian clergymen and Greek-Catholic Church dignitaries, including the Right Rev. Raphael, Bishop of Brooklyn; the Right Rev. Alexander, Coadjutor to His Grace the Most Rev. Platon, Archbishop of North America and the Aleutian Islands, the Arch-Priest Hotovitsky, dean of the Orthodox Russian Cathedral of St. Nicholas, and the Arch-Priest Methodius, were induced to journey to Clinton Hall, in Easthampton, L. I., and celebrate in great style a pontificial mass in memory of the lamented, but now declared, non-existent royal ancestors of "Prince" Stefan. That gave him the hallmark of social distinction among his neighbors.

His glory waned when Mulford & Parsons, grocers, sued him for $500, and Deputy Sheriff Sylvester Kelsey, deputed to serve the papers, was met at the door of the princely cottage by an ungentle bulldog and one of the junior princes, with the announcement that the prince-father and prince-mother were in Europe. Last Winter a trust company foreclosed on the cottage a $6,000 mortgage, and the place was sold.

It was not until he bobbed again into the limelight as an agitator for a Servian Red Cross Fund that the suspicions of the Serbs were aroused.

UKIYO-YE PAINTINGS SHOWN.

Chinese Carpets Also in American Art Association's Galleries.

At the galleries of the American Art Association is an exhibition of tapestries, Persian rugs, and Chinese carpets which happily opens the season in the revised galleries. The alterations that have been made since last Spring are in the direction of convenience and harmonious effect, and visitors to this Winter's exhibitions will appreciate them, especially the elevators and the change in the lighting, which relieves those who faithfully attend the evening auctions of the excessive glare formerly encountered.

Among the rugs are several of much more than ordinary interest. A Ghiordes prayer rug in which the colors of the border are delightfully related to the rose and green of the ground by the ingeniously arranged columns in which the leading colors are repeated, especially attracts attention. An early Hebrew prayer rug, said to be of the fourteenth or fifteenth century, is described as unique in the catalogue. The central panel has a ruby ground on which is a large chalice in light green, upon which appear nine temple lamps. The narrow transverse panel above the spandrel bears an inscription in Hebrew characters, "None but the just may enter."

The tapestries range from sixteenth century Gothic to eighteenth century Beauvais. One illustrates a typical sixteenth century theme, "The Triumph of Virtue," and presents a remarkable figure composition of the Middle Ages.

The Ukiyo-ye paintings are interesting without producing a highly aesthetic effect. They render entirely credible the statement made in an admirable little pamphlet by Yojiro Kuwabara that in many cases the originals of the color prints now in so much demand were greatly improved upon by the engravers. The author also calls attention to the many forgeries obtaining in the field of color prints as in other fields of art, and quotes a "skillful merchant" as saying that their detection was growing more difficult every year. "I must say," he adds, "that there is not only one kind of forgery but many. One kind consists in using old blocks, old paper and old colors. These forgeries are comparatively few. In another kind, with deliberately fraudulent intent, reproductions of the blocks are made with great accuracy, and old paper and colors are used as in old days. These editions are also purposely limited. Finally, there are some made with new blocks, new paper and new colors, in which many grades are, of course, conspicuous; and these forgeries are easily detected."

Hence the desirability of collecting Ukiyo-ye paintings in place of prints. Both exhibitions last until Dec. 3, inclusive.

Samuel Gompers Recovering.

ROCHESTER, Nov. 26.—Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, who has been ill three days as a result of a cold and the strain of the two weeks' convention of the Federation, was out to-day. It is his plan, his secretary said, to leave to-morrow afternoon for Washington.

FIGHTS RETURN TO WIFE.

Jacob Brenner Takes His Case to United States Supreme Court.

Five years ago Jacob Brenner deserted his wife, Mrs. Sadie Brenner of 313 East Fifth Street, and his two children, Tillie and William, now 8 and 6 years old, respectively. Mrs. Brenner, who had been searching for her runaway husband, heard that a relative had seen him in California, and through the National Desertion Bureau of the United Hebrew Charities, Brenner was located in San Francisco, where he had a barber shop.

Brenner was indicted under the Child Abandonment law by the Grand Jury of this county, and fought extradation. The Superior Court said he would have to return to New York. He appealed to the Circuit Court of California, on the ground that he had been a resident there for four years, and his appeal was denied. Then he turned to Gov. Johnson, who turned a deaf ear to his pleadings.

Brenner filed a note of appeal with the United States Supreme Court on Monday, and for the first time in history, it is said, that ultimate tribunal will pass on a case of child desertion. The decision is awaited with great interest, because of its possible application to similar cases. Meanwhile Dr. Morris D. Waldman, manager of the United Hebrew Charities, is caring for Mrs. Brenner and the children.

YOUR Opportunity Here TODAY—To Save Half on Clothes—AND WHY!

That much-abused word, "opportunity"!

So often is it misused that its strength has become impaired.

The recent receivership—and the settlement with creditors at 50 cents on the dollar—made possible today's prices.

It made possible your purchase of the finest quality clothes for half what they were intended to bring.

The creditors' sacrifice became your saving.

The Hackett-Carhart stores are selling suits and overcoats at an average one-half saving simply because the creditors stood a loss of one-half.

But this has nothing to do with the kind of clothes that are on sale. Mark well this feature.

The Hackett-Carhart stocks today comprise the choicest suits and overcoats possible of production by the world's finest weavers and tailors.

The fabrics embrace every new staple shade, coloring and mixture—every known weave, and every fashionable pattern. Two continents have contributed their finest products.

The tailoring reflects that ideal combination of brains and skill, such as is seldom found in clothes. When it is present, it is usually accompanied by big prices—and is usually well worth them.

Then there are the Hackett-Carhart assortments. No wider variety of garments, no greater number of models, no more splendid exhibit of styles were ever gathered together.

Long before the receivership these stocks were arranged for—in anticipation of the greatest season in the Hackett-Carhart history of 56 years.

At the full prices, these clothes represent 100% value, plus. More, in fact, for your money than other New York stores offer today.

And so when it is said that the sale prices save you one-half, it is putting a great truth mildly.

GUNMEN NEAR BECKER IN THE DEATH HOUSE

CROWDS HINDER THE SHERIFF

Wives of Two Gunmen Go with Them to Prison and Receive Their Valuables.

"Whitey" Lewis, "Gyp the Blood" Horowitz, "Dago Frank" Cirofici and "Lefty Louie" Rosenberg were sentenced yesterday morning by Justice Goff to die in the electric chair during the week beginning Jan. 6 for the murder of Herman Rosenthal. At 1:34 in the afternoon the doors of Sing Sing Prison closed behind them and a few minutes later they were lodged in cells in the death house overlooking the one occupied by Charles Becker.

Few murderers have ever been the objects of greater public curiosity. Between the Tombs and Sing Sing Prison more than 10,000 persons had assembled for a sight of the gunmen. By 8 o'clock yesterday morning there was a crowd of 500 about the Criminal Court Building, and it grew to 1,500 before the prisoners were led into the courtroom at 10:30. The reserves from the Elizabeth Street station cleared Franklin Street between the Tombs and the Criminal Court Building. Capt. Tierney and Lieut. Dominick Riley were on guard inside the building. Thirty minutes before the hour set for passing sentence the courtroom was so crowded that the doors were ordered closed.

The crowd, however, gave signs of nothing more than peaceful curiosity. There was no disorder on the outside beyond a little shoving among candidates for the best positions for seeing the prisoners as they crossed the Bridge of Sighs after receiving sentence. Rumors that gangsters would storm the police and rescue their prisoners have preceded almost every session of court since the day following the murder of Herman Rosenthal, when Shapiro appeared before the Coroner, and such whispers and threats long ago ceased to make an impression.

Nevertheless, the police kept sharp watch on the crowd yesterday. "Humpty" Jackson, who was a member of Monk Eastman's gang, wandered into the building with two companions. They were hardly inside when Lieut. Riley had Jackson and one of his friends by the coat collar and was rushing them down the front steps of the building. A second later the third suspected gangster was hustled out by a policeman. If there were any other gangmen in the crowd they kept the peace uncommonly well.

At 10:30 the four convicted men arrived with their counsel, ex-Magistrate C. G. F. Wahle. District Attorney Whitman and his associates arrived a few minutes later. The wives of "Gyp" and "Lefty Louie" came to the Criminal Court Building, but were allowed to remain in the Sheriff's office, and did not enter the courtroom.

Motions Are Denied.

Every one in the courtroom arose a few minutes after the arrival of the prisoners when an attendant announced that Justice Goff was coming. Before the case was called the Justice called to the seat beside him Superior Judge William P. Lawler of San Francisco, who sentenced Abe Ruef to fourteen years in San Quentin Prison. Then the prisoners were called to the bar. All four were clean-shaven and neatly dressed. No change in the composure they have shown all through the trial could be seen.

The gunmen were arraigned. William Penny, Clerk of the court, then addressed them, asking if they had any legal cause to show why the judgment of death should not be pronounced. They were silent. Their counsel then, addressing the court, argued that the verdict of guilty should be set aside, naming ten grounds for his motion. At the end Justice Goff leaned forward and said in a low voice: "Your motion is denied."

Then, after Mr. Wahle had said that he had no further motions, Justice Goff proceeded to pronounce sentence on "Whitey" Lewis. He said:

"Jacob Seidenshue, otherwise called Frank Muller, otherwise called Whitey Lewis, otherwise called Whitey Jack, otherwise called Louis Seidenshue, otherwise called Jack Beizel, the judgment of this court is that you, Jacob Seidenshue, for the murder in the first degree of one Herman Rosenthal whereof you are convicted, be and you hereby are sentenced to the punishment of death, and it is ordered that within ten days after this day's session of court the Sheriff of the County of New York deliver you, together with the warrant of the court, to the Agent and Warden of the State Prison of the State of New York at Sing Sing, where you shall be kept in solitary confinement until the week beginning Monday, the 6th of January, 1913, and upon some day within the week so appointed the said Agent and Warden of the State Prison of the State of New York at Sing Sing is commanded to do execution upon you—Jacob Seidenshue—in the mode and manner prescribed by the laws of the State of New York."

"Whitey" Lewis listened without a quiver. At the end, slightly nodding his head, he took his seat. Then "Dago" Frank, "Lefty Louie," and "Gyp" rose successively, and heard sentence pronounced with the same formula.

As the prisoners were led from the courtroom they were met at the entrance to the Bridge of Sighs by a number of photographers, and flashlights were exploded. There was much panic on the part of some of those in the crowd on the outside, where the explosions were interpreted as the opening revolver shots of an attack of gangsters on the police. When there were no more explosions, however, this fear vanished.

Crowds Beset Them.

After the prisoners had a few minutes to collect their belongings, they were led down from the cells to the Lafayette Street entrance to the Tombs, where the prison van awaited them. Here the reserves were kept busy with a crowd of 2,000 struggling for places to see the doomed men. It was several minutes before the police could cut an avenue through the mass of people to let the van start for the Grand Central Station.

At the entrance to the new concourse of the Grand Central another crowd of 1,500 was waiting to see the prisoners. Here Capt. Gillen of the East Fifty-first Street Station, with a squad of nine policemen, fought to clear a passage from the prison van to the train. Scores of the onlookers bought tickets in order to be able to enter the platform leading to the Peekskill local, on which the prisoners were to ride to Sing Sing.

With the help of eight Deputies and four Tombs keepers Sheriff Harburger pushed through the mob and lodged his prisoners in a special car in the rear of the train. When the curtains of the car were drawn some of the crowd surged upon the two platforms. Sheriff Harburger blocked them this time by having overcoats hung over the glass panes of the doors. Just before the train was leaving Sheriff Harburger learned that the wives of "Lefty Louie" and "Gyp the Blood" wished to come in. The Sheriff turned this over in his mind a while and then decided to let the two young women in. With them came a third young woman, whom "Whitey" Lewis claimed as his sister.

"Dago Frank" asked if his brother could join him. This request Sheriff Harburger refused. Jean Gordon, the sweetheart of "Dago Frank," was also on the car, but she was likewise refused admittance. The swarthy gunman lapsed into a sullen silence, shooting glances at the Sheriff which led the latter to say:

"Did you see the evil look that fellow gave me? He is a man to watch out for."

Wives Join the Gunmen.

The three young women who were allowed in the car took seats across the aisle from the gunmen. All three are under eighteen years. The wife of "Lefty Louie" might be called a beautiful girl, and the other two are more than ordinarily pretty. Mrs. "Lefty" showed not the slightest trace of care or worry. She was dressed in black, but very stylishly and daintily, and her blonde curls escaped from under a blue velvet cap. Mrs. Horowitz was also in black, but she, too, was smart looking. "Whitey's" sister was in blue.

Before the train started "Gyp" beckoned to his wife and she came over and kissed him. Sheriff Harburger interfered, and delivered a little lecture to the young woman, in which he said they had been allowed an unusual privilege in being with their husbands, but that they would have to stay in their seats and talk across the aisle. Then the Sheriff took a seat in the rear of the car.

A minute after the Sheriff had gone Mrs. Horowitz got into the seat beside her husband and placed her arm around his neck. Horowitz and "Lefty Louie," handcuffed together, sat in the same seat. In another minute the wife of "Lefty Louie" had joined them, sitting on her husband's knee, and "Whitey's" sister was with him. The Sheriff carefully arranged that all this should be invisible to him.

There were no tears. The gunmen have persuaded themselves that they will get off on appeal, and have never allowed their spirits to be dashed by the thought of paying the penalty. The only complaint they have made is that they were not allowed to spend Thanksgiving Day in the Tombs. "Lefty Louie" taxed Sheriff Harburger with cruelty in not permitting this.

"I thought it was best to have you safe in Sing Sing as early as I could," was the Sheriff's answer.

Then he added after a minute: "I'll say this for you, though. You've been good boys and haven't given me any trouble."

At every station along the road crowds had gathered. The gunmen left the window curtains up. With the women on their laps, they were soon picked out by the crowds. After one or two had pointed them out, the people at the station would flock up to the window, some laughing and others looking sympathetic. This sort of thing had become such an old story to the gunmen and their wives, however, that they did not take the least notice.

Hand Over Their Jewelry.

As the train drew near Ossining, "Gyp," whose right hand was free, fumbled with the cuff of his left shirt sleeve and took out the cuff button. He asked one of the Deputies to take the button from the other sleeve. When this was done he handed them over to a Tombs keeper who had been friendly with him, to be kept for his wife. The keeper mentioned his stickpin, and "Gyp" said: "It isn't worth anything. I might as well give it to her, though."

Then he handed the stickpin over to the keeper. "Whitey" Lewis then took out his sleeve links, to be given to his sister. "Lefty Louie," who had been looking on, sarcastically said: "I suppose those will be put on exhibition."

The keeper denied this with great vehemence.

"You know better than that," he said. "You know how much I think of you fellows. I am going to pray that you will get out in a year. I mean it. I'm going to pray for you. You are good fellows, and nothing like most of the rats we have in the Tombs."

"Lefty Louie" looked apologetic, and added that he had disposed of all his belongings a week ago.

"I've already made my will," he said. "I've disposed of everything I own." Then he added: "But I hope those fellows who are guilty get it instead of us."

A crowd of 3,000 people had gathered at the station at Ossining. Such a mob surrounded the Sheriff and his prisoners that it took ten minutes to force their way for the first 100 yards. Instead of looking for rescuers, the gunmen tried to help the deputies in shouldering back the mob. The camera men occupied every place of advantage along the route, but the gunmen kept their caps drawn down, while their wives held newspapers over their faces. A procession 200 yards in length followed them up Hudson Avenue to the penitentiary building.

GIBSON SORRY JURY DISAGREED, HE SAYS

Asserts He Will Not Plead Guilty in Alleged Swindling Case to Escape Murder Charge.

QUICK RETRIAL PROMISED

Special to The New York Times.

GOSHEN, N. Y., Nov. 26.—The jury before Justice Tompkins which had been trying Burton W. Gibson, the New York lawyer, for the murder of his client, Mrs. Rosina Menschik Szabo, on Greenwood Lake on July 16, was unable to agree. It was discharged at 11:20 o'clock this morning, and the accused lawyer was led back to his cell in the county jail. According to the officials, there will be no let-up in the prosecution of the prisoner. He will be tried again in February or March. The jurors deliberated for more than fifteen hours. Three times they returned to the courtroom to announce that they could not agree, and twice they were sent back to "try again."

The question of a retrial of Gibson, it is said, is largely in the hands of Jonathan Wilson, District Attorney-elect of Orange County, who is to succeed Thomas Rogers on the first of the year. According to Jacob J. Singer of Jersey City, one of Gibson's lawyers, an expressed belief of the defense that Gibson will not be tried again is based not only on the weakness in the chain of evidence, but also on the expense to Orange County taxpayers.

Mrs. Gibson remained with her husband most of the night, and in the early hours she sat in the corridor of the court while in a little room upstairs the jurors were discussing the right of her husband to live. She was called a pathetic figure when afterward she stood alone on the steps of the Court House. By that time she was convinced that no acquittal could be expected. The jury's deliberations had reached a stage where disagreement was regarded as the only result probable.

Prisoner Pacing His Cell.

Gibson, she had been told, had gone to sleep. He had not. Instead, he was pacing his cell, his nerves strung almost to the breaking point. He gave out a statement in the afternoon, in which he expressed dissatisfaction and disappointment. It was reported he had received an offer of immunity from future prosecution in this county, provided he would plead guilty to an indictment found against him in New York in connection with the alleged swindling of Hugh Trainor, awning maker, out of $17,000. Gibson said he did not know the source of the report, but if such an offer were made to him he would reject it.

The accused attorney added that the warrant for his arrest in the Trainor case came as a great surprise. He had supposed that he was to have been charged with offenses in connection with the will of Mrs. Szabo.

"I positively will not plead guilty to any charge," he continued. "I consider it wrong and wicked for an innocent man to plead guilty. I would serve twenty years as an innocent man rather than compound any offense with justice. I believe it is just as wrong for an innocent man to plead guilty to a charge to avoid prosecution on another as for a miscarriage of justice to send an innocent man to jail. I would consider it wicked to bargain with the State to get off under a suspension of sentence.

"I am not pleased with the result of the trial," he asserted. He appeared to feel a sense of relief, however, now that the acute point in his case had passed. "The question is, simply, am I innocent or guilty," he continued. "If I am guilty I should be punished. I know that I am innocent and so have been confidently looking forward to vindication. Fate has been hard on me. I have seen trouble. I want to say now that I could never understand why all these charges have been brought against me. I have led an upright life. I have never in my life taken a dishonest nickel from any man or woman.

Tells of His Happy Home.

"Some of the testimony would lead one to suppose that I was a man who was dissipated and had a fondness for the white lights. It is the contrary. I am a lover of my home, and that home life has always been agreeable to me. It is in the thought of that happy home life and the love of a devoted, brave, and faithful wife that I now find a great measure of consolation."

Mrs. Gibson, sitting beside her husband, smiled.

"We are happy," she said. "My father and my mother are fond of my husband and they have in him the same confidence that I have. So have our friends."

Gibson leaned over and lightly touched his wife's hand.

"I have looked forward with such hope for acquittal to set me right in the eyes of the world," the lawyer resumed. "Now I expect to stay here until March, at least. I don't know the plans of the prosecution, but I want to say that I do not in any sense regard the [illegible] as a triumph for myself."

Mrs. Gibson said she had "a good cry" and it did her "lots" of good. "However," she added, "and when I say 'we' are going to fight, that means me. I have had a very hard week, and I was exhausted last night. It was hard to sit there and hear the testimony, largely imaginary, pile up against my husband."

The lawyer's wife contradicted published stories that at the preliminary hearings she looked eagerly at the photographs of Mrs. Szabo. She resented the fact that in print the Viennese woman was referred to as her rival.

"My rival!" she said, with bitterness. "I have no rival. I never had a rival. My faith in my husband never has wavered. I know Burton better than do those who testified against him."

Hopeful for Verdict.

At 10:40 A. M. the jurors entered the courtroom and being asked by Justice Tompkins whether they had agreed on a verdict, the foreman said that they had not.

"Do you think you can agree?" asked Justice Tompkins.

"There is still a chance," answered the foreman, so the jurymen were ordered back to their room again.

When next they sent word they wished to return to the courtroom the jurors announced they could not agree, and that the fact had been established. In an instant, Gibson, was on his feet.

"Your Honor," he began, but the Justice ordered him to sit down. He remained standing.

"If your Honor please," he persisted, "I would like you to request the jury—"

"Mr. Gibson," you will have to sit down," interposed Justice Tompkins. The prisoner slowly sank into his seat.

Justice Tompkins thanked the jurors. In discharging them he reminded them Gibson probably would be tried again, and he expressed the hope they would not discuss their deliberations with anybody nor tell how their votes stood.

Robert H. Elder, Gibson's senior counsel, told Justice Tompkins:

"My client wished to ask the court to give the jury a final chance to reach an agreement."

It was said the jurymen, when after a night of loud debate, stood 9 to 3 for acquittal. At first, it was reported, the majority were for conviction, but slowly the sentiment changed. Finally it got to the point where only three stood out for conviction. After much reasoning, it was rumored, two of the three agreed they would find with the majority provided the third man cast his vote the same way. That man is reported to have said he would see "hades freeze over first," so the three held together.

As the jurymen crowded about the Clerk's desk to receive their fees and mileage, Mrs. Gibson approached them. She shook hands with Foreman Hicks and George W. Jamison. They were the two men whom she chose for jury duty.

"I depended on you two, at least," she said to them, "because I felt you could be depended on." Then she moved forward and shook hands with the other jurors.

Liked Man Who Ignored News.

Mrs. Gibson said she picked Hicks because of his intelligent and sympathetic face. She admitted she chose Jamison because he was the publisher of a newspaper in Pine Bush, N. Y., and he said, when being examined, that his paper never had published anything about the Gibson case.

Mr. Jamison was asked about happenings in the jury room. He replied:

"If there were twelve birds on a limb of a tree and a man shot at them and killed all but two that would describe the situation."

The scene in the courtroom before the jury's final report was depressing. Many persons had been there all night, sleeping on benches or loitering about the halls. The lawyers had little sleep, and Justice Tompkins had been called in the middle of the night to be told the jurors could not agree. The jurymen looked jaded. Mrs. Gibson and her husband showed the strain of their all-night vigil.

Railroad Employes Reinstated.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 26.—The arbitration board, acting in the dispute between the Georgia Railroad and its employes, to-day returned a decision reinstating J. T. Passhal, a conductor, with full pay from the time he was discharged, and A. M. Morgan, a flagman, with pay from the time he was dismissed, with the exception of ten days. The board held that Morgan should have been disciplined to the extent of ten days' pay.

TESTIFY TO THREATS BY UNION OFFICERS

Witnesses Swear That Visits of Ironworkers Were Followed by Explosions.

BAN ON TVEITMOE'S SMILE

Judge Reproves Defendant, Whom He Accuses of Making a Demonstration.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 26.—As tending to show the implication of labor union officials in plots, the Government introduced at the "dynamite conspiracy" trial to-day testimony that explosions on non-union ironwork followed the refusal of contractors to unionize their jobs after personal visits from some of the defendants.

Before two charges of dynamite were exploded on a bridge in St. Louis on Aug. 9, 1908, John T. Garrett, President of a construction firm, testified he was visited by John H. Barry of the local ironworkers' union. "Barry wanted me to unionize the job," said Garrett. "He said: 'You'll find it a great deal cheaper, for you know what will happen.' I told him I suspected he was going to dynamite the job, and he had better be careful. It was blown up later."

Questioned by Chester Krum, counsel for Barry, Garrett said that the union official, referring to dynamiting, declared that he did not "do that kind of business."

Wallace Marshal testified that while he was engaged in construction work at French Lick, Ind., he had been visited by Fred Sherman, union business agent. "Sherman told me I had better unionize the job," said Marshal, "but I lost my temper and told him I would have nothing to do with the murderous, dynamiting ironworkers. An explosion occurred in March, 1911."

F. J. McCain said his firm suffered three explosions on jobs in Buffalo, N. Y., in 1909, and one in Erie, Penn., in 1911, after he had been visited by John T. Butler, Vice President of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Ironworkers. "Butler told us we would be sorry when we refused to deal with the union," said McCain.

Before two explosions on a viaduct at Springfield, Ill., on March 8, 1911, when $45,000 damage was done, Patrick F. Murphy testified that he was visited by Fred Spears, a union official, and told by Spears if the job was not unionized it would be "put on the bum."

When the defense objected District Attorney Miller said: "It has been shown that Spears, though not indicted, has been shown to be a co-conspirator and ought to be indicted."

The Court overruled the objection, and the witness said he understood that Spears threatened the use of dynamite.

Mr. Miller said that J. B. McNamara actually blew up the job.

Adhering to its argument that the dynamiters who have already confessed were alone responsible for explosions, the defense to-day continued its cross-examination of Ortie E. McManigal.

Senator John W. Kern, chief counsel for the forty-five defendants, plied McManigal with questions intended to show that the dynamiter kept as secluded as possible while on his trips of destruction.

"When I went to Boston to see Michael J. Young, the ironworkers' business agent, about blowing up the tower in the municipal building at Springfield, Mass., in April, 1911, Young called me down," said McManigal. "He said he had told J. J. McNamara I was not to stop at Boston; that Young didn't want to be seen with me."

"Didn't McNamara tell you always to see as few people as possible, and didn't you receive your instructions from McNamara alone?" asked Senator Kern.

"From McNamara and Herbert S. Hockin. Once when Hockin instructed me I told him if I was caught we all would be caught."

"But you never got any instructions about jobs to be blown up from anyone except McNamara?"

"I said McNamara and Hockin. Young in Boston talked to me about doing work for the local union, but I told him I worked only for the International."

Olaf Tveitmoe of San Francisco, a defendant who had been sitting at counsel's table since the trial began, was ordered by Judge Anderson to sit among the other defendants.

"I notice there is a perpetual smile on the face of the defendant Tveitmoe while the witness is being examined," said Judge Anderson. "I will not permit any demonstration, either by smiling or otherwise."

DEPORTATION SAVES MILLIONS

Admittance of Undesirables Blamed Upon Legislation Inefficiency.

ALBANY, Nov. 26.—Millions of dollars have been saved New York State during the past year by the deportation of aliens and the removals of non-resident insane, according to a report to-day by the Bureau of Deportation of the State Hospital Commission.

These insane aliens and non-residents, who were removed from the State hospitals, or returned to other countries or States responsible for their care and maintenance, without securing admission, totaled 1,753. Of this number 1,383 were patients who had actually become charges in New York State institutions for the insane.

The number of removals increased 55.7 over 1911, and has resulted in reducing the increase in the hospital patients from 2,298 to 573. The average annual per capita cost of caring for the insane in the State institutions approximates $200, and the hospital life of each patient averages ten years.

The deportations and removals this year represent a minimum saving to the State of $350,000 per year, which, based upon the average hospital residence, the commission says, would amount to $3,500,000.

The commission reports that 3,999 persons have been deported to foreign countries since 1904, and 1,472 removed to other States, a total of 5,471. It would have cost the State $1,094,200 a year to have maintained this number.

"The entrance of this large number of defective and insane persons from foreign countries," says the commission, "is due to inadequate Federal legislation restricting immigration, and to the inefficient inspection of immigrants passing through the various ports of entry."

The total immigration for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1912, was 838,172. Of this number 230,275, or 28.5 per cent., were destined to New York State.

KICKED BLUE RIBBON HORSE.

Groom Arrested for Abusing Mr. Livingston's Prize Winner.

Nicholas Treanor, employed as a groom by Philip Livingston of 115 East Sixty-first Street, was arrested last night for cruelty to animals by Policeman Dawson of the East Fifty-first Street station. The policeman said that young Treanor was leading one of Mr. Livingston's fine horses, a blue ribbon winner in past horse shows, about in the neighborhood of Fifty-ninth Street and Park Avenue, when the horse slipped and fell to the street.

As the horse did not get up immediately Treanor began kicking him in the side. The policeman said he told the groom to stop, and warned him of arrest, but Dawson paid no attention to him.

Dr. Wright's Oversight Cost $998.

BOSTON, Nov. 26.—It cost Dr. James H. Wright of the Harvard Medical School Faculty $998.77 to adjust a case that the Government instituted against him in September for his failure to declare the value of goods brought from Europe. The physician was arrested at the time, but to-day he was discharged upon payment of $48.77 costs. His property was released after $950 duty had been turned over to the customs officials.

Why Use Wax?

When You Can Use

STANDARD VARNISH

STANVAR, the twentieth century wood finish, combines the beauty of wax, the durability of varnish and is as easy to apply as furniture polish.

A can of STANVAR, some cheesecloth and a little rubbing will give to any floor—whether marred, scratched or streaked—the most beautiful, wax-like finish possible—one that will not only look good to-day, but will last for months without renewing—a finish that will resist hard usage and remain unstreaked and unmarred—a finish which can be easily renewed when necessary and which is absolutely free from the dangerous slipperiness of wax.

STANVAR is on sale at the leading hardware, paint and household supply stores, where you can secure a free sample can—sufficient to refinish a floor border. If you have difficulty in locating a store that can supply this sample, fill in and mail the attached coupon.

FAVOR STATUE HERE TO QUEEN VICTORIA

NATIONS TO STOP TO PRAY

Five Minutes on Anniversary Day to be Set Apart—Celebration Ending with San Francisco Fair.

A meeting of the sub-committee of the American Committee to arrange for the celebration in 1914-15 of the one hundredth anniversary of peace among English-speaking people was held in the Lawyers' Club, 115 Broadway, yesterday afternoon. John A. Stewart, the Chairman of the committee presided, and those of the committee in attendance included Jacob H. Schiff, ex-Ambassador Charlemagne Tower, George T. Wilson, Charles Stewart Davison, Delos McCurdy, Dr. Louis Livington Seaman, Austen G. Fox, Calvin W. Rice, Job E. Hedges, James L. Wandling, Andrew B. Humphrey, William H. Short, William B. Howland, T. Kennard Thomson, George William Burleigh, and Judge Alton B. Parker.

The committee disposed of much business, among its first acts being to name Senator Elihu Root and Judge Parker as a committee to wait upon President-elect Wilson and discuss with him possible legislation having to do with the proper celebration of the centennial. It was also voted to recommend that the celebration come to an end at the Panama Exposition in San Francisco, and a special committee was appointed to take that matter up with the exposition officials.

An announcement was made that the British committee was favorable to a suggestion to send a special committee to visit New York early next Spring for the purpose of organizing an international committee and for the formulation and approval of a comprehensive plan of international celebration. The committee yesterday voted to extend a formal invitation to Earl Grey, the Chairman of the British Committee, and a committee of his associates to come to New York for the purpose named, and set as a tentative date for the conference the week of March 27-April 3 next.

Another matter acted upon favorably was a suggestion of Senator Root's, that on the 17th of February, 1915, five minutes shall be set aside, and that those five minutes shall be designated by the Parliament of Great Britain and the Congress of the United States as a period during which all activities of the English speaking world shall come to a full stop, and "that for five minutes the English speaking world shall review the one hundred years of peace and its attendant blessings with prayer and contemplation."

It was voted to request Senator Root to prepare the bills for such legislation, both National and State, also that a committee of distinguished astronomers and mathematicians be appointed whose duty will be to calculate this five minute period for each section of country.

Still another matter acted upon favorably was the question of a woman's auxiliary committee, whose specific work will be to advance the proposal to erect a monument to Queen Victoria in the City of Washington. A proposal to erect at some conspicuous point in the United States a bust of Chatham as a memorial to the friendship of the British people to Americans at the outset of their career was agreed to.

The resignation of James G. Cannon, President of the Fourth National Bank, as Treasurer of the committee was announced, and it was voted to ask Jacob H. Schiff to accept the position. Mr. Schiff did not give his answer. It was also announced that the committee would give a dinner in honor of James Bryce, the retiring British Ambassador, at the Hotel Astor on the 13th of next month.

$18,000 to the Board of Foreign Missions, New York City.
$10,000 to the American Bible Society.

'MANON LESCAUT' IN CHICAGO.

Opera Season Opens with Enthusiasm for Miss White.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—With a rousing triumph for Carolina White in the title rôle of Puccini's "Manon Lescaut," the Chicago Grand Opera Company inaugurated its third season at the Auditorium to-night. The curtain rose to a "capacity house" and an assembly brilliant in a social aspect. In its numbers, its interest and enthusiasm the audience was a cheering omen for the year of 1912-13. The apathy of last season's inaugural performance was gone entirely, and the occasion will be recalled as a demonstration of confidence in the company and in the cause itself.

The choice of Puccini's "Manon Lescaut" was one of the management's happiest inspirations. Not only is this the first work by the Italian master to be heard in two years, but it also is the first important performance of "Manon."

Carolina White won honors comparable with those of Mary Garden in the popular mind when she created the title rôle of "The Girl of the Golden West" during the opera's first season.

In the cast with Miss White were Mario Sammarco, barytone, and Giovanni Zenatello, whose prominence among the tenors of the Boston Opera Company has made his position secure. Mr. Sammarco was greeted enthusiastically. Mr. Zenatello also was acclaimed. His reception was more than politeness to a guest. It disclosed a sincere admiration, a keen pleasure in a voice rich beyond ordinary endowments, and the instinct for strong, expressive acting.

The company acquitted itself with credit under the able direction of Cleofonte Campanini. Orchestra, chorus, and stage management rejoiced in the audience's recognition of their efforts.

VOLPE SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Although the Volpe Symphony Orchestra has given two preliminary concerts at the Republic Theatre and Aeolian Hall, the organization settled down to its regular subscription series last night at Carnegie Hall. The audience almost completely filled that auditorium, and the applause was plentiful.

The programme contained nothing which could be considered in any sense novel unless a "Requiem," as the programme called it, for three 'celli by Popper might be so designated. This was played in honor of the memory of Alfred L. Seligman, who was an honorary member of the society, by Messrs. E. Bronstein, F. Bruch, and A. Edison.

The programme began with the overture to "Freischütz," and concluded with the overture to "Rienzi." It included Beethoven's Fifth Symphony and two movements, the Elegie (the melody of which bears a strong resemblance to the five-four time movement from the Sixth Symphony of the same composer) and the waltz from one of Tschaikowsky's serenades for string orchestra. Mr. Volpe and his men repeated the waltz in response to prolonged applause, and it was in fact played better than anything else during the evening.

ACCUSES THEATRE ATTACHE.

Grand Opera House Treasurer Held on Young Girl's Charges.

Louis Kaleski, treasurer of the Grand Opera House, was arraigned yesterday before Magistrate Kernochan in the Jefferson Market Court on a charge made by Florence Perry, 15 years old, of 132 West Twenty-seventh Street.

According to the girl, she went to the theatre on Friday afternoon and purchased two tickets. She said she stopped in the lobby to look at some pictures when Kaleski appeared and asked her if she had good seats. She says that she replied that she didn't know, and then, she says, the treasurer told her that he would take her up to the balcony and show her where they were. The girl said that they went into the theatre, which was dark, and to the balcony, where he kissed her.

Kaleski in his defense said that he put his arm around her waist and kissed her, but that he was encouraged by the girl. He waived further examination and was held for trial in $1,000 bail.

DEMAND A BETTER COMPENSATION LAW

SUGGESTION FOR CARNEGIE

Industrial Accident Problem Offers Him an Opportunity to Render Service, Says Railroader.

Workmen's compensation in this State was the subject discussed at the second day's session of the National Civic Federation, held yesterday in the rooms of the New York Board of Trade and Transportation. The Legislature may soon pass another compensation act to take the place of the law recently declared unconstitutional by the Court of Appeals, and it is probable that the members of the Civic Federation will bring to the attention of the legislators the views developed at the debate yesterday.

Charles Henry Butler was the first speaker at the morning session, and, speaking for the American Bar Association, said that he believed that compensation for industrial accidents in New York should be compulsory, legislative, and adequate. He was followed by Judge John T. McDonough, counsel for the State Federation of Labor, who among other things wanted to know what assurance Francis Lynde Stetson, who discussed the constitutional amendment that might have to be put through before there could be compensation, had for believing that the supporters of compensation would be able to change the State Constitution. He admitted that it would be easy sailing if the amendment were acted upon favorably, but added that amendments were often rejected at elections.

Judge McDonough warned the delegates that they must be careful not to play into the hands of the casualty companies. He exhibited a bundle of papers, and exclaimed that he had records of fraud, perjury, and all sorts of wrongs on the part of the insurance concerns. Insurance papers, he said, were often stolen from the bodies of men immediately after fatal accidents and sent to the companies so that the widow who might not know that her husband had a policy would be cheated of the paltry sums the policies called for.

Daniel F. Tobin, President of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, said that while the home of the average worker might be a little cleaner and his food somewhat better than it was a generation ago, the fact remained that the workingman of to-day was saving less than did his father, because of the higher cost of living. He favored a compensation law that would include persons engaged in occupations not usually classed as dangerous and hazardous, naming as one of these department store work.

Frank V. Whiting, general claims attorney for the New York Central, emphasized the necessity of continuing to deal directly with employes. If a State insurance scheme was adopted, he predicted, the employer would tell his men to collect their damages from the State Commissioners and not bring him into the matter.

The Afternoon Session.

At the afternoon session the first speaker was W. Tecumseh Sherman, who differed with the views expressed by Judge McDonough.

"Judge McDonough," said Mr. Sherman, "wants us to adopt the Ohio plan, which asks employers to insure with a political Board of Commissioners. In Ohio they are insuring very much lower than anywhere else in the world. That won't continue very long. There will soon be a deficiency, and the rates will go up."

Thomas J. Curtis, President of the Tunnel Workers' Union, and Chairman of the Joint Compensation Board of New York, followed Mr. Sherman.

"There is hardly a day during the entire year," he said, "when there is not a fatal accident in our industry. They have as many as five at one shot when they give it to us good. We do not believe and will not admit that our men are responsible for these accidents. We don't want compensation, but we do want prevention."

Mr. Curtis showed the picture of the body of a man who had been killed in an explosion to emphasize his contention that it was prevention and not compensation, that was needed.

"Whenever a man is killed in this way," he added, "the Coroner's jury says 'premature blast.' There is no such thing. It is always somebody's carelessness."

Assails the Insurance Men.

Mr. Curtis denounced the insurance men, the corporation attorneys and the ambulance chasers.

"A man had his leg broken," he went on, "in two places. He thought there was only one break. His wife was induced to settle for one break, $30. When he found out the extent of his injuries he went and begged for another $30, but didn't get it. And he couldn't get one day's work in seven months.

"The only thing I want to impress upon this gathering is the suffering of men in this class of work. A man's head was blown off. The widow got a jury's verdict for $12,000. The case was appealed to the Supreme Court and the widow was fined the costs of the proceedings, $300. That was because her husband was careless enough to be near a place where blasting was being done.

"We want to be fair to employers, but we don't believe $30 is enough for a leg broken in two places. That is what is making all the turmoil between the employers and their men."

Others who spoke yesterday were W. L. Saunders, President of the Ingersoll-Rand Company; John Fitzgibbons of the Order of Railway Trainmen, who suggested that Andrew Carnegie turn his attention toward compensation rather than pensions for ex-Presidents; and Timothy Healy, President of the International Brotherhood of Stationary Firemen.

TWO NAMED ARNOLD ROOS.

They're Always Turning Up at the Same Hotel and Getting Mixed.

Arnold Roos reached the Imperial Monday morning, having come on the George Washington, and that night A. N. Roos walked in and registered. Arnold Roos says the "A." of the other's name stands for "Arnold," and that the two are continually running into each each other, and that it is annoying. The other Roos was out last night, so that what he thinks of the encounters is not known. Arnold Roos comes from Switzerland, and A. N. Roos registers from Copenhagen.

They remembered at the Imperial that the two Rooses had the habit of getting their identity mixed, because both had stopped in the hotel last year. When the Swiss Roos was informed yesterday that the Danish Roos had arrived, he threw up both hands.

"There will be no peace," he asserted. "He will get my mail, and I shall get his. He will open my telegrams, and I shall probably open his. Either he pursues me, or I pursue him everywhere. We were here at the same time last year and we had all sorts of mix-ups with our mail. The last time we encountered was at De Keyser's Hotel, London, a few months ago. He received some important telegrams from Sheffield that were meant for me, and thought they were his, and it cost me two or three days of worry. There ought to be an international law that no two men should have same the first name when their family name is the same.

"I have traveled about in the last year over much of the world," said Mr. Roos, and in my line there is good business everywhere except in this country. Here there is too much politics. I was in Constantinople five months ago, and business was fine there. At that time there was no hint of war."

CUBAN GENERAL HERE ILL.

Monteagudo Going to Paris to Consult a Specialist.

Gen. Josef Monteagudo, Commander in Chief of the Cuban Army, arrived at the Astor yesterday on his way to Europe. He is going to Paris to see a specialist and to rest. He is accompanied by Señora Monteagudo and his secretary, E. Loler.

Mr. Loler said that in his recent campaigns which had resulted in the suppression of the negro revolt in Cuba, Gen. Monteagudo had worn himself out, and simply needed rest. He has three months' leave of absence. Gen. Monteagudo declined to discuss conditions in his country.

URGE HOME RULE FOR CITIES.

J. Hampden Dougherty and R. S. Binkerd Talk at Cooper Union.

"Home Rule" was the topic of discussion in Cooper Union, under the auspices of the People's Institute, last night. Had it been home rule for Ireland the auditorium probably would have been packed. As it was only home rule for New York City that J. Hampden Dougherty, the Constitutional expert, and Robert S. Binkerd, secretary of the City Club and Director of the Municipal Government Association of New York State, advocated, however, the attendance was light.

Mr. Dougherty told how the right of this city to govern its own affairs had been gradually usurped by the Legislature, beginning in 1846, when an act to reorganize the Police Department was passed by the State Legislature. He said that it was high time that "the good old times" be restored, and he advocated the amendment of the Constitution so as to return to all municipalities in the State the right to take charge of their own business affairs.

"Won't home rule mean Tammany rule?" asked one interested young student of political economy.

"That depends on the people," replied Mr. Dougherty. "You can't change human nature. Bad home rule would be better than good Albany rule, for even bad home rule is an education."

Mr. Binkerd argued for the adoption of an act broadly extending the powers of all municipal Governments in the State; for a general act containing several simple forms of city Government which any of the up-State cities would adopt at their option; for the amendment of the State Constitution so as to give to cities the right to frame and amend their charters, and for a new chapter to the election law providing a non-partisan machine for conducting city elections.

B. R. T. Orders Stepless Cars.

The B. R. T. has ordered 100 stepless cars of the type now being tried along Broadway, for delivery in February. It will also place an order for 600 steel side-door cars as soon as the operating contracts for the new subways are let. The company now has 98 per cent. of its rolling stock in service, and has borrowed twenty-five cars from the Long Island Railroad for emergencies.

Three Hundred Miles a Day and No Fatigue

Think of riding 300 miles a day over ordinary country roads and doing it with a degree of restfulness such as is not experienced even in a railroad train.

That is easily obtained in HUDSON automobiles, for they represent the skill and experience that 48 expert engineers have combined in their production.

A long wheel base, long, flexible springs, twelve inch cushions, and high backs are some of the details that make this possible.

The Smoothness of the Motor

But this would be insufficient to assure hours of riding comfort, for a smooth, perfectly operating mechanism is also essential. A motor that pulls steadily without jerk and without vibration is just as important as are big wheels, resilient springs, ample tires, etc. That is another point that the engineers responsible for the New HUDSON have been able to incorporate in this car.

Electric Self-Cranking—Electrically Lighted

48 Engineers Build HUDSON Cars

Remember the importance of that statement. These men were trained in 97 European and American factories and have had a hand in building over 200,000 cars. They combined their experience and skill in perfecting the new HUDSONS.

What better assurance could be offered than that these men who possess about all the knowledge that has thus far been gained in automobile building have joined in saying, "The New HUDSONS are the best we know."

The HUDSON "37" is their four-cylinder Masterpiece. It sells at $1875, completely equipped with electric self-cranking device and electric lights, speedometer, clock, top, windshield and twelve-inch upholstery. There is nothing more to buy.

The "54" HUDSON—a Six, capable of doing 65 miles an hour and which will attain a speed of 58 miles in 30 seconds from a standing start, is offered as a car superior to any automobile on the market. It sells at $2450, completely finished and equipped as above. Prices are f. o. b. Detroit.

BRUSH'S DEATH BLOW TO BASEBALL WORLD

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 26.—The body of John T. Brush, President of the New York National League Baseball Club, arrived here late to-day and was removed to the home of his daughter, Mrs. Harry N. Hempstead. The funeral will be held in St. Paul's Church Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and will be in charge of the Masonic lodge.

The funeral of John T. Brush, for ten years President of the New York Club of the National League, who died in his private car, the Oceanic, at Louisiana, Mo., early yesterday morning, while en route for Southern California, for the benefit of his health, will be held at Indianapolis Friday afternoon. Mrs. Brush, who did not accompany her husband on the trip, which ended in his death, left New York yesterday afternoon for Indianapolis.

Although he had not been in good health for many years, and had been unable to leave his bed for several weeks, the news of Mr. Brush's demise came as a shock to his friends in this city. The feeling of grief was especially pronounced at the Waldorf-Astoria, where club owners and officials from the other seven cities of the National League were gathered for a special meeting. Without exception the league club owners declared that Mr. Brush's death was a distinct loss to their organization, and they were a unit in declaring that his wise counsel would have been unusually valuable at the present time.

Immediately after the meeting had been called to order yesterday afternoon, at 1:30 o'clock an adjournment of one hour was taken in respect to Mr. Brush's memory and a committee appointed to draw up suitable resolutions on his death. Following are the resolutions which the committee presented when the meeting was reconvened:

> The death of Mr. John T. Brush, President of the New York Baseball Club, comes as a sad blow to organized professional baseball, and particularly to us, his associates in the National League.
>
> As the dean of organized professional baseball, his wise counsel, his unerring judgment, his fighting qualities, and withal his eminent fairness and integrity in all matters pertaining to the welfare of the National game, will be sorely missed.
>
> He was a citizen of sterling worth, of high moral standards, and of correct business principles, and his death is not only a grievous loss to us, but to the community at large as well.
>
> Be it resolved, therefore, That the members of the National League of Professional Baseball Clubs in session to-day express their profound grief in the loss of their friend, associate, and counselor, and extend to the members of his bereaved family their sincerest sympathy in the great loss which they have sustained by his death; be it further
> Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the records of this league.
>
> CHARLES H. EBBETS,
> EDWARD C. JONES,
> JULIUS FLEISCHMANN.

From the time that Mr. Brush first went into baseball as an official of the Indianapolis Club in the early 80s, he was noted for the businesslike way that he conducted affairs, and when he secured control of the Cincinnati Club almost twenty years ago he proved a welcome addition in the councils of the National League. From that time until the day of his death his advice was always eagerly sought by the other club owners in matters pertaining to the league, and it was a rare exception that his advice was not followed. In fact, he became the real leader in the executive sessions of the league, and his businesslike methods were a most important factor in giving baseball the importance and the standing which it holds to-day. Even when he was too ill to attend meetings in person Mr. Brush's opinions were always sought, and they carried great weight in league affairs.

Much of the important legislation that has been effected in baseball during the past quarter of a century was due solely to the ideas of the deceased club owner. Back in the days before the Brotherhood war broke out he drafted a salary limit law, which was adopted by the league, whereby players were limited to $2,400 a year. The sport became so prosperous that it outgrew the rule, but it failed to outgrow countless other recommendations made by Mr. Brush. In league circles he was generally recognized as the leader in all matters affecting the success of the organization, a man who had keen insight, wonderful business ability, and admired as a "fighter" for the policies which he favored.

New York's standing in the baseball world, and this city ranks at th top in this respect, has twice been preserved through Mr. Brush's actions. More than twenty years ago when the Brotherhood war threatened to kill the sport in this city, Mr. Brush, then at the head of the Indianapolis Club, foresaw the inevitable crash, affecting both his own interests and the game in this city, and he disposed of several of his star players, including the noted Amos Rusie, to the New York Club, and thereby averted the threatened disaster here.

In 1893 Mr. Brush secured control of the Cincinnati Club, and for the next ten years he made his presence felt in the National League. Always keen to see a good proposition looming up before him, he sold out his interests in the Cincinnati Club in 1902, and a few months later made the move that had prompted his previous deal. He came to New York, bought the club, which was then controlled by Andrew Freedman, and has since conducted it on lines that have made it the most valuable baseball franchise in the country. The game was at low ebb here when the change was made, but it increased to such an extent under Mr. Brush's ownership that it has often been called the 'savior of the National League." A year ago Mr. Brush closed a deal with the executors of the Coogan estate which insures baseball on the Polo Grounds as long as the league exists.

John Tomlinson Brush was born in Clintonville, N. Y., on June 15, 1845. Left an orphan at the age of 4 years, he went to live at the home of his grandfather, in Hopkinton, where he remained until he was 17 years old. At this age he left school and went to Boston, where he obtained a position in a clothing establishment, a business with which he was identified up to his death. He worked as a clerk in several cities in the East, and finally went to Indianapolis in 1875 to open a clothing store. The store still occupies the same building, and Mr. Brush continued at the head of the business until his death. It was in the early 80s that he first became interested in baseball in Indianapolis, and he made himself both wealthy and famous as a promoter.

In 1863 Mr. Brush enlisted in the First New York Artillery, and served as a member of this body until it was discharged, at the close of the civil war. He was a charter member of George H. Thomas Post, G. A. R.; a thirty-third degree Scottish Rite Mason, and was also prominently identified with several social and commercial organizations of Indianapolis, notably the Columbia Club, Commercial Club, Board of Trade, and the Mannerchor Society. Since coming to New York he took up membership in the Lambs Club and the Larchmont Club. For several years he made his headquarters at the Lambs' Club, but lately he had resided at Pelham Manor and the Hotel Imperial.

Although never of a robust constitution, Mr. Brush had been able to get about considerably, and he was a notable figure at the Polo Grounds during the past few years, usually viewing the games from his limousine. Two years ago his physicians declared that he had not long to live, owing to a severe attack of locomotor ataxia, and he was hurried to a warmer clime. He recovered sufficiently to return to this city. Late in September last Mr. Brush was thrown from his automobile, which skidded on a wet street in Harlem, and he painfully injured his hip. This accident is believed to have hastened his death.

Mr. Brush is survived by his widow, Mrs. Elsie Lombard Brush, and two daughters, Miss Natalie Brush and Mrs. Harry M. Hempstead. His first wife, Mrs. Agnes Ewart Brush, died in 1888.

DESERT ANISE TRAIL FOR FOX.

Special to The New York Times.

WESTBURY, L. I., Nov. 26.—An odd thing happened during the run of the Meadow Brook drag hounds over the Meadow Brook country this afternoon, when just as the pack was released after the first check in Morgan's Park, the hounds struck the trial of a fox, deserted the anise seed entirely, and started out on a pursuit of their own after reynard.

The meet was at Westbury, and the hounds were laid on the line of the anise seed near the Westbury Church. They started off running well bunched and close to the line. They crossed the Baltazzi place, the Jericho turnpike, and on to the Thomas Hitchcock estate. From here they ran on to Ambrose Clarke's and F. S. Von Stade's and checked at Mr. Winthrop's Windmill. After the hounds were put down again, after a short respite in D. M. Morgan's Park, they let out a cry in unison, far more vigorous than that usually excited by the trail of the anise seed bag and started off in an entirely different direction than that which huntsman Chris Collins knew had been laid out for them. His first thought was that the line had been changed. Then, right ahead of him near the Elk pen, bobbing up every now and then from the underbrush, could be seen the body of a big red dog fox and the flourish of an unmistakably bushy tail.

The drag hounds had found the live trial and were making the most of it. For about ten minutes they ran him over the Morgan property, and it was only with difficulty that huntsman Collins called them off and turned them back to the waiting and amazed group of riders. With only lukewarm enthusiasm the pack then continued to lead the field to the finish at Brookville. Those out included Mrs. Adolph Ladenburg, A. F. Whitney of Oyster Bay; Philip Stevenson, William C. Hayes, Allan Pirie, David Dows, Mr. Leventritt, S. A. Warner Baltazzi, and J. E. Davis, M. F. H.

CHANGE N. Y. A. C. RULE.

Members Vote by 301 to 5 to Ballot for Committee.

By an overwhelming majority, the vote on an amendment to the constitution of the New York Athletic Club now makes it obligatory for the members of the organization to vote for their Nominating Committees instead of seeing them appointed by the Board of Governors, as has been the rule for years past.

When the count was taken which sounded the death knell of the old article of the constitution it was found that the vote stood 301 to 5 in favor of the amendment, petitioned for by a half hundred members of the organization, which was the occasion for last night's special session and which developed into one of the liveliest meetings in the history of the club.

> On the first Tuesday in December each year a committee of seven shall be chosen by the club at large, who shall select and post upon a club bulletin at least ten days before the annual meeting the name of a candidate for each office to be filled at the ensuing election. Any twenty-five members of the club may propose seven names for the Nominating Committee. Such proposal shall be in writing, delivered to the Secretary, and posted at least fifteen days before the December meeting. No member shall unite in the proposal of more than seven names for such committee. At least ten days before the December meeting the Secretary shall mail to each member of the club a printed list of all the names so proposed. At the December meeting the club shall elect such committee by ballot. Each member present may vote by ballot for not exceeding seven persons on such list by erasing the names of the others, if any, with ink or pencil, and depositing the list as a ballot for the names not marked. The seven members upon such list receiving the highest number of votes shall be the Nominating Committee.

BASKET BALL MEETING.

Collegiate Rules Committee to Interpret Code at Hotel Astor.

The collegiate basketball rules committee will hold its annual meeting for basketball officials, managers and college representatives at the Hotel Astor on Nov. 29 to interpret and explain the rules for the season of 1912-13.

This plan was adopted by the collegiate rules committee several years ago, and has been such an unqualified success that each year it has been broadened in scope until it now includes all of the prominent colleges and teams playing the college rules in the East. All of the members of the Intercollegiate League send from one to four representatives, and, in addition, the umpires and referees of the league attend in a body.

The meeting will be presided over by Dr. Joseph E. Raycroft of Princeton University, who is President of the Intercollegiate Basketball League and Chairman of the collegiate rules committee. Al. Sharpe of Yale, who is at present coaching the Cornell football team and who is a prominent official in college circles, will also be present to help in this educational work.

BILLIARDS AND POOL.

Last night marked the opening of the amateur handicap three-cushion-carrom billiard tournament at the Broadway Billiard Academy, Sixty-fifth Street and Broadway. The scratch mark is twenty points, and the lowest handicap is fourteen. The contestants in the game were F. McCann, playing at 17 points, and G. Salisbury, at 20. The former won by the score of 17 to 15 in thirty-four innings, making a high run of two points. Salisbury's high run was three. This evening S. Henry (19) will oppose W. Jewell, (16.)

Two games were decided last night in the beginning of the third round of the Class C 18.2 balk-line billiard tournament at the Morningside Academy, 125th Street and Lenox Avenue. In the first contest William Mason defeated T. F. Donahue by the score of 50 to 27 in eighteen innings. Mason had an average of 2 14-18, the record average of the tournament, and a high run of twelve points. The second game was won by I. Rosenbaum, who defeated A. Fein by the score of 50 to 30 in thirty-five innings. The winner made a high run of nine points and averaged 1 15-35.

Edward Herdman defeated Joseph Rettle in the final game of the first round in the English billiard tournament at the Audubon Billiard Academy, 145th Street and Eighth Avenue, last night, by the score of 300 to 233. Herdman received a handicap allowance of 120 points, while his opponent's allowance was fifty. The result of this game enables Herdman to take part in the second round, and he will oppose William Coban in the first game. The latter plays "owing" 150 points.

Two games were played in the amateur pool tournament at Doyle's Forty-second Street room yesterday. In the afternoon game William Tilt defeated Max Bernstein by a score of 85 to 53, and in the evening John Shoemaker defeated William Downs, 100 to 99. This afternoon Edward Gray will play Edward Raynolds, and in the evening Dr. W. G. Howe will oppose Norman Smith.

George Slosson, the veteran billiardist, increased his lead over Koji Yamada, the Japanese, when he defeated the latter last night in the second block of their six nights' match at Keeney's Billiard Academy in Brooklyn, by the score of 400 to 350. The total score for both nights is 800 to 662, in favor of Slosson. Yamada's high runs were 56, 48, and 38, and he averaged 9 26-36. Slosson's highest runs were 87, 66, and 31, and his average 10 30-37.

New York Billiardist Defeated.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., Nov. 26.—Pittsburgh won its second game to-night from New York in the National Billiard League. J. Wireback defeated L. L. Magnus of New York, 50 to 46. High runs were: Wireback, 3; Magnus, 5.

International Soccer Matches.

A great deal of interest has been aroused by the international soccer competition being run under the auspices of the New York Footballers' Protective Association. The latest entrant is the All-American team, an evidence of the way the game is taking hold here. The first game of the series will be between Scotland and England on Thanksgiving Day at Marquette Oval at 2:15 P. M. The winners of the series will receive medals. The entire proceeds of the series will go to the fund for injured soccer players. On Manhattan Field, 149th Street and Eighth Avenue, St. George will play Bronx United at 10:30 o'clock. The game will be interesting as providing a comparison between National League and New York State League teams.

Tigers to Practice Hockey To-night.

Princeton's hockey team intends to take no chances of risking the loss of the intercollegiate championship which it won last year. Hobey Baker, who succeeded Capt. Kay in charge of the team, has called the squad for first practice on the ice to-night at the St. Nicholas Rink and again early to-morrow morning, and regular practice will continue until the championship season begins, after the holidays. Princeton will be under the supervision of Coach Gus Hornfeck, who will drill the players in the technical details of the game and confer with Hobey Baker in the selection of the men who will comprise the regular team. Princeton's first practice game will be with Williams on Dec. 20 at the St. Nicholas Rink.

BASEBALL OWNERS LAG ON FOGEL CASE

Conferred All Day Yesterday on Wild Charges Made by the Philadelphia President.

After hearing testimony of various kinds for upward of eight hours the club owners of the National League, in session at the Waldorf-Astoria to pass on the charges against Horace Fogel, who resigned four days ago as President of the Philadelphia National League Club, for making statements reflecting on the National League race, adjourned shortly after midnight last night until 10 o'clock this morning. At that time it was said that the meeting might last throughout to-day.

After adjourning for an hour out of respect to the memory of John T. Brush, the deceased President of the New York Club, the club owners got together at 3:30 o'clock yesterday to take up the case. Those in attendance at the meeting were President Thomas J. Lynch and Secretary John Heydler of the National League; Presidents James E. Gaffney of Boston, Charles W. Murphy of Chicago, Charles H. Ebbets of Brooklyn, August Herrmann of Cincinnati, and Edward C. Jones of St. Louis; Secretary William Locke representing Pittsburgh, and Secretary R. H. McCutcheon of New York. Others who were present by virtue of holding stock in the various clubs were Cornelius J. Sullivan of New York, Max and Julius Fleischman of Cincinnati, and Harry Ackerland of Chicago. Representing the Philadelphia Club were Alfred Wiler, William Conway, and A. T. Hegstoz, announcement having been made that Mr. Fogel was not present as a representative of that club. Attorney J. Conway Toole of New York represented the league, and A. L. S. Shields of Philadelphia represented Mr. Fogel.

Being interested in the case to the extent of having preferred the charges President Lynch of the National League declined to act as Chairman of the meeting and turned over the chair to Julius Fleischman of the Cincinnati Club, who will hold the position throughout the hearing.

Before any action was begun the Philadelphia Club presented credentials showing that Mr. Fogel had resigned the Presidency four days ago and that he was in no way connected with the club. It was announced that Alfred Wiler, Vice President of the club since the death of Charles H. Elliott, more than a year ago, had been elected to succeed Mr. Fogel. Mr. Wiler is a practicing attorney in Philadelphia and was a former partner of Mr. Elliott. The credentials were accepted by the league and Mr. Wiler was accepted as the voting member of the club.

This gave Attorney Shields the opening he was waiting for and he immediately raised the question of the power of the league to conduct any investigation against Fogel since he held no official position with the club. Attorney Toole for the league answered that the league as a body had a right to press such charges against Fogel, either as a club official or as an individual, and added that it was for the interest of the league to show whether the charges were true or false.

With the objection of Fogel's attorney overruled, the league took up the hearing. First of all President Lynch's charges were made, accusing Fogel of saying or writing on seven specific occasions certain statements reflecting on the National League pennant race, President Lynch, and the umpires. The first statement was alleged to have been made at Pittsburgh in August, in which Fogel was charged with declaring that Manager Roger Bresnahan of St. Louis had materially assisted toward New York winning the pennant in 1911. A signed statement in a Chicago paper, remarks in the presence of several New York newspaper men on Sept. 6 at Philadelphia, letters to President Lynch and to the other seven club owners in the National League, and a telegram to Garry Herrmann of the Cincinnati Club were other things named in the charge against the Philadelphia Club owner. All dealt on the subject of the National League pennant race, the contention in a majority of them being that the umpires or President Lynch were helping New York to win.

Fogel's signed answer was also read. He denied in toto all charges that he had said anything about the race being fixed, and his letters to President Lynch and the club owners he held to be private and privileged communications, expressing personal opinions which he was entitled to express, as they had a bearing on the league's affairs. He ended up by questioning the jurisdiction of the league to conduct any such hearing as was proposed.

The alleged remarks at the Philadelphia ball park on Sept. 6 were first taken up, and Mr. Fogel was the first called upon to testify. He denied the charge absolutely, and declared that he did not consider President Lynch, the umpires, or any one connected with the National League was "crooked." He said that a Philadelphia minister had made the statement which he had been charged with uttering, and added that he had taken the opposite stand, assuring the clergyman that the game was surrounded by too many safeguards to permit any such thing as a "fixed" race. According to Mr. Fogel, the clergyman in question had declared that nothing could convince him that the race had not been fixed for the New York Club to win. He based his assertion on some decisions in the double-header between New York and Philadelphia, which appeared to be against the home team. At the clergyman's special request he was not called upon to testify, as he desired to avoid the publicity of the affair.

After Mr. Fogel had finished three New York newspaper men were called in and each testified that he had heard Mr. Fogel make a declaration at Philadelphia that the race was fixed for New York to win on Sept. 6, following the New York-Philadelphia double-header. Seven Philadelphians, most of them newspapermen, were called upon by Fogel's attorney to disprove the charge that Mr. Fogel had made any such statements.

During the evening session a long letter from Mr. Fogel to President Thomas J. Lynch and a telegram from Fogel to August Herrmann were introduced as evidence that the Philadelphia Club owner had made statements about the umpires favoring the New York Giants so that they might get the choice assignments in the world's series. Counsel for Mr. Fogel contended that these communications were strictly private and should not be divulged, but when the matter was placed before the league for vote the decision was 6 against Mr. Fogel with Chicago and Philadelphia refusing to vote.

In the letter to the league President, Mr. Fogel made numerous charges about the poor work of several National League umpires. He also proposed a scheme whereby umpires for the world's series should be chosen by the President of the other league, the National League umpires being chosen by the American League President and vice versa to prevent any favoritism to clubs during the pennant race. One of his charges against the umpires was that Umpire Brennan had boasted to Umpire Rigler six weeks before the 1911 world's series that he was to officiate, which he afterward did. Both umpires were called upon to testify and both denied that such was the case.

G. H. Forman, sporting editor of The Chicago Post, was another important witness. He received the statement from Mr. Murphy bearing upon Mr. Fogel's signature which appeared in The Chicago Post, and he received other letters later. The league endeavored to have the other letters introduced as evidence, but Mr. Forman declined on the ground that they were of a private nature, and must first be released by the writer. He agreed to give up these letters if Mr. Fogel agreed, but the counsel for the latter objected. The letters in question are supposed to have the greatest bearing on the trial.

Charles W. Murphy of the Chicago Club was a witness and he admitted turning over the letter to The Chicago Post, which caused most of the present trouble, but declared that he had not read it beyond the first page and consequently did not know its full contents.

Mr. Fogel took the stand again during the evening session and related numerous instances in which he said that favoritism was shown by the league umpires toward certain clubs or by President Lynch toward these umpires. He cited these instances to justify the story which he had signed for The Chicago Post, but added that he did not expect the story would be written as he sent it to Mr. Murphy. The latter was first to pass on it, and then he expected it would be rewritten by the sporting editor of the paper. He declared that he was the subject of persecution by President Lynch in the latter's campaign for re-election, and introduced letters from Umpire James Johnstone which referred to President Lynch in uncomplimentary terms. After hearing Mr. Fogel's testimony to prove his contentions in the Chicago letter the meeting adjourned until this morning at 10 o'clock.

ACCUSES CUBS' PRESIDENT.

Sporting Editor Forman Says C. W. Murphy Instigated Fogel Letter.

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—Under the caption "The Story of the Story Fogel Wrote," W. S. Forman, sporting editor of The Chicago Evening Post, in a signed statement to-day, charges Charles W. Murphy, President of the Chicago National League Club, with being the instigator of the "story" which resulted in charges being preferred against Fogel.

Mr. Forman is in New York to testify before the league meeting. The "Fogel story" attacking President Lynch and his umpire system recently appeared in The Post. Regarding it, Mr. Forman says:

> Charles W. Murphy authorized me to tell Fogel that Murphy had suggested writing the story. On this representation Fogel wrote it and signed it. He sent it to Murphy, who read it before I ever saw it. It came to me from Murphy's office, and if Murphy had not approved that story it never would have been published. The man who is morally responsible for the article and the charges it contained is Murphy himself, and I have Fogel's own word for it that he wrote it simply "to help Murphy fight his battles" in the National League.

The Forman statement in addition says:

> It is not the first time Murphy has made Fogel the goat. Previously Murphy had sent me another article signed by Fogel, and told me Fogel had written it and wanted it published. It was printed in The Evening Post on the understanding that Fogel was the author of it. Months afterward I learned that Murphy himself had written it and Fogel had merely signed it because he was requested to do so by the club's President. It was a defense of Murphy, who had been criticised in a syndicate article sent out by a Chicago baseball writer. We told Murphy to send it over and if possible we would use it.
>
> It was typewritten, but signed in ink by Fogel, and contained lavish praise for Murphy and his "meteoric rise in baseball." We published it under the belief that Murphy was telling the truth when he said Fogel wrote it.

Regarding the later "Fogel story" Forman says:

> One day when the Cubs were playing in Philadelphia a Chicago newspaper carried a dispatch quoting Horace Fogel as suggesting an important change in the system of picking umpires for the world's series. He wanted the President of one league to select the arbitrators from the rival league, and vice versa. In the course of this interview Fogel charged that the New York Giants had been getting the best of the umpiring all year.

TORONTOS BEST BATSMEN.

Champions in International League Make Team Record of .293.

The Toronto team of the International League, in winning the 1912 pennant, had the excellent team batting record of .293, according to the official figures issued by President E. G. Barrow last night. Baltimore was a close second for batting honors, with .289 and Rochester was third, with .283.

Toronto made the most home runs, having 49 to their credit, eight less than last year. Baltimore led with three-base hits, making 123, while Rochester headed the list for two-base hits, with 229.

Murphy of Baltimore, sixth on the official batting list, was practically the leader for batting honors, with .361 for 122 games. Jordan of Toronto hit for the circuit 19 times, and was passed to first base on balls 105 times, leading in both these classes for the second successive year.

Dolan of Rochester was the leading base runner, stealing 78 bases. Conroy of Rochester led with 35 sacrifice hits.

Virginia League Drops Two Clubs.

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 26.—The Virginia State Baseball League met at Portsmouth to-day and fixed upon a six instead of an eight-club circuit, to be composed of Richmond, Norfolk, Portsmouth, Petersburg, Newport News, and Roanoke, dropping Lynchburg and Danville. Officers were chosen as follows: President, J. O. Boatwright, Danville; Vice President, H. C. Elliott, Roanoke; Secretary, Zack Woodall, Richmond; Directors, W. B. Bradley, Richmond; W. E. Pritchett, Petersburg; Elmore Heinz, Roanoke; Dr. J. R. McCrary, Norfolk; R. A. Bullock, Portsmouth, and James L. West, Newport News. It was decided to open the baseball season April 17 and close Sept. 12.

Yankees Will Not Trade Chase.

Regarding the statements in newspapers that the New York American League Club contemplates the trading of Hal Chase to some other club, President Frank J. Farrell said yesterday:

"Hal Chase will not be traded under any circumstances and will remain a member of the team next year. It is due him to deny these reports at this stage, when many baseball rumors are rife."

Passaic to Play Stamford.

Special to The New York Times.

PASSAIC, N. J., Nov. 26.—Arrangements were completed to-day for a game between the Passaic High School football team and the Stamford (Conn.) High School eleven at Stamford on Thanksgiving Day. Stamford, winner of the Connecticut Interscholastic League championship, was to have played Rutherford High School, champion in the Northern New Jersey Interscholastic League, but Passaic, which finished second, decisively trounced Rutherford last Saturday, 22 to 6, and was therefore chosen to represent the league against Stamford. Two of the local regulars will be out of the game with injuries. William Merselis, left tackle, is seriously ill with pneumonia, resulting from injuries sustained against Orange. Capt. Walter Flower severely hurt his left arm in a fall in the Rutherford game.

Sullivan's Book on Olympic Games.

The most recent history of athletics in connection with the Olympic games has just been issued by James E. Sullivan, the United States Commissioner to the Stockholm sports, and gives an exhaustive review of everything done by the American team from the time the men left New York on the Finland for the scene of their track and field triumphs to the conclusion of the games.

PICKING NAVY TEAM STILL A PROBLEM

Coaches Will Not Make Definite Selection Until Day Before Game with Army.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 26.—With the near approach of the Army and Navy football game, enthusiasm over the contest has taken hold of practically every one connected with the Naval Academy. While practice was closed this afternoon to the general public, the members of the Navy contingent assembled to encourage the team, while the brigade of midshipmen was on hand in full force with the new songs and yells.

The general work of the team was satisfactory, and a new spirit seemed to have taken hold of the players. Hope has strengthened in the last few days, and there is general anticipation of another Navy victory. It is felt that individually, particularly in the line, the Navy team is stronger than the Army, and it is believed that the team work has improved vastly in the last two weeks.

The coaches still say that the position of right tackle will be given to either Redman or Ralston, and that they will not make up their minds as to which shall start the game until Friday afternoon. It is also said that either Overesch or Ingram will start the game at left end, and either Howe or Vaughan at left guard, but it is generally believed that Overesch and Howe will be the men. These positions may be regarded as practically certain: Left tackle, Hall; centre, Perry; right guard, Brown; right end, Gilchrist; quarter back, Capt. Rodes; left half back, Leonard; right half back, McReavey; full back, H. Harrison. The team is a very heavy one. With Overesch, Howe, and Ralston in the line-up, the average is 178 9-11 pounds. The line averages 186 3-7 pounds and the back field 164¾ ponuds.

The "On-to-Franklin-Field" order was issued this morning. The team and substitutes, thirty-five in number, with coaches, medical officers, trainers, &c., will leave at 8:30 o'clock on Thursday morning. The football party will leave Philadelphia shortly after 2 o'clock on Sunday afternoon. The brigade, in two battalions, traveling over different roads, will leave Annapolis at 8 o'clock on Saturday morning, and will leave Philadelphia at 8 o'clock on the same evening. The Midshipmen will be under the regulations of the Naval Academy during the whole of their absence, and their attention has been called to a regulation forbidding betting. From the conclusion of the game until just before the departure of the train all Midshipmen will be given liberty, but no excuse will be accepted for failure to catch the train.

WEST POINT'S FINAL "PREP."

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 26.—The army team resumed its strenuous practice on the gridiron to-day in final preparation for the Navy game next Saturday. It was the first workout the men had been in since Syracuse played here last Saturday, and all hands entered into the game with dash and spirit. There is only one regular on the hospital list. Markoe is still nursing a sore leg, but expects to resume work to-morrow. Hoge and Gillespie were used to-day at end in his place. Rosevear got in for a short time, too, Gillespie played well, and Markoe's injury keeps him out of the Navy game. Gillespie, who is a veteran and knows the game, will probably be used in the position.

The regulars scored two touchdowns on the scrubs. Benedict, Keyes, and Milburn played well in the Army regulars backfield. Benedict scored one touchdown and Keyes the other. The scrubs were unable to tally, although Prichard's misjudging of Doe's long punt close to the Army line nearly resulted disastrously. A scrub end fell on the ball and Doe tried a field goal. Devore broke through and blocked the kick. From the 25-yard line the regulars marched straight down the field to the scrubs' 10-yard line, from which Keyes went through for the score. Huston and Herrick were both tried at one of the guard positions on the regulars.

This one position, along with the two ends, is worrying the coaches. Weyand has the other guard position clinched. He did fine work there to-day.

CORNELL IN SIGNAL DRILL.

Sharpe's Team at Atlantic City—Pennsy Plays at White Marsh.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 26.—The Cornell football team, which arrived here to-day to finish its preparations for the Thanksgiving Day game with the University of Pennsylvania on Franklin Field, engaged in a lively signal drill this afternoon under Coach Sharpe. Long forward passes, criss-crosses, and end runs were the principal plays called for, and were run through in a manner which would indicate a fast open game on Thursday at Philadelphia. The same team that faced Michigan will probably line up at the opening of the game, except that Fritz, who has completely recovered from his injuries, will supplant Bennett at right half back.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 26.—The University of Pennsylvania football squad went through a fast signal drill to-day on the golf links at White Marsh. The Pennsylvania players will remain in the suburbs until Thursday, when they will return to Franklin Field for the game with Cornell. This contest will be the final game for Capts. Mercer, Jourdet, and Harrington, and they are anxious to complete their football careers with a victory.

Fordham Students Cheer Team.

Five hundred Fordham students paraded to the football field yesterday, headed by the students' band, to watch the last scrimmage of the year and to rehearse the Fordham songs and cheers for the game with Villa-Nova to-morrow. Cheer Leaders Ed Gillertn, editor of the monthly; Jack Sullivan of the relay team, and Tom Kelly, the Maroons' tennis expert, worked up plenty of enthusiasm, which seemed to be communicated to the players, for never before did they exhibit so much speed in getting off their plays and checking those of the opposing eleven. Billy Elliffe, Captain of the track team, whose services have been claimed by the relay for the last two weeks, again appeared on Fordham Field in a football uniform, and was at his old position of left end on the 'Varsity during the signal practice. He did not take part in the scrimmage later with the Commerce eleven and the scrubs, Viviano taking the wing position. Coach Thorpe ordered the Maroon quarter back to send Al Williams through the line until the giant full back was almost exhausted. The coaches are also using Williams to hurl the forward passes, because of his great height he can pick out the free man to receive the pass more easily than the diminutive quarter back. The Faculty is expected to lift the ban on at least two of the regulars barred last week, and announcement to that effect will be made to-day, when the team has its final drill of the season.

High Schools in Football.

The interscholastic football menu for Thanksgiving Day in this city should furnish some interesting gridiron sport. Local fans will have a chance to see the best of the city's high school elevens in action, two good games being carded for Brooklyn and one in Manhattan. It is in this borough, however, at American League Park, that the best of the day's card is offered. In what should prove to be the best football tussle of the schoolboys' season, the pigskin chasers of De Witt Clinton High School and the High School of Commerce will clash in Frank Farrell's ball park to decide the gridiron supremacy of Manhattan Borough. The city title already has fallen prey to the prowess of Manual Training High School, and now all is in readiness to test the respective merits of the teams that are rated as Manual Training's strongest rivals for the city laurels. Besides settling the question of supremacy of this borough, the game also will decide the runner-up in the city championship tussle.

Hilfinger Syracuse Team's Captain.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 26.—Martin J. Hilfinger of Buffalo was elected captain of the Syracuse University football team to-night.

Wide Scope of Public Schools Athletic League Pointed Out.

At the banquet of the Elementary Schools Games Committee of the Public Schools Athletic League, held at the Hotel Astor on Nov. 16, Gen. George W. Wingate, President of the league, called attention to the wonderful increase in athletics among the pupils of the public schools of Greater New York. At present there are championship tournaments in baseball, soccer football, basket ball, indoor baseball, and track and field sports, which bring together all the schools in the entire city.

Dr. C. Ward Crampton, Secretary of the league, has compiled a report in which he states the number of boys actively engaged in inter-class athletics in the elementary schools reaches the half-million mark. New York City, through the Public Schools Athletic League, has shown the world how to get vast numbers of boys interested in athletics, due to the capable and persistent instructors who are at the head of the league.

At a recent meeting of the Board of Rifle Coaches, which was held at the Board of Education, a number of important matters pertaining to shooting was discussed and adjusted. The protest presented by the High School of Commerce and Morris High School against the condition of the guns at Eastern District High School, with which they competed, was considered and a motion carried that the matches between Eastern District and High School of Commerce and Eastern District and Morris all be contested again. It was claimed that the contesting marksmen were unable to make their usual high scores in the competitions.

It was proposed that the services of a competent coach be procured to assist the Board of Rifle Coaches in armory practice during the season, and his time be equally divided among the schools desiring his services.

It was decided that no boy who has shot in two-thirds of the first team matches shall become a member of a second team in the final matches.

NEW 6-DAY RACE RULES.

Loafing, Blockading, and Other Unfair Tactics Placed Under Ban.

The New York six-day bicycle race will be harder than ever this year. Through the various changes that have been made in the rules governing the running of the race, there will be 142 hours of riding, and no time taken out for accidents to riders or wheels, and riders who "stall" for a rest when the going is hard will be penalized for every lap they lose while off the track. This is not done with the intention of making the race brutal, but merely to make it fair for all of the contestants.

In years past riders have purposely fixed wheels or tires so that it was necessary to leave the track for repairs, and while the matter was being attended to they would take a comfortable rest while the others were riding.

In many instances riders have intentionally fallen in order to get a rest. To make this sort of work impossible the rules have been so altered that when a team is off the track for more than ten laps, for any cause whatever, they will lose every lap covered by the other riders in that time.

Another rule that will improve this year's contest is in reference to riders who are in front blocking those who may want to come from the rear and set the pace. In all of the past grinds around the Garden saucer there have been riders, known as strong pluggers, whose only chance of winning the contest was through wearing down the weaker ones. For their mutual benefit the weaker riders formed a "blockading squadron," and with a perfect signal service were warned when a plugger jumped to the front. Immediately they got this tip they would spread themselves across the track and the plugger would be compelled to drop back to the rear of the bunch again. In this manner they made the race to suit themselves, and "Mr. Plugger's" one chance in the race was blocked.

A rule that will prevent many accidents and help the scorers and officials to keep a record of the teams during the jams is in regard to pickups. This year all pickups must be made on the pole and not from the top of the track. Other new rules are in reference to riders wearing their colors at all times, and leaving the track without permission of the referee. Leaving the track and getting permission afterward will not be tolerated.

Amateur Drivers in Session.

At a meeting of the League of Amateur Driving Clubs held yesterday in the Holland House, and at which T. L. Quimby of Boston, H. K. Devereux of Cleveland, Horace White of Syracuse, and T. J. Tranter of Pittsburgh, were present, it was decided to hold the annual intercity matinees at North Randall track. Goshen, N. Y., and Lexington were not represented at the session. H. K. Devereux was elected President and T. L. Quimby Secretary. These men, with John R. Townsend and Horace White, will comprise the Executive Committee.

K. O. Brown and Brock Draw.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 26.—"Knockout" Brown of New York and Phil Brock of Cleveland fought twelve rounds to a draw here tonight. The bout was the roughest ever seen here, and when the gong rang at the finish the uproar was so great that the combatants kept on lambasting each other. They had to be separated. Brown sought continually to get close to Brock, and was the better at the infighting. At long range Brock scored often with his left. Brock cut Brown's lip open early in the bout. In the closing rounds Brown started Brock's nose bleeding. The men weighed in at 133 pounds.

Palzer to Box Flynn or McCarthy.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 26.—Al Palzer, the heavyweight, will box the winner of the Flynn-McCarthy fight scheduled for Vernon Arena on Dec. 10 in the heavyweight elimination contest to determine the championship of the "White Hope" Class. Promoter McCarey concluded negotiations to-day with Tom O'Rourke, manager of the New York fighter, and the fight will occur on New Year's Day.

NEWS OF THE BOXERS.

Manager Billy Gibson of the Fairmont A. C. has arranged a high-class show which will take place at his Bronx Club to-night, when he will offer three ten-round bouts, with the usual preliminary contests. The three ten-rounders will bring into action some of the best boys hereabout at their respective weights. In the first Jack Dorman, the former idol and claimant of the lightweight title of the Bronx, will make his reappearance in the ring with Young Franks of the World A. C. Following this affair two featherweights of much experience will clash, these being Frankie Burns of Jersey City and Young O'Leary of the east side. The main event will be between Young Brown, the local lightweight, who has steadily climbed near the top of the class, and Frankie Madden, an old-timer, who will endeavor to come back.

On Thanksgiving Day afternoon the boxing enthusiasts of the city will have two shows to attract their attention. At the Forty-fourth Street Sporting Club the most important bout is offered, which will show Battling Nelson and Leach Cross in the ring in the final. At the New Polo A. A. of Harlem the management has arranged a special holiday card. Nelson and Cross have been training for their contest with unusual vigor. Nelson wants to demonstrate to the New Yorkers that he is still the "Durable Dane," who held sway in the lightweight class with a splendid record, while Cross is anxious to put a damper on the aspirations of The Battler to regain his lost laurels.

At the Royale A. C. of Brooklyn to-night three ten-round bouts will feature the card. In the main event Joe Stein will stack up against Italian Joe Gans. In the semi-final, also over the same route, Battling Hurley of Passaic, N. J., will try conclusions with Paddy Sullivan, and in the opening ten-round contest Kid Graves and Benny Franklin will be the contestants.

Philadelphia Jack O'Brien will arrive in New York this morning to take charge of Battling Nelson's final training for his bout with Leach Cross at the Forty-fourth Street Athletic Club on Thanksgiving afternoon. O'Brien will be the Dane's chief second in this bout, and he has agreed to work with Nelson for at least two days before the match. Nelson continued his work at Cooper's Gymnasium yesterday afternoon, and at its close submitted to a physical examination, which showed he was in good condition. Kid Fisher, who is one of Nelson's sparring partners, has been signed up for one of the six-round preliminary bouts with Willie Chandler.

AMATEUR SPORT IN MOTOR BOATING

Professionals to be Eliminated in A. P. B. A. Races—H. T. Koerner Re-elected President.

Delegates to the annual meeting of the American Power Boat Association last night at the Waldorf-Astoria adopted a complete plan to reform racing methods in all competitions held under the rules of the association. In addition to revising the rules the delegates defined the amateur status of a motor boat owner and adopted a drastic ruling eliminating all professionals from competition in races. It was also decided to prohibit the offering of cash prizes except in deep-sea races of 600 or more miles.

The future of the A. P. B. A. under the revised rules promises to give it new life and make the organization absolute in controlling all competition. In adopting the new plan, the definition of an amateur as laid down by the Amateur Athletic Union and other amateur organizations was accepted.

The purification of racing will be accomplished by the appointment of a racing commission of three members of the organization, and every effort will be made to make it a legitimate sporting proposition. Wildcat races will be eliminated and competition fought out in Corinthian spirit. An effort will be made to prevent bogus records through official certification of short courses.

Special races were authorized and penalties prescribed for entries at unofficial and unauthorized races where National records are sought. Nautical miles will be the official designation of the association instead of statute miles. A sliding scale for cruisers will be determined according to the breadth and length. This will rule out boats which heretofore have raced in cruising classes, whereas they were really racing boats. Several other minor changes were made, which are expected to improve motor-boat racing.

The election of officers unexpectedly developed into a contest. The Nominating Committee named two candidates for the position of Secretary and placed the name of H. C. Delamater in opposition to Reuben B. Clark for the Treasurership. Herman T. Koerner and Henry J. Gilton were elected President and Treasurer, respectively.

The opposition did not develop much strength and Morris M. Whittaker and Reuben B. Clark will continue in office for another year.

> An amateur in power boating is one who participates for sport as distinct from gain; one who acquires nautical experience through the love of sport, rather than through necessity or the hope of gain. No person who follows the sea as a means of livelihood, or who has accepted remuneration for services in handling or serving on a yacht or power boat, except as a cash prize, shall be considered an amateur.
>
> Under no circumstance will a boat steered by any other than an amateur be eligible for a certificate.

The delegates present follow:

Albany Yacht Club, Albany, N. Y.; Alpha Boat Club, Chester, Pa.; Atlantic Yacht Club, Sea Girt, L. I.; Audubon Boat Club, New York City; Bayonne City Yacht Club, Bayonne, N. J.; Bergen Beach Yacht Club, Bergen Beach, L. I.; Bridesburg Yacht Club, Philadelphia; Camden Motor Boat Club, Camden, N. J.; Clayton Yacht Club, Clayton, N. JOHN WARD BRINGS $1,950.

Champion Five-Year-Old Stallion of 1908 Sold at Old Glory Auction.

Prices at the Old Glory horse auction which rounded out the second of the six days' sales yesterday in Madison Square Garden were considerably higher than those obtained at the opening session of Monday. The Walnut Hall Farm consignment of forty-five yearlings brought $10,725, an average of $238. The topnotcher in the lot, as far as the selling price was concerned, was Baron Watts, which went for $800.

Others in the two score of youngsters which brought what were conceded to have been good prices were Silkworthy, $575; St. Frisco, $525, and Lee Axworthy, $510.

The star of the afternoon selling period was John Ward, a bay stallion pacer, by Bingen-Ambrette, with a race record of 2:05¾, which went to J. C. Turner, Olney, Ill., for $1,950. This horse was the champion 5-year-old stallion in 1908 and is the sire of many good ones with marks of 2:20 or better.

In the McElwain Farm consignment was Blue Feather, by Walnut Hall-Tulip Bell, a 4-year-old trotter, with a mark of 2:19½, which was the medium of much spirited bidding. He was finally obtained for $1,450 by E. J. Tranter of this city. Good judges about the ring asserted that this horse had much promise and should become a 2:10 trotter. One hundred and forty-two head were disposed of during the day's sales, with $35,500 the total and an average of $236 per head.

Golf Course for Piping Rock Club.

Long Island will have another new golf course when next season opens, if expectations are realized. Work has been in progress for nearly a year on a course at Locust Valley for the Piping Rock Club, the distance being between 6,200 and 6,300 yards for the eighteen holes. The length of the holes range from 130 to 520 yards. There are four of 220 yards or less, four others of the drive and pitch variety, between 300 and 350 yards, and seven between 370 and 410 yards, or known as two shot holes. The three longest holes are 480, 500, and 520 yards. Charles B. Macdonald and H. J. Whigham of the National Golf Links of America are supervising the construction of these links. The greens were seeded in September and are coming along in fine shape, although the disposition of traps has been left until later. Associated with Macdonald, who is Chairman, and Whigham on the Golf Committee are Frank L. Crocker, William Farquhar, and Joseph P. Knapp. The officers of the club are as follows: President, Henry Rogers Winthrop; Vice Presidents, Clarence H. Mackay and Harry Payne Whitney; Secretary, Frank L. Crocker, and Treasurer, Frederick P. Moore.

REFORM BY DYNAMITE.

Probably there are few who read the dynamiters' confessions without more or less of a shock, and without wondering how such things can be. McManigal testifies that plans were considered to blow Los Angeles off the map, to put explosives by the wagon load in the Panama Canal locks, and to blow up a sleeping car full of innocent persons "in order to kill Miss Dye because she knew too much." What is the philosophy of the nonchalance with which such hideous crimes were planned, and are testified to, and what can be the adequate motive?

The apparent explanation is that these murderers in thought and act believed themselves benefactors of their class. Theirs were no sordid crimes. The money they got was scant wages, and they earned it hardly. They were no ordinary selfish criminals, killing for filthy lucre. There can be no doubt about it, for they say so themselves. Daily they avow their motives without betraying the least perception that their motives were worse than their deeds, if that be possible. "It was "for the good of the Ironworkers' "Union. My mind was inflamed with "the idea that it would build up the "union." And again McManigal testified that it was designed to blow up a skyscraper with its many inhabitants merely because the building included offices of non-union employers. Surely never were such horrible things conceived before, and it may be doubted if even yet their enormity is appreciated by all who read this statement of the facts.

Certainly it was not appreciated by those unionists who last week voted defense funds for these traitors to the union cause. Certainly it is not appreciated by any who think that the destruction of Los Angeles was the full extent of the crime, or that the blowing up of the Panama locks was the last word of conceivable wickedness. Los Angeles and the Panama locks could be rebuilt, but there could be no reconstruction of the institutions which would have perished if those acts had accomplished the intended results. The intention was, and is, to make the unions supreme, cost what it may. The idea is that no man can work and that no merchant can trade unless the union approves. And it is proposed to repeal all laws which prevent activities of labor toward this end.

This is no slander upon labor, and the assertion does not rest upon the testimony of an incredible criminal. It is the finding of juries of the common people of the vicinage of those who have suffered by unions. It is embodied in the constitutions of unions whose officers are unable to appreciate the objections to such activities. It is a part of the platforms of National parties, and in behalf of the boycott a shameless propaganda has been conducted in the halls of Congress. It is no more possible to tolerate unionism of this sort than to tolerate the dynamiters. Our institutions are not safe if our laws license one-tenth of the wage earners to dictate to the rest without the restraint of law. It requires imagination to form a concept of some kinds of unionism as well as of the crimes in its name. It will not do to turn away in disgust from the revelations. It is a duty to understand and appreciate the real nature of the acts which fall without suitable impression upon senses deadened by familiarity. If readers fail to see these things it must be that their mental attitude is one of habit, as difficult to understand and as necessary to combat as that of the criminals themselves.

AN HONORED NAME.

Mr. James F. Morton, Jr., whose letter appears in another column, decries the suggestion of Mr. Alexander Konta that a Patronymic Society be founded to control the Anglicizing of foreign names, so that immigrants who wish a change of name may not thereby lose the means of family and racial identification. Mr. Morton mistakes Mr. Konta's proposal as a measure of aristocracy.

A man's character, to be sure, does not depend upon the name he bears, and it is better to be the founder of a great line than its scion. But there is virtue in an honored name. Those who hold to the doctrine that heredity is nothing, that environment is much, and that the individual will is the chief shaper, for better or worse, of one's destiny, forget that the individual inherits largely his environment, that he falls heir to family traditions and ideals which may be heartening and inspiring in the free play of his energies toward higher things. Family pride and racial pride in this sense may not be incompatible with the ideals of democracy. How would the American democracy continue to exist without its cherished traditions and pride of country, which is patriotism? And is the son of Abraham Lincoln any less a man because he remembers that he bears his father's name?

PARTY POLITICS AND THE WOMEN.

By a vote of 371 to 38 the National Woman Suffrage Association has defeated a proposed amendment to its constitution prohibiting the affiliation of its officers and members with any of the existing, or perhaps it would be better to say the still exclusively male, political parties. Hitherto it has been supposed that an unwritten law of the association excluded it from partisan relations, but in the recent campaign some of the foremost members vigorously supported the cause of certain candidates, and that led to the introduction of the proposed amendment under the leadership of Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont and Mrs. Ida Husted Harper. The vote indicates the intention of a large majority of the members to take active part in politics. Miss Jane Addams, who has been re-elected First Vice President by an enormous vote, is an ardent supporter of Theodore Roosevelt. Miss Jessie Ashley, candidate for re-election for Treasurer, who was defeated, is an adherent of the Socialists. The re-election of Dr. Anna Shaw to the Presidency is said to be merely in recognition of her long service. Many votes were recorded against her. The woman suffragists have committed themselves to a new policy of political aggressiveness.

The wisdom of their action is questionable. Mrs. Belmont and Mrs. Harper chose the wiser course and worked for the good of their own cause, which will not be helped by the development of active political antagonisms among the members. The trend of the political women, it seems, is toward either the dubious policies of Mr. Roosevelt or the Socialism of Mr. Debs. Miss Thomas, the President of Bryn Mawr, who worked vigorously for Miss Ashley's re-election, was the foremost opponent of the amendment. The retirement of Mrs. Shaw from the Presidency in favor of Miss Addams was also urged by Miss Thomas and her followers, and the President received only 291 votes, while Miss Addams was elected First Vice President by 416 out of a total of 420.

Obviously, although it is declared that Miss Ashley was defeated because of her Socialistic tendencies, the National Woman Suffrage Association has put itself in the way of needless difficulties with both the great political parties. The cause of woman suffrage has not yet been won, by any means. Only a small beginning has been made, and there is danger of a setback. With the idea spread broadcast that the political women are in favor of either Roosevelt or Debs, neither Democrats nor Republicans are likely to pay much attention to them. Indeed, the two parties may combine to baffle their aspirations. They might better have been content to uphold their unwritten law and keep out of politics a few years longer.

If Mrs. Belmont is a fair judge of her sex, the precipitate action "only "goes to show how emotional women "are, and what little dependence can "be placed upon them." Yesterday the convention acknowledged with enthusiasm that Mr. Taft, as President, had done much more for their cause in creating a National Children's Bureau, and appointing a woman to its head, than Mr. Roosevelt, who had promised but done nothing. Then they resolved to destroy their old constitution and have an entirely new one, probably to put their Progressive and Socialistic elements on firmer ground. Mrs. Belmont must be right.

THE ARENA OF EUROPE.

The points of difference between the various European Powers, around which the flights of rumors are circling, are mainly these: The ambition of Servia as to territorial gains, including a port or ports on the Adriatic; the future of Albania, in which Servia, Austria, and Italy are most deeply interested, and the final terms that Turkey may make with the allies. The danger of extended war lies in the possible intervention of Russia in opposition to the purposes of Austria and in support of those of Servia.

Despite the numerous reports of military preparation by Austria, by Russia, and by Germany, we regard it as extremely unlikely that war will come over any or all of these points. In the first place, two of them are not in themselves vital to the present or future interests of the Powers immediately concerned. All the serious and permanent advantages that Servia could get from the military possession of a port on the Adriatic could be secured by access to that sea guaranteed by a friendly agreement with Austria and by the great European Powers and by a mutually beneficial trade treaty. Assurance of an open and safe course for the commerce of both Powers to the Adriatic, and to the Aegean as well, would be of great and progressive value to both. Equally the independence or autonomy of Albania could be arranged for the common good of all concerned, whereas Albania, in whole or in part, in the hands of Servia would be a source of exhausting expenditure of strength and money and a constant menace to peace and order. It is not probable that Russia would care to place Servia in such a difficult position.

On the other hand, Austria can hardly wish to make a permanent enemy of Servia if it can be avoided. She has a large Slav population, much of it just across the Servian border, with strong racial sympathy with the Serbs and with much cause for discontent and animosity toward the present Austrian Government. If she could have the choice—and it seems open to her—to arrange a free way for her commerce to the Adriatic and the Aegean through neutral or friendly territory, or to secure her way by conquest, leaving enemies on her flank, it is highly improbable that she would choose the latter. Again it is obvious that she could not choose war without the assured support of the other parties to the Triple Alliance. What is the reasonable inference as to this? We are convinced that such support will not be given, should Austria really ask for it.

If it were given, it would necessarily call into the quarrel Russia and her associates in the Triple Entente. And not these alone. It is inconceivable that the Balkan allies would not stand by Servia in such a situation and the Triple Entente would become a quadruple one, to which the new party would bring armies, already in the field, 500,000 strong, and the navy of Greece. Supposing that it were practicable for the Triple Alliance to obtain the aid of Roumania, which by no means can be relied on, the struggle must still present itself to those tempted to bring it on as one of terrible magnitude and of appalling uncertainty. Considering these facts, and measuring soberly the relative unimportance to Austria of the claims she is reported to be making, we cannot believe that reason will not prevail.

There remains the question of the terms on which Turkey and the Balkan allies can make peace. As to this, neither the sentiment nor the opinion of the various Powers, so far as manifested, shows any prospect of great difficulty. That Turkey will have to yield the greater part of her European possessions, that her title to Constantinople and an adjacent belt will be so modified as to secure an open way through the Dardanelles—these seem to be now inevitable conditions of peace. There is nothing in them that any European Power can find materially unacceptable. Conflicting interests there are, but since the alternative to adjusting them by a general agreement is general war, it is inconceivable that the adjustment will not be reached.

THE PROGRESSIVES' EXPENSES.

Reluctantly, the National Progressive Committee, with headquarters in this city, has filed at Albany an account of its receipts and expenditures in aid of Mr. Roosevelt's campaign for the Presidency. We say reluctantly, because the Progressive Party is anything but progressive in the matter of publicity of campaign expenditures.

Mr. Munsey, one of its chief supporters, protested before the Clapp Investigating Committee at Washington against publishing the names of wealthy contributors, pleading that they be kept secret, and that solicitude be shown only for the manner in which the contributions be disbursed. Of course, Mr. Roosevelt did not want it known to whom he was beholden for $2,000,000 poured into his campaign treasury in 1904. The list was exposed, not at all by his wish, but by the inquisition of the Clapp Committee. To the exertions of its members, too, is due the knowledge the public has of $700,000 given for Mr. Roosevelt's pre-convention campaign for the Republican nomination.

The great Progressive is accustomed to scoff at the backwardness of the States. By virtue of this State's progressive law we know that Mr. Perkins, who gave $122,500 to Mr. Roosevelt's pre-convention canvass, contributed $130,000 more to the Progressive Committee and $10,000 to the State Committee, and that Mr. Munsey, whose earlier gift was $118,000, added to it $111,250 as a Bull Mooser. It was of public interest that these two contributors so largely swelled the total of $1,500,000 used in the effort to return the ex-President to the White House.

We have no doubt the list as itemized at Albany is correct. Its filers know that, on motion of the Attorney General, of the District Attorney, or of any five accredited voters, a summary inquest may be held to check up the Progressives' books, and that their falsification would be subject to a fine of $1,000, or imprisonment for a year, or both. The summary inquest and the penalty are not provided in the Federal law, although Mr. Perry Belmont tried to have them embodied therein as early as January, 1906. But President Roosevelt gave him no aid. Fortunately, the Federal law does not repeal the New York law, with which Mr. Roosevelt's committee has complied.

SENATOR RAYNER.

The loss to the Democrats through the death or retirement of any Senator of that party would just now be serious because of the even balance of power in the Senate, but the death of Senator Rayner inflicts a loss upon the party which would at any time be very heavy. The Maryland Senator had won a high place in his party and in the Nation. He had come to be recognized as a Senator of real power in debate and in constructive legislation. The retirement in the last few years of so many of the elder statesmen had somewhat weakened the reputation of the Senate as a body where the principles of the Constitution were expounded with authority, but this lack Senator Rayner has in no small measure repaired. His reputation as a sound Constitutional lawyer has been greatly enhanced by the many debates in which he has taken part, and by his sturdy defense of the fundamental law against all sorts of adventurous assailants.

Senator Rayner occasionally strayed into paths of advocacy where some of the older Democrats found it difficult to follow him, but in the main and upon most of the great questions he was sound, able, illuminating, and effective. It is assumed that the vacancy will be filled by a Republican appointed by the Governor of Maryland.

MONEY FOR THE PIERS.

Dock Commissioner Tomkins, estimating the cost of constructing eight piers between Thirty-eighth Street and Fifty-seventh Street, all but two of them to be 1,200 feet long, at $32,756,146, says that he is not yet convinced that the "uptown location is unavoidable." It seems to us that the primary question now is what we are to do—what must be avoided is already known. We must avoid and escape the loss of traffic to the port, the necessity of sending the great passenger steamships to seek accommodations at remote and inconvenient points.

The best accommodation for the liners and for their passengers is to be had by constructing these uptown piers. The cost is necessarily great, but, as the Mayor showed in his remarks at the Chamber of Commerce dinner, a way can be found to provide the necessary dock funds. It is estimated that the revenues of the department are sufficient to exempt from the debt limit $70,000,000 of dock bonds. The Appellate Division is now considering the application for this exemption.

The "graft" discovered in the Fire Department in connection with promotion examinations is a bad sign in one way. It shows that some of the members of the force are not convinced of the fairness and honesty of the application of the merit tests. Relatively large sums have been paid to get a rating among the first 100 on the eligible list. It is to be noted that not in a single instance was the rating obtained, and in only two did the misguided men get on the list at all. The only way to uproot this wretched delusion is to punish all connected with it, and that is being done.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Mistake Full of Danger. With the acquittal of Ettor, Giovannitti, and Caruso there comes also a conviction—not of these men, but of those who from the very beginning of the labor troubles at Lawrence, in what seems to have been a sort of madness, have made mistake after mistake, the natural and inevitable effect of which has been to win sympathy for and to strengthen the anti-social element there and throughout the country.

The maintenance of intolerable working conditions, the "planting" of dynamite in the houses of the mill hands, the effort to prevent the sending away of the strikers' children—these were a few of the errors that culminated in bringing an accusation of murder that was a shock to reason and common sense and could have been sustained by no jury not destitute of both.

The three Italians did or did not incite the strikers to the violence which resulted in the shooting of one of those strikers. That charge could have been brought against Ettor and his companions with propriety, for in the circumstances it was entirely plausible, and, had it been proved, a punishment adjusted to the gravity of the crime could have been inflicted with the full approval of all decent and law-abiding people. It was obvious on the face of things, however, that Ettor and Giovannitti did not murder the Lopizzo woman, for murder by definition implies intention and premeditation, and it is equally obvious that Caruso had neither, even if he did the actual killing. The indictment was therefore fatally defective from the beginning.

It is with some difficulty that even those of us who most detest the principles and the actions of the Industrial Workers of the World, as illustrated by their leaders, can refrain from seeing in the form of this prosecution another manifestation of the same spirit that led to the placing of the dynamite in those wretched tenements—of a ruthless and reckless determination to get certain troublesome fellows out of the way by fastening upon them crimes which they had not committed. Presumably no such plot was consciously devised, but had there been one this would have been the method of its execution. The acquittal of the three men gives them more than excuse to pose as martyr victims of capitalistic persecution, and it cannot be doubted that they will use the advantage thus stupidly provided for them to the utmost, or that they will now be ten times as dangerous as before.

A Few Words With Mr. Frank Harris. What Mr. Frank Harris says on any subject need not, of course, be considered of momentous importance, and, like any other foreigner innocently ambitious to acquire some American dollars by delivering a course of lectures here, he can easily be pardoned for thinking up a lot of things startling or amusing to say before his tour begins. That is "only business," and to the free advertising of himself and his purpose which he, like so many other pilgrims on a similar mission, has thus secured from this and other papers by his simple and familiar imitation of our own lost and lamented Barnum, he is entirely welcome.

One can even enjoy some of Mr. Harris's efforts to make us sit up—his assertions, for instance, that Kipling stopped growing at 14, that George Bernard Shaw is greater than any living English statesman, and that Mark Twain was a poor specimen of the man of letters. Nonsense of this sort hurts nobody, and it is not even irritating. What was irritating, however, was Mr. Harris's sneer at Arnold Bennett for writing a book about the United States after a short visit to a small part of this country. That, to use a short and ugly word that flies considerably higher in England than here, was just "nasty."

Mr. Bennett's stay in America was indeed brief—far too brief to provide him with a justification, or even an excuse, for judging the country or its inhabitants as a whole. But it was quite long enough to supply him with material for precisely the kind of a book he wrote—a book that presented with a skill, a vigor, a vivacity, and a picturesqueness rarely equaled, the impressions which the part of America which he saw made, in the time he stayed here, upon a delicately sensitive and highly intelligent mind. As Mr. Harris said, though in a sense the reverse of what he meant, this book does stamp the man—it stamps Mr. Bennett as a man able to make magnificent use of his opportunities, to be friendly without being fulsome and to be critical without being offensive. That he drew a few mistaken conclusions about us is true, but they are amazingly few, "considering," and they form far from the least interesting part of a thoroughly delightful piece of writing, the work of a real and great artist.

A Statute Beyond Amendment. Excellent reasons for not amending the Frawley law for the regulation of boxing, either as suggested by Sheriff Harburger or in any other way, were presented in the letter from Mr. Bouck White which was printed on this page yesterday. The trouble with the Frawley law is that it is all wrong, from beginning to end, and the only right thing to do with it or for it is to repeal it.

Boxing, as distinguished from prizefighting, no more needs the control of a State Commission, salaried or unsalaried, than does chess or golf, which both require the exercise of strength and skill and sometimes result in cruel injury to the participants. Boxing with admission charges, which cannot be distinguished from prizefighting, since it is fighting done by professional pugilists for money rewards under the management of men with an eye single to box office receipts, is a disreputable and socially injurious sport, and to authorize and protect it by law is a disgrace to our civilization.

Mr. White, who is a decidedly militant person, and no mollycoddle to faint at the sight of a little blood spread over a large area of skin, knows what he is talking about when he discusses this subject, and when he says that the Frawley law is rapidly turning amateur boxers into hired scrappers the statement can be confidently accepted as true.

Prizefighting, in and of itself, is a sport not quite as black as it is sometimes painted, and there is no mystery in the keen and widespread interest taken in its eminent practitioners. It has, however, a fatal and irremediable tendency to demoralize all who come in close contact with it, and it is out of harmony with what we like to think is the spirit of the age. The peculiarities of it that are mitigated by the Frawley law are not its worst; one is almost tempted to say that they are its best, since they are the stern and possibly strengthening realities of the fighting game in its old-time rigor.

FAMILY NAMES.

Mr. Konta's Suggestion for Aliens Does Not Appeal to Mr. Norton.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

To Alexander Konta, who bewails the lack of a "Patronymic Society," the hint may be given that many "native Americans" have displayed "the utmost indifference" to his jeremiads for the very reason that they are real Americans, not by a mere accident of birth, but by a thorough assimilation of the cardinal principles of democracy. We know that, except in the eyes of snobs and superficial thinkers, no person can bring honor or disgrace to any other human being than himself; and that in a rational society no person's status will be in the least affected by family considerations, by wealth, or by any other circumstance save the demonstrated personal merit of that particular individual.

*Richard Barry's sketches, appearing in several issues of The Sunday Times, while perhaps supererogatory to the well informed, are in themselves sufficient to prove the utter worthlessness of the wretched sham that masquerades as "Society," which no American worth his salt cares to enter, and whose cachet of approval is worth considerably less than the proverbial brass farthing. Let our new-come fellow-citizens assume what names they will; no one of them can gain any recognition which he does not fairly win; nor can any of the rest of us be in any way hurt by the multiplication of bearers of our ancient patronyms.

Who cares whether a given person belongs to "The Virginia Lees" or to the "Lemberg Lees"? The only question is whether he or she is a good citizen and possessed of the requisite native or acquired qualities—physical, intellectual, ethical, cultural—deserving recognition in the particular manner to which such person wishes to lay claim. The rightly won credit due Alexander Konta for his endowments or for his personal, civic, or social virtues can be neither increased nor diminished by the existence or non-existence of a million other Kontas, whether their lineage date back a thousand years, or whether the name was assumed a month ago. There are enough real problems to merit the attention of Americans possessed of a high civic spirit without worrying our heads about the preservation of a patronymic exclusiveness savoring of feudalism and an unhealthy spirit of aristocracy.

RIGHT TO BEAR ARMS.

Doctor Who Was "Held Up" Cannot Get a License.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

On the stormy night of Sept. 3 four men made an attempt to hold up our car. Two in the glare of the headlights obstructed the road and drew our attention ahead, thereby giving the other two an opportunity to approach the sides of the car from the darkness. This attack was frustrated by the chauffeur suddenly applying power before the men at the sides could gain the running boards. We did not report this incident for several reasons. The hour was late, there was a cold rain, my wife and child were in the car, and we still had a long journey before us. There was not a single light in the next town, and, moreover, what could be expected of a village constable?

On my return to New York City, I applied to a Magistrate for a permit to carry a pistol. This gentleman declared in his court room that a man had a constitutional right to possess a revolver in his house and a right to have it by his side in his automobile, provided the pistol was in view. As I wished to comply fully with the law, he directed me to make application at the precinct station in my residence district. This was done, with the following reasons for desiring a pistol permit set forth in the application blank:

1. My position as head of a family.
2. Night calls incidental to professional work.
3. Traveling at night in an automobile.
4. The attempted hold-up demonstrated the need for pistol protection.

In a few days a printed blank was received, which denied my application. Easy rubber stamp work for the Police Department, but not satisfactory to me.

Why should any man of established residence and business, bearing a good reputation, have difficulty in obtaining a pistol license from the Police Department?

THE HOUSE OF GOVERNORS

Reconvening at Richmond Next Week, Shows Another Stage of Growth.

Robert Underwood Johnson of The Century Magazine wrote to President Roosevelt, in August, 1906, suggesting that he call a conference of the Governors of the Eastern States containing mountain ranges, with the object of instituting "a great, comprehensive movement of State and National co-operation to deal preventively with the whole problem of keeping the forests of the Eastern States from going the way of those in West Virginia." There had been other neighborhood meetings of Governors. This was not the broad plan for the House of Governors, subsequently suggested by William George Jordan, but an effort was later made to give Gifford Pinchot credit for originating the movement. The facts contained in the Johnson correspondence and in The Century show, however, that neither the President nor Mr. Pinchot took very kindly to the suggestion, the President saying, by the pen of the ever-faithful Loeb, that "there must be strong public demand in the localities concerned if what you propose is to be achieved in this instance;" and, besides, the President "has always done what he could for that movement." Up rose Mr. Pinchot, also, and writing to the President, declared that "you have certainly done everything possible for the progress of this movement," thus again antedating the movement proposed by Mr. Johnson before it really began to move, or, apparently, had ever been thought of.

Mr. Jordan, impressed by the growing centralization of the Government at Washington and the "shifting, undignified, uncertain status of States' rights and the lack of uniform laws," suggested to President Roosevelt, in February, 1907, "the institution of a new House, a new representative of the people and of the States, to secure uniform legislation on those questions where the Federal Government could not act because of constitutional limitations," and upon this suggestion, which was, apparently, the "strong public demand" for which he was looking, the President called the first Conference of Governors at the White House in May, 1908. More than thirty Governors accepted the invitation to be present, and for two or three days engaged in the discussion of many questions affecting the rights of the States and the powers of the general Government, the conservation of our National resources, and other measures which would bring the States and the central Government into more harmonious relations. It was discovered speedily that "the thing wouldn't work," that there was too much Nation and not enough State in the conference, and, naturally so, the conference being held at the White House and under Federal auspices, and it was determined by the Governors to organize themselves into a deliberative body for the purpose of initiating within their jurisdiction, and by agreement with other Governors, if that should be profitable and desirable, such uniform treatment of all questions as would promote good neighborhood among the States. It was estimated that there were as many as fifty great questions outside the Federal purview that required adjustment; but which the States, each acting for itself, but all acting in concert, could adjust with advantage to the people and in the interest of good government. There was a deal of talk at this first Conference of Governors, but it was felt, and freely stated, that there was too much Roosevelt in it, or, rather, too much Federal and too little State in the proceedings, and the Governors determined among themselves that, while they would strive to keep the movement alive, they would "hoe their own row," speaking after the manner of Governors. Other conferences have been held since—one at Washington, in January, 1909, and a second in 1910; another in 1910 at Frankfort and Louisville, Ky., and another at Spring Lake, N. J., last year. A fifth conference is to be held this year, next weeks in fact, at Richmond, Va., and it is to this meeting at the old Confederate capital that the students of government are now turning their attention.

⁂

There is no question that these conferences will promote good fellowship among the States, without impairing, in the slightest degree, their independence of action or the sovereignty of their acts within their own territorial jurisdiction. Their purpose is not to make and execute laws—they have no executive or legislative powers, and their acts are only advisory; and their value, for this reason, cannot be overestimated. "If these conferences of the Governors had been in existence as an institution in 1860," said Gov. Willson of Kentucky, "there would never have been a war between the States. The issues of that day would have been settled by argument, adjustment, and compromise." When the first conference, under the call of the Governors themselves, after they had broken away from Federal leading-strings, was held, at Washington, in January, 1910, President Taft said that he regarded "this movement as of the utmost importance," and that "with this movement toward uniform legislation and agreement between the States I do not see why the Constitution may not serve our purpose always."

⁂

There are many things the Federal Government cannot do without amendment of the Constitution; but many of these things, important and necessary in themselves, can be accomplished by inter-State action. In over a hundred years, as Mr. Jordan has pointed out in one of his many able and timely discussions of the subject, only three amendments of the Constitution have been made; and there are many persons who do not think that these amendments have proved their wisdom. In fifteen years, from 1889 to 1904, as many as 435 amendments proposed in Congress failed even on the two-thirds vote necessary to refer them to the States, and, in Mr. Jordan's opinion, these questions could have been settled by "the co-operative action of the States, through the House of Governors, without requiring any constitutional amendment." Many vital questions, such as those relating to marriage and divorce, rights of married women, corporations and trusts, conservation of our National resources, pure-food laws, insurance, extradition, child labor, capital punishment, direct primaries, convict labor, prison reform, contracts, uniform system of conveyancing, inheritance tax, election reforms, and other like questions, could all the better be provided for by free and full conference between the States. It is in this "broad basis of mutual helpfulness in the unifying of our laws and of combined action in staying the insidious invasion of centralized government," that the House of Governors finds its reason for existence, and upon this basis it can be developed into one of the most influential of our political bodies. As the Governor of Kentucky has said, "It brings the States closer together in a new representation; it adds a new dignity to the office of Governor; it brings the Executive and the Legislature into a finer relation." That the movement has not taken as full hold of the confidence and imagination of the Governors as could have been desired has been due, it would seem, to the fact that all the Governors have not fully apprehended its great purpose. It was for this reason that Woodrow Wilson suggested that "we shall have to go very slowly in building up the confidence of the various Governors in this important undertaking, and it is best that it should grow from stage to stage." This is what it has been doing, and with the result, it is hoped, that at the conference in Richmond next week all the States will be represented. It is an old saying, approved by the experience of the sages and the ages, that in the abundance of counsel there is wisdom.

Gov. Mann of Virginia and the committee he has organized have made elaborate preparations for the entertainment of the visiting Governors, and, while the "business" of the conference will be direct and vital, it is certain that the social features will not be slighted. It is a bit late for the mint crop, but the julep is a hardy plant and is now at its best. The first session of the conference will be held on Dec. 3 and the last on Dec. 7, and it would seem that in seven working days the States should all be brought together in a defensive alliance against all the centralizing tendencies of the times.

AN IMAGINATIVE AGE

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The statement in The Times's editorial comment on Schikaneder, that "symbolism"—that is, romanticism as over against realism or rationalism—"is the very keynote of the most highly prized literature of this age, the breath of its life," is certainly true. That this is true, however, seems at first blush very illogical, for is not this a very materialistic, commercial, and literal age? And if, therefore, the poetry of to-day is to appeal to the men of to-day, should it not be of a very virile nature? Should it not poetize ships a quarter of a mile long, and houses a quarter of a mile high, and horizontal elevators in the shape of subways that run from floor one to floor two hundred and fifty-five, and riches that would make the fabulous Orient seem impoverished?

Yet the really great poets of to-day are visualizing the lives of children yet unborn; or are they making some poetic guesses about the spirits of men long since dead; or they are trying to rhyme the relations of the men now living with the condition of those who have already lived, or of those who have never lived.

But this is just what we should expect. Symbolism and romanticism in literature are the natural outcome of this to be sure commercial but certainly most imaginative age of all ages. Fancy is today roaming in a way that could only please a Keats or a Shelley. It requires as much imagination to rebuild the Grand Central Station without stopping a train as it requires to write a "Hamlet" or a "Sunken Bell." The two types of imagination are very high and very different. But it is only a case of one trying to keep up with the other. Each type does not only what it can, but what will please its opposite. We can appreciate the tall house by seeing it or by being obliged to live in it.

There would, therefore, be no reason why Maeterlinck should write a drama glorifying steel girders incased in brick. The realistically imaginative man wants something different in poetry from that with which he comes in contact in daily life. And this the poet gives him. If there were no subways, for example, a drama or a poem picturing them in all their dreadful glory would be more romantic, more symbolic, than anything ever written in connection with Orpheus and Eurydice. Hence the poetic symbolism of this imaginative age, which, so far as the external, verbal workmanship is concerned, goes back to the romanticism at the beginning of the nineteenth century. A straight line can be drawn, for example, in a number of instances, from Hauptmann to Maeterlinck, and from Maeterlinck to the German Novalis, the most romantic of them all.

JEFFERSON AND TILDEN.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"E. A. E." asks why Tilden's old home should not be bought by the Nation, as well as Monticello. As asking a question implies a wish for an answer, one can readily be given. Mr. Untermyer presumably bought Graystone and is the rightful owner of it. This cannot be said of the person who is called the owner of Monticello. It was not acquired by purchase, but by breaking the will of Commodore Levy, who bequeathed it to the people of the United States, and should the Government refuse the bequest the property was to go to the State of Virginia. The will was most unjustifiably set aside, and the Levy family took the property which Commodore Levy had bought for the sum of $2,700.

Another answer to the above-mentioned question might be that Thomas Jefferson wrote the Declaration of Independence and Tilden did not.

Whose Imagination?

From The Tribune.

The story that Mr. Morgan's priceless collections which he was going to place in the Metropolitan Museum of Art are likely to be withdrawn from the city and established at Hartford is evidently the product of a too fearful imagination.

From The Sun.

Mr. Morgan's librarian, Miss Greene, said yesterday that Mr. Morgan had been worried for some time by the enforced confinement in packing boxes of his collections. It was true, she said, that he was considering removing them to the building erected in Hartford as a memorial to his father.

"I have done nothing criminal in fetching this collection to this country," Miss Greene quoted Mr. Morgan as saying. "Here it is. If this city does not appreciate its opportunity I shall send it to a city that does."

Mr. Morgan, according to Miss Greene, suspects that the Board of Estimate does not appreciate the risk of injury to the collection which the delay entails.

THE TRULY PROPER DOCTOR.

Who comes upon his knowledge by no ordinary plan.
For he must not experiment on any human thing,
But must to our relief and cure the latest science bring.

CHORUS.

Oh, Doctor This, and Doctor That, please come and heal us quick,
You are a demon when we're well, an angel when we're sick!

A truly proper doctor should weep at all our aches,
But keep his understanding clear, lest he should make mistakes.
He must inspire confidence, but he should never bluff,

CHORUS.

Oh, Doctor This, and Doctor That, please come and cure our pain!
Perform a miracle or two, and make us well again.
We do not hold with nasty drugs, we shudder at the knife,
We scoff at mental healing, but—you'll have to save our life!

Leave that to those who thrust and crush in modern business strife,
But why should he be paid, whose job is only saving life?

CHORUS.

Oh, Doctor This, and Doctor That, we're feeling well again!
And though you tended us, we're sure that Nature cured the pain!
We care not for your bandages, your powders nor your skill,
Pray take them all away, and oh! pray take away that bill!

MISS STODDARD WEDS EUGENE B. REYNOLDS

HER BRIDESMAIDS IN PINK

Col. and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt Among the Guests—Sail for Europe on Their Honeymoon.

The wedding of Miss Evelyn Garretson Stoddard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Stoddard of this city, and Eugene Beaumont Reynolds of Wilkesbarre, Penn., was celebrated yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church.

The chancel of the church was banked with ferns and palms, broken by clusters of white and pink chrysanthemums. While the guests were arriving a musical programme was rendered by Mr. Safford, the organist, assisted by Miss Maude Morgan, harpist.

The ushers were Percy C. McLean, Neil Chrisman, Harold A. Nugent, John B. Reynolds, Edgar L. Marston, and Harold B. Fell.

Miss Ruth Reynolds, a sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor. She wore a blue satin gown with a pink belt and panel of pink chiffon and a cutaway coat of duchess lace. Her hat was of blue crêpe de chine trimmed with lace and pink velvet ribbon. She carried pink roses.

The bridesmaids included the Misses Mary Lodge McKee and Elsie M. Schmidt of this city; Carol T. Coe of Englewood, N. J., and Dorothy Ethridge of Rome, N. Y. They wore gowns of pink satin, fashioned similar to the maid of honor's, with hats to match, and carried Ward roses.

Warren M. Reynolds acted as best man for his brother. Mr. Stoddard gave his daughter in marriage. The Rev. Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin performed the ceremony.

A reception was held afterward in the apartments of the bride's parents at the Hotel Ansonia, Broadway and Seventy-third Street, where the decorations consisted of pink and white chrysanthemums and palms.

Mr. Reynolds and his bride sailed this morning on the Mauretania to spend their honeymoon in Europe, and on their return they will reside in Wilkesbarre.

Among the guests at the wedding were Col. and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar L. Marston, Mrs. C. A. Stephens, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Perkins, Miss Dorothy Perkins, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Reynolds, parents of the bridegroom; Mr. and Mrs. Pierce B. Reynolds, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Cortelyou, Frank A. Munsey, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Herbert, Miss Gertrude Herbert, Mr. and Mrs. Timothy L. Woodruff, Mr. and Mrs. Darwin P. Kingsley, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Hoyt, Mr. and Mrs. N. S. Meldrum, Judge and Mrs. Adelbert P. Rich, Mr. and Mrs. William R. Cook, Mr. and Mrs. James Creelman, Mr. and Mrs. William C. Freeman, Miss Freeman, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Vanderhoef, and G. W. Vanderhoef, Jr.

Also Mr. and Mrs. Hunter S. Marston, Mr. and Mrs. N. Wyckoff Vanderhoef, Mrs. Eugene Marston, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Kerens, Mr. and Mrs. James R. McKee, Benjamin H. McKee, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Reynolds, Gen. and Mrs. Theodore Bingham, Claude S. Stephens, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Coe, Mr. and Mrs. William P. Sutherland, Dr. and Mrs. C. Adelbert Becker, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Seitz, Mr. and Mrs. Bainbridge Colby, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Blair, William H. Stephens, and Claude Stoddard.

TO EUROPE ON HONEYMOON.

Miss Virginia Mercer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Mercer of 53 West Seventy-second Street, was married to Z. Power Halpin of this city, at 11 o'clock yesterday morning in the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes, 142d Street and Convent Avenue. The Rev. Father Sheridan performed the ceremony, after which there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents.

The bride's gown was of white satin trimmed with old lace, and her tulle veil was caught up with a chaplet of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of white roses and her only ornament was a string of pearls, the gift of the bridegroom.

The best man was Dr. Leo Halpin, and the ushers were Albert Gannon, Elmer Reinhard, William Kavanaugh, and Dr. Charles Halpin Nammack.

Mr. Halpin and his bride sailed for Europe this morning on the Mauretania. Upon their return they will make their home in this city.

LEGAL MATINEE AT BELASCO THEATRE

"THE WOMAN" SEEN FIRST

The audience at the Belasco Theatre yesterday afternoon, which had come to see the alleged resemblance in William C. De Mille's "The Woman" and Abraham Goldknopf's "Tainted Philanthropy, or the Spirit of the Time," was in much the same state of mind as the countryman at the Zoo, who, contemplating a giraffe, insisted that "there aint no sich animile."

For, as Mr. Goldknopf's queer specimen was unfolded in all seriousness by the splendid cast, it seemed incredible that such a play could have been offered for presentation and then form the basis of a suit for plagiarism. Theatrical people who were present expressed themselves freely on the subject. It was argued that such a suit involved not only the time and money of the defendants, but clogged the courts with useless litigation.

Judge Holt of the Federal Court, for whose particular benefit the two performances were presumably arranged, saw "The Woman" in the morning and "Tainted Philanthropy" in the afternoon. As he is to give a decision in the case, he contented himself with remarking that he had been entertained at both performances. But he would make no comparisons.

As a matter of fact, such a thing as comparison is practically impossible, for "The Woman" is a well-constructed, intelligently written, and highly interesting play. "Tainted Philanthropy," on the other hand, is written without a suggestion of the knowledge of stagecraft, with dialogue that is frequently ungrammatical, more frequently absurd, and with a succession of supposedly serious incidents that kept yesterday's audience in a state of helpless laughter. In fact, it is most unusual to see an audience in a theatre in such a continuous paroxysm of mirth.

Mr. De Mille's play, "The Woman," had a long run at the Republic Theatre. Its story and incidents are, therefore, tolerably familiar. But Mr. Goldknopf's play may have been given for the last time, so details are worth recording.

To begin with, the scene is the drawing room in the residence of Mrs. Dalton, who, when first disclosed, appears to be a middle-aged woman with a desire and a capacity for making herself look younger. She wants her daughter, Grace, to help with her dressing, and presently exclaims against father, who "was too honest." Then it appears that Grace is in love with Theodore Thompson, who is poor but honest, while the mother has designs on Jack Bird, a millionaire. The pair discuss whether Bird has been "making eyes" at Grace or her mother, the latter inclining to the view that the attention is meant for her.

"Wake up daughter," she says, "I assure you it is I he is after—not you."

To which Grace dutifully answers, "I sincerely wish that to be the case—Oh! I above others would be most delighted."

There is an explosion outside, and John Watts, described by the author as "an elderly gentleman of about 55 years, with a refined look," enters. He is accompanied by four ambulance surgeons.

And though John insists that he is not hurt the surgeons bandage him carefully, repeating several times the words: "Further developments," presumably intended to have a sinister and symbolic suggestion, as they are again dragged in later. Then, while the stage waits, with no action whatsoever, Grace goes from the room, dons a nurse's uniform and returns to attend the "wounded man."

The servant enters with a note. And it is only necessary to print the dialogue and stage directions to convey an idea of why at this point yesterday's audience had one of it's best laughs.

Mrs. Dalton, (looking at the envelope)—"From the mortgagee."

(John utters a heavy sigh)—"Well, at last we shall be able to get away from this New York furnace." (Opens the letter quickly, turns pale, and drops the letter.) "Cannot renew the mortgage. Oh, God, what are we to do now? (She staggers backward, but is caught by Harold, who is standing near her.)

Meanwhile, having recovered sufficiently, she wants to know of Grace if she doesn't think Theodore "can help us out with some credit." But Theodore has lost all his money in copper speculation, and now appears, a sadly worn young man, who is drinking himself to death in order to sacrifice himself for Grace's good.

In the intervals of conversation he takes a silver-mounted flask from his pocket, and surreptitiously has a pull at it, Grace in the meantime trying to convince him that he will be all right in time.

Mr. Watts repeatedly mentions that it is a "NASTY WORLD"; that Jack Bird is his master to whom he has sold himself for a crust of bread. But he agrees to bring Bird to the house, in the hope that he is really interested in the mother. Then Theodore thinks of killing himself but puts the revolver back in his pocket after deciding that his death would only "help to intensify her feelings toward me."

A week is supposed to have elapsed when the curtain rises on the second act, and only two days more remain in which to arrange to pay the mortgage. Grace, pressed from all sides, is sought by Watts, who has promised her mother that he will try to persuade her to see the millionaire. She agrees to the proposition, whereupon Watts tells her that his master will only call if he has a "written guarantee from her." He adds that it is a "nasty world," 'n fact, mentions the matter several times in quick succession, as he does the fact that his chief is "pe-cu-liar." Grace refers to the latter as an "adventurous coward," but thinks that she will have to give in, and expresses the hope that he "won't press the wedding." And Theodore, presently, finding her in tears, advises her not to cry over "spilt milk." Which is good enough advice seeing that upon Bird's arrival he immediately orders champagne to celebrate the engagement.

Presently, overcome by the proceedings, Grace faints, whereupon Bird ejaculates, "fainting spells," and says, "that's a kind of sickness I do not like." Mrs. Dalton tries to reassure him, with the information that she was affected the same way when her engagement was announced. "And," she adds, "she is just like her mother."

"That," says the millionare bridegroom, very sternly, "will have to be seen."

But Jack Bird doesn't break his engagement and the third act sees Grace in her wedding gown sadly declaiming against what the others refer to as "the greatest moment of her life." The servant comes on with a box, containing the bridal bouquet, tries to break the cord, then goes out and gets a carving knife, with which she cuts it. She leaves the knife lying on the table, and, of course, Grace encounters it presently.

"What a strange coincidence," she observes. "Co-in-ci-dence. Nay, Providence—Fate. (She lifts the knife.) God sent it. sent it in time. It glitters like everything about me. About the bride—bride of death."

But, like her lover in the first act, she decides that it would be selfish to kill herself and leave him alone to suffer. And she sits down at the piano and begins to play Chopin's Funeral March. Whereupon Watts enters, looks around with a shudder, observes the bridal bouquet, and ejaculates:

Ah-h, nasty world!

It is impossible to convey any sense of the play's extravagance or the ludicrous effects of much that happens, but yesterday's audience certainly had the time of its life. Mr. Belasco has staged the piece with absolute fidelity to the directions in the manuscript and with his familiar attention to details. And the cast was uniformly excellent. Particularly successful in roles more than ordinarily difficult under the circumstances were Helen Freeman, Albert Bruning, Milton Sills, and Joseph Kilgour, while a word of praise is due to Teresa Maxwell-Conover and Eugene O'Brien. All contribute, in fact, to the general satisfaction with which the play was received. There were loud calls for the author, but he did not respond.

Yesterday afternoon's audience was unanimous in its verdict.

DINNER TO MRS. CLEVELAND.

Mrs. H. F. Dimock Entertains for ex-President's Widow and Her Fiance.

Mrs. Henry F. Dimock gave a dinner of twenty-four covers last night at her residence, 25 East Sixtieth Street, for Mrs. Grover Cleveland, and her fiancé, Prof. Thomas J. Preston.

This is the first entertainment Mrs. Dimock has given since the death several years ago of Mr. Dimock, and will be the last this season in her New York house as she is going to Washington on Monday to spend the Winter at 1731 I Street.

Mrs. Cleveland came to town yesterday and was Mrs. Dimock's guest for the night only. She will return to Princeton to-day.

Mrs. Dimock's guests last evening included beside Mrs. Cleveland and Prof. Preston, ex-Ambassador Joseph H. Choate and Mrs. Choate, ex-Ambassador Gen. Horace Porter, Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Winslow of Paris, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Allen Wickes, Gen. Nelson Herrick Henry and Mrs. Henry, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge, Mrs. Susan Dimock Hutchinson, Miss Nora Godwin, Mrs. Daniel Lamont, Mrs. Frederick Thompson, Augustus D. Juilliard, Francis Lynde Stetson, Rutgers Jewett, Col. Munroe, and Dr. Charles D. Walcott of Washington, D. C.

MR. WERRENRATH'S RECITAL.

An Interesting Programme, with Folksongs and American Songs.

Mr. Reinald Werrenrath is one of the most enterprising of local singers; his recitals rarely fail to offer something of unusual musical interest. Mr. Werrenrath is also truly artistic in his manner of presenting his material, and his voice, not very powerful, has excellent quality and fine schooling, and his style of singing charm and artistic finish. Last evening he had a number of interesting folksongs of different kinds; a traditional Surrey air, three Irish songs, one of which, taken down from the lips of an Irish singer, he sang without accompaniment; and a set of five Ojibway Indian melodies, compiled by the late Frederick R. Burton, and arranged by Arthur Whiting.

In his "art songs" Mr. Werrenrath made an unconventional selection, an arrangement of one of Thomas Morley's part songs, songs by Grieg, Jensen, the New Yorkers Dr. Morris Class, Bruno Huhn, and Victor Harris, the Chicagoan John Alden Carpenter, and Hermann Löhr. Mr. Werrenrath sang with great taste and artistic finish, and generally with very clear and intelligible diction. Such singing was a pleasure to hear. Mr. Charles A. Baker, his accompanist, somewhat magnified his office, for a little less tone would have been advantageous to the singer's effect.

MISS ALMA BOCK A BRIDE.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis C. Bock Married to R. H. Lippincott, Jr.

The wedding of Miss Alma Bock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis C. Bock of 1,380 Lexington Avenue, to Richard Henry Lippincott, Jr., of this city, took place at 8 o'clock last evening at St. James's Lutheran Church, Madison Avenue and Seventy-third Street. The Rev. Junius B. Remensnyder officiated.

The bride wore a gown of white brocaded satin trimmed with duchess and princess lace. Her tulle veil was held about the face with a cap of lace and caught with sprays of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley.

Miss Eleanor Lippincott, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor. She wore blue brocaded satin and carried a bouquet of pink chrysanthemums. The bridesmaids were the Misses Florence E. Kroehle, Fannie Arnold Van Arsdale, Eleanor Roemer, and Louise M. Orth. They wore pink brocade gowns and carried pink chrysanthemums. Miss Marion Bock, sister of the bride, was flower girl. She wore a white lingerie frock over pink satin and carried a basket of rose petals.

Walter Joyce was Mr. Lippincott's best man, and the ushers were Paul M. White, Louis C. Bock, Jr., S. Haberman, and William H. Carpenter.

After the church ceremony a reception was held at the Hotel Savoy and later the couple left for the South, where they will spend their honeymoon. They will make their home in this city.

SLOANE-KERNAN NUPTIALS

UTICA, N. Y., Nov. 26.—The wedding of Miss Adelaide Kernan, daughter of Mrs. N. E. Kernan, to Charles O'Conor Sloane, son of T. O'Conor Sloane of South Orange, N. J., took place at 11 o'clock this morning in St. John's Church. Cardinal Gibbons, who officiated and participated in the nuptial mass, wore his full pontifical robes, with mitre and cross. The nuptial mass was celebrated by Mgr. J. S. M. Lynch, D. S., rector of the church.

The bride wore a white satin gown, trimmed with shadow lace and embroidered with seed pearls. Her veil was of tulle, and was held in place with a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley.

Miss Florence Kernan was her sister's maid of honor. The other attendants were Miss Natalie Kernan of Syracuse, N. Y., Mrs. A. M. Anderson, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Phoebe K. Craig of South Orange, N. J.

Mr. Sloane had as best man his brother, John E. Sloane, and the ushers were Nicholas and Michael Kernan of Utica, R. W. McBeth and F. D. Fackenthal of New York, Arthur M. Anderson and Arthur Dillon of South Orange, and Angus Clarke of Utica.

After the church ceremony a wedding breakfast was held at the home of the bride's mother, which was decorated with chrysanthemums, Autumn leaves, and American beauty roses.

Celebrate Their Wooden Wedding.

Dr. and Mrs. Arthur D. Mittendorf of 830 Park Avenue celebrated their wooden wedding last evening at the St. Regis. There were about 180 guests present at the dinner, the favors including rolling pins, butter pats, soup ladles, and jumping jacks. A cabaret show was given during the dinner, after which there was dancing in the marble ballroom.

MRS. GOULD FAVORS A 6-YEAR PRESIDENCY

WOULD REMOVE TEMPTATION

Mrs. George J. Gould, who is an earnest advocate of woman suffrage, has become a strong supporter of the proposal to extend the Presidential term to six years. At her home, 657 Fifth Avenue, she said yesterday:

"The Presidency of the United States has become the most powerful station in the world. So much responsibility and work devolve upon the incumbent of that high office that I sometimes marvel at the ability with which Presidents meet the obligations that are imposed upon them. I have observed that Presidents sometimes succumb to the blandishments of their advisers and permit their appointments to public office and their recommendations as to legislation to be influenced by their desire for renomination and re-election. This temptation should be removed.

The Presidential term should be extended to six years and Presidents should be ineligible for re-election. The rsult, I am confident, would be a higher standard of public service and a greater devotion to the interests of the people. Experience has shown that it requires some time for a President to become accustomed to the duties of his office and to make the wheels of administration and legislation move in the right direction. Four years do not seem to be enough. The additional two years will give opportunity for the working out of reforms and for carrying to completion Presidential policies.

"The experience of France, which makes the Presidential term seven years, has, in the main, proved highly successful. If the Chief Executive were elected for six years there would be less tendency to upset the business of the country. The turmoil and disturbance caused by a Presidential campaign every four years would be avoided. I must acknowledge, however, that the last Presidential campaign caused less disturbance to business than any campaign within my recollection."

COUNTESS OF FLANDERS DEAD

BRUSSELS, Nov. 26.—Princess Marie of Belgium, Countess of Flanders, and mother of King Albert, died here this morning. She had been ill from pneumonia for several days.

Princess Marie was regarded by the Belgians as one of the most talented royal Princesses in Europe. She was an accomplished artist in water colors and had exhibited paintings at the Brussels Fair. The literary salon of the Countess has been a feature of Brussels social life for forty years, and had been the gathering place of authors of every rank. The habitues of her salon have included Alexandre Dumas fils, Victorien Sardou, Guy de Maupassant, Robert Browning, Prince Napoleon, King Oscar of Sweden, Queen Amelie of Portugal, and Carmen Sylva of Roumania.

The Countess of Flanders was born Nov. 17, 1845, and was married in Berlin on April 25, 1867, to Philippe, Prince of Belgium and Count of Flanders. Prince Philippe died in November, 1905.

Mrs. George Lamy Dies in Paris.

Cable dispatches announcing the death of Emilie de Mauriac, wife of Prof. George Lamy and daughter of Jean Octave de Mauriac, have been received by relatives in Flushing. She died at her residence in Paris, France. Mrs. Lamy was well known along the north shore of Long Island, and went to Europe to make her home ten years ago.

ROBERT KNIGHT DIES AT 86.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 26.—Robert Knight, the largest owner of cotton mills in the world, died to-day at his home, in Elmwood. He was caught in a heavy rain on Nov. 14, and a severe cold developed, from which he did not recover.

Robert Knight was born in Old Warwick, R. I., Jan. 8, 1826. He was a student for a short time at Pawcatuck Academy, Westerly, R. I. At the age of 8 he went to work in a cotton mill, and for nine years was in the employment of the Cranston (R. I.) print works and other cotton factories. In 1843 he became a clerk in the store of his brother, Benjamin B. Knight, at Providence. Four years later he leased with Z. Parker a cotton mill and bleachery at Arnold's Bridge, and later purchased it, becoming sole owner in 1851. In 1852 he bought a half interest in the grain and flour business of his brother, Benjamin, adding at the same time to his manufacturing holdings in Massachusetts and Rhode Island. He was married March 5, 1849, to Miss Josephine Louisa Webster of Providence.

Upon the death of his brother Benjamin, in 1898, Mr. Knight became owner of twenty-two spinning, weaving, and finishing establishments. These plants have more than 500,000 spindles, about 12,000 looms, and 6,500 operatives.

Mr. Knight was President of the National Bank of Commerce and the People's Savings Bank of Providence and was a Director of the New York, Providence & Boston Railroad Company and of several insurance companies.

John P. Hudson.

John P. Hudson, for the last sixteen years Calendar Clerk of the Supreme Court in Kings County, died yesterday at his home, 1,397 Dean Street, Brooklyn. He was born sixty-eight years ago in St. Andrew's, New Brunswick, and was graduated from the University of Ottawa and the Harvard Law School. Coming to New York, Mr. Hudson became associated with the law firm of which Gen. Benjamin F. Tracy was the head. In 1892 he was appointed as clerk of the old City Court of Brooklyn. Four years later he became Calendar Clerk of the Supreme Court in Kings County. Mr. Hudson was a Trustee of the Roman Catholic Asylum of Brooklyn and a member of the Emerald Society, St. Patrick's Society, and the Knights of Columbus. He is survived by his wife and two daughters.

Responsibility

To the business man of integrity, the professional man of honor, or the conscientious executor or trustee, the word responsibility has a significance of large importance. It also conveys a peculiarly personal thought to those having others dependent upon them, and for whose future welfare they are anxious to provide.

One of the best means by which to provide for those dependent upon you is to buy sound investment bonds, as they will surround your principal with strong safeguards and at the same time yield the income to which your money is entitled—approximately

Idle Money

Short Term Notes are an attractive means of investing funds which are not in use for the time being, but which will be required at some specified time in the near future. They command an active market, give a good return and, due to their approaching maturity, fluctuate but little in price.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Firmer, but Very Dull—High Call Money Renewal—More Gold Comes.

The engagement of $500,000 additional gold in London, accompanied by a decline in sterling exchange, which carried it to the lowest rate since December, 1907, and a drop in the call money rate in the afternoon to 3 per cent. did much to offset the influence of a repetition yesterday morning of a 12 per cent. money rate after a majority of the banks had renewed their standing loans at 11 per cent. A more cheerful spirit in the foreign markets, which found practical reflection here in the purchase of a moderate amount of American stocks for foreign account, was the other chief influence of the day which brought some recovery in Stock Exchange prices after three days of successive declines. Business, however, was greatly restricted, and it was plain that few market operators were disposed to enter upon any extensive commitments in stocks in the face of such money rates as borrowers had to pay yesterday morning.

Some of the factors which account for the upturn this week in money rates will not prevail beyond another week at the most, but sight should not be lost of the fact that while the abruptness of this week's advance in call money caused some surprise, the movement itself, so far as its general tendency was concerned, was entirely in keeping with the forces which have been effective in the money market in recent months. It is not possible to apportion accurately the influence exerted by the several factors entering into this advance in call rates, but the expectation of an early call from the Controller for a report from the National banks undoubtedly played a part in the calling of loans here by interior institutions, and in increasing the cash demands upon New York banks, which, in part, are reflected in the loss of over $6,800,000 to the Sub-Treasury since last Friday. The inconvenience to which this calling in of out-of-town loans in New York is subjecting the banks here is a necessary sequel to the relief which the banks at this centre previously obtained through the shifting of loans to the interior at a time when this helped the banks here to maintain their required percentage of reserves. Such experiences as those of the last two days are an inevitable consequence of the system under which our banking is done. They serve to emphasize the faults of that system all the more strongly because of the contrast between the present stringency in the call money market and the ease which so long prevailed there with but very brief interruptions after the trying experiences of 1907. The further decline in sterling suggested that the forces governing our position in the international exchanges are carrying us toward a situation in which the reluctance of our bankers to take gold abroad will be offset by the necessity of choosing between gold importations or accepting an unwarranted loss in the realization of this market's credits abroad. Of course, if the fears of some of our bankers that further American purchases of gold in London would cause unsettlement in the money market there are justified, a check would be put upon the export of gold to New York. At the moment, however, it looks as if this market would be in a good position to obtain a considerable share of the gold which is due in London next Monday.

Tight as the money position is at the moment, bankers are giving very practical expression to their belief in the establishment of a period of ease in money after the opening of the new year, for they are buying six months' commercial paper at somewhat lower rates to-day than those generally quoted a fortnight ago. One of the anomalies of the situation which has prevailed for some time, and which still exists, is the fact that the market for commercial paper at interior banking points is on a lower level than here in New York. The novelty of Texas banks being willing to purchase Eastern commercial paper on a lower basis than the banks here in the East themselves feel able to accept attests at once the great prosperity which the great State of the southwest is enjoying this year, and the handicaps under which the banks here operate in a season like the present. These handicaps, temporarily at least, have their advantage for the banks themselves in the shape of increased earnings, but this is poor compensation to the community as a whole for the inconvenience attendant upon the conditions which prevail at such times as these in the New York money market.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call loaned on Stock Exchange collateral at 3@12 per cent., with the last loan at 4 per cent. Most of the day's loans were made at 11 per cent.

Time money rates were 6 per cent. bid for sixty days, to four months, and 5½@6 per cent. for five and six months.

New York Clearing House statement: Exchanges, $364,226,498; balances, $17,986,459; Sub-Treasury credit balance, $318,612.

The local banks have lost $6,834,000 on their Sub-Treasury operations since Friday.

FOREIGN RATES.

Discount rates abroad yesterday were: London, 4 13-16@4⅞ per cent. for short bills, and 4⅝@4 11-16 per cent. for three months' bills; Paris, 3¾ per cent., and Berlin, 5⅝@5⅞ per cent. Money was 3¼@3½ per cent. in London and 4½@5 per cent. in Berlin.

The Paris check rate on London was 25 francs 22½ centimes, and the Berlin check rate on London was 20 marks 48½ pfennigs.

CABLE AND SIGHT RATES.

Delayed Grain Movement.

If the Minneapolis & St. Louis lives up to Newman Erb's expectations, earnings in November will be as large as for October. Ordinarily the business has shown a loss from October, but it appears that most of the grain that the railroads have moved in the Middle West so far this Fall represented last year's crop. Consequently, the grain movement ought to continue large for some months to come, and December's business should be large unless it is interfered with by unfavorable weather conditions. The Western farmers have been troubled by a lack of storage room. Not only have the cribs and barns been filled, but it has been necessary to leave a large amount of corn in the fields.

September Railway Returns.

The summary made up by the Bureau of Railway Economics indicates that while the railways of the United States did a better business in September last than for the corresponding month of 1911, the rate of increase established in August was not maintained. Figures for 90 per cent. of the country's railways showed an increase of $5,896,000 in net revenues for September, against an increase of $13,865,000 in August. The increase in net revenue amounted to $21 per mile of line for the month. Gross earnings per mile of line increased 6.5 per cent., the operating expenses 7.3 per cent., and the net 5.1 per cent.

High Rate for Money.

The average rate at which most loans were made yesterday was 11 per cent. The rate for renewals has not been as high as that before since Dec. 31, 1907, when the average rate was 17 per cent. and the top price for the day 20 per cent. The highest point touched by call money yesterday was the same as on the previous day, 12 per cent. In January, 1910, call money loaned at 14 per cent., but the average rate for that day was only 7 per cent.

Treasury Aid Not Expected.

As usual, the advance in call money served to bring out reports again that the Treasury Department would be asked to make special deposits with New York banks. It was learned that not only had the leading bankers no intention of asking the Secretary of the Treasury to increase the amount of Government money on deposit here, but that they would be rather averse to going upon record as believing that the present situation called for any such action.

Finding Work for Mr. Loeb.

With the approach of March 4, friends of William Loeb, Jr., Collector of the Port of New York, have been speculating upon his future. A very plausible report yesterday was that Gen. Thomas H. Hubbard, President of the International Banking Corporation, would soon relinquish his duties to become Chairman, and that Mr. Loeb would be made President. When this story was brought to Mr. Loeb's attention he said that there was nothing in it, and that he could not imagine how it had arisen. The report persisted in spite of the Collector's denial.

Atchison in October.

The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé had another big month in October, with gross earnings of $11,863,000. That was an increase of $1,417,000 over last year. Operating expenses were $7,822,000, an increase of $1,089,000, leaving net earnings of $4,041,000, a gain of $373,000. For the first four months of this year the Atchison's gross revenues have shown an increase of $4,189,000, while the operating income, amounting to $12,247,000, showed a gain of $1,892,000.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

The decline in call money rates helped to stimulate buying on the Consolidated Stock Exchange in the late afternoon. The market ended strong at or close to the best figures for the day. It was evident from the opening of business at 9:30 o'clock that more hopeful views prevailed regarding the averting of a general European war. Business on the opening call was active, with prices reflecting general fractional improvements, compared with Monday's closing quotations. There was a sale of Pittsburgh Coal at 22½, the only transaction in that stock reported in Wall Street during the day.

Stockholders Restrain Merger.

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 26.—A restraining order, enjoining Thomas R. Marks, President of the Great Western Life Insurance Company, and Frank Blake, State Insurance Commissioner, from approving any merger of the Great Western with the International Life Insurance Company of St. Louis was issued by Judge Van Valkenburgh in the Federal Court here late to-day. Application for the order was made by a minority of Great Western stockholders.

METAL MARKET REPORTS.

At the Metal Exchange yesterday trading was quiet. Copper was steady. Tin was a shade higher. Spelter was down 5 points. The closing bid and asked prices follow:

Market ended quiet. Spanish pig lead £17 17s 6d, down 2s 6d. Spelter, £26, down 10s. Cleveland warrants, 67s 9d, up 1½d.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES

There was a restricted volume of sales on the curb yesterday, although the tobacco issues continued active. There were sales of 5,700 shares of Tobacco Products preferred, which carried the price through par, but the closing quotation was made at 100⅝. United Cigar Stores, in which 6,500 shares were sold, broke from 115⅝ to 113¾, closing at a point recovery from the low. British American moved within a range of only ¼, closing at 23⅛. Giroux Mining was a shade weaker, at 4⅜, while Braden Copper closed at 9. There were practically no dealings in the bond market.

*Deficit.

The condition of the United States Treasury at the beginning of business to-day was: Working balance, $89,499,243; in banks and Philippine Treasury, $33,815,013; total of general fund, $146,879,723.

BOURSES OF EUROPE

Prices Firmer in London, Paris, and Berlin on the Improved International Situation.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 27.—The Times in its City article this morning says:

"The demand for money was brisk throughout yesterday. The rates on short fixtures were firmer; the terms of fortnightly loans to the Stock Exchange the same as at the last settlement. The discount rate was a shade firmer for three months' paper, but all bills were still very scarce, and those who wished to obtain two, four, or six months' maturities were obliged to make concessions.

"Business on the Stock Exchange was very restricted yesterday, partly owing to the fact that members were occupied with the carry-over, and partly because of the great delay on long-distance cables, owing to the disturbances caused by the gale. The tone of the markets was much more cheerful than on Monday, and in most instances prices closed higher on balance, operators taking a more optimistic view of the foreign political situation. Continental Bourses were small buyers of their specialties; hence the firmness of Canadian Pacific, Peruvian Corporation preference, Rio Tinto, and De Beers. Although there was very little business passing between London and New York, American shares were steady."

PARIS, Nov. 26.—Prices were generally firm on the Bourse to-day.

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—Prices on the Boerse were strong to-day upon the more reassuring political news from the German, English, and Russian Governments.

The Solution of An Economic Problem

Investors generally are seeking to increase their income because their living expenses have increased. We have helped many of them solve this vital problem. We have done so by giving them all the facts down to date regarding the various securities issued by the Public Utility Companies that we have developed, control and operate. These securities yield investors 6%, and disinterested appraisals of the several properties and their demonstrated earning power show that the money invested in them is safe, and the interest and dividends certain.

Some Bankers Think Removal of Collection Fee Will Swell New York Funds $100,000,000.

CHECK PAYMENTS SLOW NOW

New System of Free Exchange in Five States Is Expected to Speed Settlements to Almost Daily.

Bankers in this city expect a very substantial addition to their deposits, as well as in their business generally, if the Clearing House Association lets down the bars in collection charges throughout Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, and New Jersey, as recommended by its special committee.

The increase in deposits will be due to the return of funds withdrawn from New York and placed in other cities in order to avoid such charges. While it is impossible to ascertain the amount involved, it has long been known that many corporations and individuals have reduced their balances in New York since collection charges were imposed and have opened large accounts in such places as Jersey City, Newark, and Hoboken, because they could deposit there at par any checks received on other points in New Jersey, whereas if they deposited them in New York banks they would be debited $1 per $1,000 for collection.

The way the system works is this: A merchant receiving checks from a scattered territory keeps a comparatively small account in New York, but does not deposit in it his country items. He may have a large account in Philadelphia, to which he sends his Pennsylvania items; another in Boston, where he sends his New England checks, and so on. Under the proposed system, the New York banks would collect free of charge all his checks on points in the five States named, and he would naturally send them here, as in other respects it is more convenient to keep his principal account in the financial and business centre. Banks in Newark have built up quite a business with merchants located in this city by agreeing to make their country collections without charge. These accounts have reduced by so much the deposits that would otherwise have been made in New York banks.

Just how much the return of all these funds to this city will amount to nobody can say, but it has been conservatively estimated at $100,000,000, and may easily reach a considerably larger figure.

The return of deposits also means an increase in other business, as a depositor in a certain bank naturally takes his other banking operations to the same place. Closer relations between the New York banks and New York merchants especially would necessarily put the banks in a more friendly attitude before the mercantile community.

The whole plan, the bankers feel, will have the effect of modernizing and speeding up the handling of country checks. These items have become, in comparatively recent years, a very large element in business and banking operations. The country banks have always charged the New York banks for the collection of these items, and as their use increased the Clearing House banks adopted the rule now in vogue in order to recoup themselves for these charges and for other expenses in handling them. Special arrangements were made with the few discretionary cities that now exist which entail the remission of both charges. Under the proposed system, the country banks would, of course, make no charges. They would also have to undertake to remit the same day they receive a check for collection, and in this way the great mass of inland exchange operations would be kept in a more liquidated state.

Formerly some of the banks in Connecticut made their remittances as infrequently as twice a month, and this delay in receiving the funds for which they had already given credit to their depositors was another reason for the imposition of the charges by the New York banks. Even now the average time of collection of inland checks, as shown by the committee's report, is more than four days. Under the proposed system the time consumed will be reduced practically to one day, as mail will reach nearly all the territory involved over night.

No such condition was made in establishing the present discretionary cities, and their remittances are now also in the four-day class. It might be supposed that this fact would result in an advantage to the present discretionary cities over banks which come in under the new system. The expectation, however, is that it will not work out that way, but that the old discretionary cities will, by force of circumstances, be brought to making their remittances promptly. A New York bank which has been in the habit of sending all its New England items to its Boston correspondent for collection will find it convenient to send them hereafter to Lowell, Haverhill, or whatever place they may be drawn on—as the banks in these cities must remit at once—in case the Boston bank does not mend its ways and itself remit promptly. So that one effect of extending the free collection zone will automatically result in prompt remittances from the present discretionary city banks.

The form of putting the new system into effect will be simple. A blank will be sent to each bank in the five States on which they may indicate their wish to enter into the free collection arrangement with banks in this city. The discretionary territory will not be extended by towns and no co-operation between several banks in the same town will be necessary. Theoretically this would lead to much confusion in handling checks on a certain town, as the New York bank would charge in the case of checks on one bank and not on checks on another in the same place. In practice, however, the bankers say, if one bank in a town enters the free collection system the others will have to.

The merchant in Tonawanda whose bank fails to come in will be pretty sure to transfer his account to the bank that does. This is because his checks on a bank which is not in the free collection system and on which a collection charge will consequently be made by the New York banks are not popular with New York merchants to whom he sends them in payment for goods. As it is now, he is often requested to remit in New York funds, which makes it necessary for him to keep an account in this city. The pressure of the New York merchant on the country merchant and his pressure on his home bank is regarded as certain to induce his bank to come into the system if any bank in the town does.

One striking fact in the committee's report is that all of New York City is included in the table of places in which it takes some four days to make a collection. A downtown bank which receives a check on a bank in the Bronx or Brooklyn has the same experience in collecting it by mail as it does with banks in Albany or Providence. It is cheaper to wait for the money than to send a messenger up to the vicinity of the Zoo to collect it. To some bankers this disclosure has suggested the idea that all sound and properly managed banks in New York should be admitted to the Clearing House regardless of their capitalization. If members of the association, they would, of course, have to pay their checks daily as the big downtown banks do.

$5,000 PENALTY FOR USURY.

Credit Company Agrees to Dissolve After State Brings Action.

ALBANY, Nov. 26.—Attorney General Carmody to-day received a certified check for $5,000 in settlement of the action brought by the State against the City Credit Company, a New York City corporation organized to loan money on personal property, and the Fidelity & Deposit Company of Maryland. It is asserted that the Credit company made various loans during 1910 and 1911 at usurious rates of interest, and the action was brought to dissolve it and to recover on its surety bond.

Although both the Credit company and the bonding company filed answers to the complaint, when the case was moved for trial recently the bonding company agreed to pay $5,000, the full penalty of the bond furnished, and the Credit company consented to be dissolved.

NO FEAR OF THE BUYERS.

Jobbers Say Average Manufacturer Is Not Equipped to Sell Direct.

In the opinion of one of the most widely experienced wholesalers in the New York dry goods market, jobbers have not a great deal to fear from the buyers' syndicates that are reported springing up all over the country.

"The average manufacturer is not equipped to sell direct to the retailer, either individually or collectively," he said yesterday. "To sell to them in either case would mean the establishment and maintenance of a larger and more expensive sales force than is generally seen to-day, so far as this trade is concerned. It would also mean that the manufacturers would do the best part of their business from stock. This would naturally require the carrying of larger stocks, with the attendant cost and losses through poor selling lines. Trouble over claims, legitimate and otherwise, would be incurred. The returned-merchandise evil would be encountered in its best, or worst, form. Increased credit departments would have to be installed to watch credits and collections from the various accounts.

"Syndicates of this kind may go on indefinitely, but, because of the unevenly balanced requirements of their members, it is evident that the retailers so represented cannot be served as satisfactorily as through their individual buyers. There is too much divergence of opinion among customers of the various stores to permit all orders being placed through a single source.

"After all is said and done, it must be admitted that the jobber, with his perfected organization, is the natural outlet for the manufacturer who wants to get the best net profit from his business. And, furthermore, the profits derived by the jobber are not sufficient to put the cost of living at prohibitive levels. Syndicates may come and syndicates may go, but the jobber will continue in business for a long time yet."

VANDERLIP BACK FROM TEXAS

Banks There Have Money to Spare—Hopes for Currency Legislation.

Frank A. Vanderlip, President of the National City Bank, who returned yesterday from a trip to Texas, said that the value of this year's crop of cotton and cotton seed produced by the Lone Star State would exceed $400,000,000. "Texas," said Mr. Vanderlip, "has never been so prosperous. Although the agriculturists down there are just in the midst of the crop-moving season the banks have money to buy commercial paper."

Mr. Vanderlip said that the farmers were not holding back their cotton for higher prices, but that it was kept from moving more rapidly by a shortage of shipping facilities at Galveston.

"Everywhere you go you find business men asking whether or not they need to fear a business upset as a result of tariff changes," said Mr. Vanderlip. "There are no signs yet of a disturbance due to this cause. The great trouble with business just now is a shortage of labor. It is the same story in all parts of the country. There are many unemployed men around, but there is no reason for the man who is willing to do a day's work remaining idle."

Mr. Vanderlip said that he hoped the Democrats in Washington would formulate currency legislation along the lines emphasized by the needs of recent years. He said that it was not essential that the Aldrich bill should be passed, but that some measures providing for the mobilization of bank reserves should be adopted very soon. "Whatever currency legislation we get, and under whatever name we get it, should provide for a central reservoir, or several of them, from which funds could be drawn in time of need," he said. "That is the essential requirement, that we devise a system which will allow us to use our reserves in times of stringency instead of holding them tighter."

HAD SUGAR AGREEMENT.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 26.—According to the testimony of W. J. McCahan of the McCahan Sugar Refining Company of this city, who testified here to-day in the Government suit to dissolve the so-called Sugar Trust, there was an agreement in effect between certain sugar refining companies of Philadelphia to proportion the distribution of sugar. Mr. McCahan said that his firm had abandoned the agreement because "it would have meant the closing down of the McCahan refinery because the amount of sugar we were allowed to refine did not reach the capacity of the plant."

Mr. McCahan was called to the stand to explain a transfer of stock of the McCahan Company to the National Sugar Refining Company of New Jersey, which, the Government alleges, is owned and controlled by the American Sugar Refining Company.

After some further testimony was taken the hearing was adjourned until Dec. 3, when it will be resumed in New Orleans.

NEW DUTIES FOR HARAHAN.

Seaboard President to Act as General Manager—May Expend $5,000,000.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 26.—President W. J. Harahan and the other officers of the Seaboard Air Line Railroad were re-elected by the Board of Directors of that company here to-day. S. Davies Warfield was elected Chairman of the board, a newly created post, and also Chairman of the Executive and Finance Committees. The vacancy caused by the resignation of Vice President and General Manager Charles H. Hix was not filled. His duties will be undertaken by Mr. Harahan.

It is understood that the company is working out a plan for improvements which will involve an expenditure of at least $5,000,000.

CALL MONEY AGAIN AT 12.

Banks Let Go a Flood, and Rate Falls to 4—Banks Not in Need.

After again reaching 12 per cent., its high point of the day before, call money was supplied on the Stock Exchange in larger quantities yesterday afternoon, and before the close of the session the rate had fallen to 4 per cent. The prevailing rate for most of the day's loans was 11 per cent.

Bankers said that the situation was not such as to warrant an appeal for the deposit of Government funds, and that the stringency would be short lived. Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh said in Washington that he had received no request from National banks for assistance, and that he had no intention of depositing more of the Government's funds in New York or other large cities at this time.

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—James B. Forgan, President of the First National Bank and Chairman of the Chicago Clearing House Association, said to-night that Western banks were "over the hill" so far as the urgent demand for money to move the crops was concerned. He declared that the banks of this city and other centres have withstood a heavy drain of funds to meet the financial requirements of enormous agricultural production, but the worst of the strain had passed, and there were no longer any grounds for fearing a monetary stringency that would call for relief measures.

"Just at the moment the banks are feeling the effect of the preparations now being made to meet the forthcoming call of the Controller of Currency," said Mr. Forgan. "Bankers are looking to their reserve requirements and are doing a little 'window dressing' on that account. The money sent out into the country is not returning yet, but the heavy drain upon deposits ceased some days ago, and in a few weeks more funds will be pouring in and the banks here will be easy again."

INDICTS COAL COMPANY HEAD

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—Thomas O'Gara, President of the O'Gara Coal Company, was indicted to-day by a Federal Grand Jury and charged with accepting a rebate from subsidiaries of the New York Central Railroad system.

The indictment was returned before United States District Judge Carpenter. It charges specifically the acceptance of a rebate from the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad, and the Chicago, Indiana & Southern through the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern.

The rebating charges arose from discovery by the Inter-State Commerce Commission of the payment of $60,000 to the O'Gara Coal Company in November, 1909. The three New York Central subsidiaries were indicted jointly with the O'Gara Coal Company last Friday. Government officials intimate the inquiry will be continued.

COAL SITUATION UNCHANGED.

Weather Has Not Yet Affected Anthracite—Bituminous Prices Strong.

The Coal Trade Journal will say today:

The mild weather last week, while causing little if any relaxation in the demand for anthracite at wholesale, made matters somewhat easier for the retail trade and prevented the dealers from bidding up the price of independent tonnage to still higher levels. The cold wave which arrived on Sunday may or may not change this condition. Many retailers who can hold out for a few days without buying premium coal will be forced into the market if low temperatures continue for a week or more. Stove and nut produced by individual operators remain steady at $6.75-$7 f. o. b., while egg is selling at $6.25 to $6.50.

The trend of the soft coal market continues upward, after two weeks of steadily advancing quotations. Prices are now materially higher than during any recent period with the exception of last March, when the strike scare brought a runaway market.

FOREIGN TRADE OPPORTUNITIES.

p The Daily Consular and Trade Report notes the following foreign trade opportunities. Further information regarding them may be obtained by addressing the Bureau of Manufactures, care of the Department of Commerce and Labor, Washington, D. C., giving the number of the item referred to:

9,944. COTTONSEED OIL MACHINERY—A business firm in the United States has written to the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce that one of its foreign clients is in the market for machinery and apparatus to take out, by a process of freezing, the margarin and stearin contained in cottonseed oil and to filter the oil in such a manner that it will form no sediment thereafter, even if the oil is again exposed to a freezing temperature. Manufacturers of such equipment should communicate with the American firm referred to.

9,945. FIREWORKS DISPLAYS—Tenders are invited until Dec. 7 by the Egyptian Ministry of the Interior for fireworks displays to be given on the occasion of public festivals in Egypt, to be held in February and August, 1913. Tenders should be addressed to the Under Secretary of State, Ministry of the Interior, Cairo. The tenderer must be a resident of Egypt or have a representative in that country.

9,946. CHEMICAL FIRM TO MAKE TESTS—A resident of the West Indies informs an American consular officer that he would like to secure the name of a reliable chemical firm whose business is to test the medical properties of plants, etc. He wishes to send some samples of tincture made from some of the native plants to be tested.

9,947. RAILWAY CONSTRUCTION AND EQUIPMENT—The Union of South Africa will accept tenders for new works on lines now open, at an estimated cost of $9,698,934, including bridge construction, permanent way works, signaling and interlocking apparatus, telegraph and telephone installations, erection of buildings, engine sheds, workshops, etc. Tenders will also be received for the completion of lines already under construction, at an estimated cost of $871,118.

9,952. STEAM WAGON FOR PASSENGER AND FREIGHT TRAFFIC.—A resident of India has written the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce that a company is being formed in that country to transport passengers and freight. This company will need a small steam wagon about 15 feet long for this purpose. The wheels should be of perforated steel, the tires of the front wheels to be 7 inches wide and those of the rear 10 inches wide. The wagon should be equipped to burn wood or coal. Five per cent. for commission is to be added to the selling price. Specifications, shipping weight, &c., should be furnished. If this wagon is successful the writer states it is probable many more can be sold in that region.

9,953. HARDWARE AND SPECIALTIES.—An American Consular officer in Canada reports that a firm of manufacturers' agents in his district desires to be put in touch with American manufacturers of and dealers in general hardware and hardware specialties. References are furnished.

9,954. STEEL WIRE.—A foreign import and export firm informs an American Consulate that it is a regular purchaser in the European market of galvanized iron or steel wire 16's gauge, and would like to be put in touch with wire manufacturers in the United States. The firm desires quotations, cost, insurance, and freight, city of destination; minimum single shipment, one ton. On the arrival of quotations from the United States orders will be cabled, and to save cable expense the firm states that shippers may draw upon it on demand for the value of the shipment, with documents attached, to be negotiated through a local bank, which is given as reference.

9,955. GASOLINE ENGINES.—According to the report of an American Consular officer, there has been a steady demand by boat builders during the past year for American gasoline engines for pleasure and small fishing boats. One local agent recently stated that he had orders for 10 engines. He sells on commission, has no office, and has no means of advertising the goods he represents other than local newspapers at his own expense. American manufacturers should take steps to secure this growing trade before it is too late. It is thought that about fifty engines will be required the coming season. List of boat builders accompanied the report, and will be furnished to interested firms.

9,956. AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS.—The Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce is in receipt of a communication from a foreign Government official stating that he desires to obtain particulars of the cost of various agricultural implements manufactured in the United States. Quotations are desired, cost, insurance, and freight; destination if possible; but if shipping charges, &c., are not available, prices should be quoted free on board.

9,957. WOOD-FLOOR CLEANING MACHINES.—An American Consul reports that a business firm in the United Kingdom desires the name of American manufacturers producing a combined wood-floor cleaning and polishing, waxing, and smoothing or grinding machine. The work of finishing wood floors is at present done by hand, and the firm is anxious to secure a machine driven by electricity to perform this work.

9,958. RAW MATERIALS.—A report from an American Consular officer states that an inquiry has been received from a resident of his district, in which he expresses a desire to represent American firms exporting raw material.

9,959. CINEMATOGRAPH FILMS.—A foreign business man informs an American Consular officer that he would like to get in touch with American manufacturers of cinematograph films. He desires to secure the agency for these companies in Eastern Russia and Western Siberia. Correspondence may be in English or German.

MERRILL IN MISSOURI PACIFIC.

Union Trust, of Which He Is Head, Is Trustee of $25,000,000 Note.

Edwin G. Merrill, who is President of the Union Trust Company, was elected a Director of the Missouri Pacific Railway and a member of the Executive Committee yesterday, to succeed the Rev. Frederick T. Gates, resigned. Mr. Gates, who looks after John D. Rockefeller's charitable interests, left the Missouri Pacific Directorate when the General Education Board disposed of its large investment in the Gould stock.

The Union Trust Company is a trustee under the $25,000,000 note issue of the Missouri Pacific, and under the new St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern mortgage. It is also one of the trustees of the Joseph Pulitzer estate, which has substantial holdings of Missouri Pacific stock.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

Robert Walker and W. E. S. Strong, receivers for the United States Motor Company, are notifying factory managers that Walter E. Flanders has been appointed manager and William F. McGuire assistant manager for the receivers of the five manufacturing companies.

Robert Bacon, former Ambassador to France, was elected a Director of the United States Steel Corporation yesterday to succeed the late Clement A. Griscom.

J. Herbert Case, Vice President of the Franklin Trust Company in Brooklyn since 1910, has been made a Vice President of the Farmers Loan and Trust Company in charge of commercial credits.

The Shepperson Publishing Company has issued the thirty-seventh annual edition of its statistical record, "Cotton Facts."

The Guaranty Trust Company announced yesterday the engagement of another $500,000 of gold in Europe, making a total of $8,450,000 engaged since the beginning of this movement on Sept. 16.

The United Cigar Stores Company has declared a first quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent. on the preferred stock. The common dividend is expected to be taken up at the December meeting.

The Vandalia Railroad has declared a dividend of 4 per cent. out of surplus. The previous payment was three-fourths of 1 per cent., declared in December, 1911.

COMMODITIES MARKETS.

Wheat declined on the foreign news. The country sold corn and oats freely. Provisions declined with grain. Cottonseed oil was irregular. Cotton ruled at new high levels. Spot interests bought heavily. Foreign news was mixed. Coffee showed strength on bullish crop estimates.

WHEAT.

The uninterrupted declining tendency of the market yesterday was partially explained by the elimination of the scattered short account during the course of Monday's session. While the political situation in Europe was not entirely reassuring, and undoubtedly contains many elements of uncertainty, there seemed to be less apprehension. The strength at financial centres discouraged speculative buying of wheat, on the probabilities of a clash of the big powers, while toward the close of the day the reports that there was to be a European conference, which it was thought would lead to an amicable adjustment, or, at least, a better understanding, of the differences between Austria and Servia.

Foreign grain markets were all substantially lowered. Weather conditions in the Argentine continue very favorable, and it is predicted that with two weeks or so of favorable weather there will be numerous bearish estimates in circulation relative to that country's exportable surplus. Furthermore, the offerings from South America and Russia are heavy, and Canada is also actively competing with the United States. The export business yesterday amounted to about 200,000 bushels of Canadian grain, and while rumors circulated of bids for American wheat being close to a workable basis, there was no definite information at hand.

The statistical news operated against interests which have been buying wheat recently on the theory that it was becoming attractive as an investment. The American visible supply increased 3,333,000 bushels, which, with the Canadian visible, made a gain in stocks of 6,500,000 bushels for the week in North America. The European visible also increased 688,000 bushels. The amount in Europe and afloat is now placed at 89,000,000 bushels, against 92,000,000 bushels last year; that in Canada at 19,060,000 bushels, against 11,000,000 bushels a year ago, and the total in the United States visible 59,000,000 bushels, against 69,000,000 bushels yesterday. Bradstreet's world's visible supply statement, expected to-day, will probably show an increase of over 7,000,000 bushels for the week.

Weather conditions in the American and Canadian Northwest continue very favorable for the movement. There are occasional advices of farmers being dissatisfied with prevailing levels, causing them to withhold offerings, but no imminent diminution in the receipts is foreshadowed. Meanwhile, the sentiment in speculative quarters remains rather bearish, but is tempered by the recent decline and the nervousness over affairs in Europe.

No. 2 red was quoted at $1.06½, free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern Spring, 95⅞c; No. 1 Northern Manitoba, 97c; No. 2 hard Winter, 96c.

CORN.

The tendency of values was to sag, although no weakness was discerned. There seemed to be an extremely liberal demand on the small setback. Export houses are buying in moderate volume on these declines. It is evident, however, that the country is a fair seller despite the complaints of the low level of quotations. Weather conditions continue very satisfactory. The visible supply showed a decrease of 328,000 bushels for the week, against an increase of 318,000 bushels last year. The general sentiment is of a bearish average. Export corn is quoted at 53c, free on board, afloat, for export, cost, insurance, and freight; corn for near-by and forward shipment, according to grade, 61c down to 56c.

OATS.

Prices were easier during the entire session. The decline in other markets had a sympathetic effect. There were moderate offerings from first hands. Cash inquiry was fair, tending to enlarge on the lower basis. The visible decreased 650,000 bushels for the week, and now amounts to 12,000,000 bushels, against 21,000,000 bushels last year. Cash standards are quoted at 37c; No. 3 white, 36½ to 37c; No. 4 white, 35 to 36c.

COTTON.

The recovery of cotton values assumed a sensational aspect during the progress of yesterday's session. For a time, just following the outset, declines of about 10 points were ruling, but it soon became evident that the efforts on the part of those anxious to secure a more satisfactory buying level were far from prolific, and the attempt was hastily abandoned. The insistent buying on the part of the leading spot interests disheartened many who have been opposing the upward movement, and the action of values soon induced prominent operators to renew their activity on the constructive side of the price list.

There were new high levels registered, and a major part of the advance was intact at the finals. Assertions were quite general that trade houses were the largest buyers, but there was a divergence of opinion as to the quantity which represented absorption for mill interests against that of purely speculative origin. Little disposition was shown, however, to minimize the strength of the interests affiliated with the leading spot concerns, so that bear aggressiveness was limited. Unquestionably, a reduction in the short interest accelerated the upward tendency of the list yesterday.

Factors accountable for the advance were not really apparent. In some quarters there was renewed stress laid upon the advices from the South, which mainly indicate that holders adhere to their firm views. There are predictions of a decreasing movement, and obviously this will have to materialize in the near future to color the smaller crop estimates. However, the weather is still very favorable and conducive to liberal receipts, particularly if the demand does not show any important diminution.

Additional dispatches were received telling of the rapid picking, ginning, and marketing of this crop. There was an estimate from a representative of a prominent commission house for an outturn of 13,800,000 bales, including linters. Many believe that it is only logical for the lower crop estimates to become more popular at this time because of the rapid gain in prices, which has unquestionably influenced sentiment as to the crop probabilities, even though there are bulls who are working on the theory that it is the large domestic consumption and the probable moderate foreign demand which will result in the maintenance of values, rather than the prospects of a total production below 14,250,000 bales.

The foreign market was quite disappointing at the opening, with quite a little selling for the account of interest on the other side. There were Manchester cables claiming a restricted business, possibly due to the political situation in Southeastern Europe and perhaps to some extent to the dearer raw material. On the other hand, the spot sales at Liverpool were liberal at 9,000 bales and it was cabled that the India crop promised only 300,000 bales more than last year, against estimates current several weeks ago for about 1,000,000 bales over the 1911 crop.

COTTONSEED OIL.

Liquidation, which appeared to be quite general for a time, caused a moderate setback during the early part of the session. Subsequently the losses were recovered, due mainly to an important extent to the abrupt rise in cotton. A liberal part of the demand was said to have received its origin in cotton houses, although some of the refiners were also absorbing contracts. Sentiment seems to be rather mixed at present. The opinion has been expressed that the higher levels for crude should stimulate offerings, but will not tend to improve the consumptive inquiry for cottonseed oil. However, no concessions of importance have been granted by crude holders as yet, according to most authorities, although a less active demand was suggested. Export concerns do not appear to be deeply interested at this time. Some interests, in fact, speak disparagingly of the prospects for large shipments abroad, basing their pessimistic views on the comparative cheapness of other oils and the unsettled European political situation. To-day is first notice day for December contracts, but notices are likely to be well cared for.

COFFEE.

Coffee became active and firm, closing at a net advance of 13 to 23 points on sales of 158,000 bags. Havre closed 1 to 1¼f up, while Hamburg was 1¼ pfennig higher. The cost and freight market advanced 10 to 25 points with a moderate business at the higher level. The general condition was due primarily to reports from Europe that the Government of Brazil had estimated the next Santos crop at 9,000,000 bags, which was taken to confirm private reports of serious damage from the freezing weather of early September.

PROPOSALS.

NEW MEXICO STATE BONDS.

Notice is hereby given that the Board of Loan Commissioners of the State of New Mexico will, at the office of the Treasurer of said State, in the Capitol Building, at the City of Santa Fe, New Mexico, on the 16th day of December, 1912, at the hour of 2 o'clock in the afternoon, receive sealed proposals for the purchase of $1,125,000 of bonds of said State of Series "C," which are to be issued in accordance with the provisions of Section Three of Article IX. of the Constitution of said State of New Mexico, and of an act of the Legislature of said State, which became a law on the first day of June, 1912, for the payment of the bonds and accrued interest thereof of Santa Fe County, which were validated, approved, and confirmed by act of Congress of January 16, 1897, and assumed by said State in Section One of Article IX. of said Constitution. Said bonds are to be issued in the denomination of one thousand dollars each, dated December 16, 1912, and will be in the form prescribed in Section 14 of said act of the Legislature of the State of New Mexico, and the principal thereof will be payable to bearer in gold coin or its equivalent in lawful money of the United States forty years after their date, and they may be redeemed at the option of the State at any time after ten years from their date. The interest on said bonds will be payable semi-annually, March 1 and Septemmer 1, and principal and interest will be payable at the office of the State Treasurer at Santa Fe, New Mexico, or at the Seaboard National Bank, New York City, at the option of the holder. The said bonds are offered for sale to the person who will agree to take the same at par and accrued interest to date of delivery, and at a rate of interest to be named in his bid, and said bonds or any part thereof will be awarded to the person offering to accept the same at par at the lowest rate of interest. Each bid must be sealed, marked "Proposal for purchase of bonds," and accompanied by a certified check for not less than two per cent. of the amount of the bid, as security for the faithful performance of such bid in case said bonds or a part thereof shall be awarded to the person making such bid, and as liquidated damages in case of the failure of the successful bidder to fulfill his contract, but no such check drawn upon a banking house making the bid will be accepted as such security. The Loan Commissioners reserve the right to reject any and all bids, and particularly specify that no bid will be considered unless it is an unconditional bid for the purchase of said bonds or a part thereof, not made dependent upon any contingency whatever. It is further distinctly stated that only so much of said bonds will be sold as may be necessary, at the price bid, to realize the amount of the indebtedness to be paid, which indebtedness does ont exceed the sum of $1,125,000. Intending bidders who may desire further information can obtain it by application to said Board of Loan Commissioners at Santa Fe, New Mexico.

W. G. SARGENT,
Secretary of the Board of Loan Commissioners.

TO DEMOTE FORDHAM MEDICAL COLLEGE

Faculty Resignations Prompt the American Association Council to Reduce School's Rank.

BIG HANDICAP TO STUDENTS

Will Have to Study Elsewhere for Two Years After Graduation—Demand ex-Dean's Reinstatement.

It became known here yesterday that the Council on Medical Education of the American Medical Association was about to demote the Fordham University Medical School from Class A, the first grade of medical colleges, to Class C, the third rank, as a result of the recent dismissal of some of its leading officers and members of its faculty.

Dr. N. P. Colwell, Secretary of the Council on Medical Education, confirmed at his home in Chicago last night the rumor that had spread uneasily among the students of the Medical School here yesterday, and caused many of them to meet in secret gatherings and discuss what course of action to pursue in case the institution and its diploma should be degraded to the inferior rank—a rank not reconized by the regents, and one which, it was said, would require them after four years spent at Fordham to go for at least two more years to some other medical institution of higher grade.

Dr. Colwell explained that the Council had the matter of demotion of Fordham under advisement because of changes in the institution brought on by pettey jealousies that had forced the resignations from the Fordham staff of leading members of its Faculty, thus affecting the grade of the institution. Definite announcement, he said, would be made later.

The resignations to which he referred were those of Dr. James J. Walsh, Dean of the Medical School; Dr. V. E. Sorapure, the pro-Dean, and Dr. W. J. Maloney. These three had formed a Committee on Reorganization, which gave the American Medical Association the personal pledges of its member sthat certain reforms insisted on by the Council on Medical Education as necessary to keep Fordham in the first class would be carried out, a course, which, they said, they were authorized to guarantee by the Rev. T. J. McCluskey, President of Fordham, but in which he subsequently refused to sustain them.

Secveral other members of Fordham's medical Faculty resigned with these three, and others followed soon afterward. A new Dean was immediately appointed by Father McCluskey in the person of Dr. William P. Healy, a member of the Advisory Board of Fordham Hospital, the influence of which has since grown greatly at the Medical School, and whose clinic has came to replace in large part the clinical facilities theretoforeoffered offered to the Fordham Medical School by various other hospitals.

Dr. Healy, the new Dean, declared last night that no communication had reached either him or the President of the university even intimating that such a demotion of Fordham Medical School was to be made. The only communication sent to Fordham by the American Medical Association, he said, had been a brief one inquiring into the reasons for the changes of staff and the progress of the promised plans of reorganization. President MctCluskey, he said, had written a full explanation in reply, but had received no further communication from the council. Dr. Healy added that he himself was going to Chicago in about two weeks to lay the organization plans before the council and to explain the progress that had been made. He declared that he felt confident that Fordham's Medical School would retain its present first-grade standing.

Members of the faculty whose resignation brought on the reported action of the Council on Medical Education refused last night to discuss the matter for publication. Several of them admitted, however, that they had heard of secret indignation meetings among the students of the medical school, many of whom, it was reported, had adopted as their battle cry a demand for the reinstating of their former dean and the policies pursued at the institution under him. The burden of this battle cry, it was said, was:

"We want Jimmy back! We want Jimmy back!"

EXPORTS UP LAST WEEK.

Gain $1,750,000—Wheat Shipments Nearly 2,000,000 Bushels.

Wheat exports from the Port of New York in the week ended Nov. 23 totaled 1,861,697 bushels. This was the highest point touched in some time, and showed an excess of about 397,000 bushels over shipments of the week preceding. Beef shipments in the same period aggregated 529 barrels and 319 tierces, a decline from the total of the previous week of 1,200 barrels and close to 300 tierces. Other shipments of important commodities included peas, 416 bushels; beans, 1,800 bushels; flour, 14,512 barrels and 131,892 sacks; pork, 676 barrels; bacon, 2,935,275 pounds; hams, 125,400 pounds; lard, 5,127,150 pounds; butter, 71,900 pounds; cheese, 14,160 pounds, and cottonseed oil, 5,997,371 pounds.

Figures issued by the local Custom House yesterday showed the total value of the week's exports, exclusive of specie, to be $17,954,986, against $16,201,512 a week ago. The heaviest individual shipments, valued at $3,611,037, went to England.

THE BUSINESS WORLD

Capers Are Pickles—Rates on Wool Unsheared and Paper Box Tops.

The Board of United States General Appraisers yesterday, in overruling a protest by Austin Nichols & Co. and Larini & Co., held that the term "pickles" as used in the Tariff act of 1909 includes capers imported in vinegar. Collector Loeb had so assessed the capers at 40 per cent. ad valorem. The importers contended that capers are not traded in and sold in the trade as pickles and should enter at 20 or 10 per cent., under Paragraph 480, as either manufactured or partially manufactured articles. Judge Waite decided.

The board also threw out a protest by W. H. Stiner & Son on the weight of wool on an importation of 2,120 sheepskins. The Appraiser returned 1,753 pounds as being the quantity of wool ascertained to be on the skins, and the Collector assessed accordingly. The importers alleged that the wool did not exceed 25 per cent. of the total weight.

A protest by Overton & Co. relating to box tops of surface-coated paper not lithographed was sustained. The articles were taxed at 5 cents per pound and 30 per cent. ad valorem, under Paragraph 411, act of 1909, as a manufacture of surface-coated paper. The board, under Paragraph 415, allowed entry at 35 per cent. ad valorem on paper cut or shaped for boxes.

NECKWEAR SHIPMENTS LATE.

New 54-Hour Labor Law Seriously Retarding Production—Orders Good.

With the holiday rush practically at its high point in the women's neckwear field, and the 54-hour labor law in this State retarding shipments to a considerable extent, the present situation is not entirely pleasing to the manufacturers. One prominent maker of these lines said yesterday that production had been reduced fully one-third as a result of the law, and that a good part of the business now on the books would have to be abandoned because shipment could not be made on time. So far as the actual buying was concerned, there was little fault to be found, for, while the orders taken this season were not as large as last year, they called principally for the better class of merchandise.

An excellent call for coat sets has been in evidence of late, with black and white effects in lace and embroidery combinations apparently the most wanted. Jabots are gaining favor steadily, with the spreading butterfly type, one of the most active styles in the market.

NEW WAIST ORDERS GOOD.

Salesmen Out with Spring Lines of Former Find Immediate Business.

Many of the local waist and dress manufacturers now have their new lines on the road, and business is coming in nicely, although buyers seem somewhat reluctant to place large advance orders. In some sections of the country salesmen who went out to show their Spring lines found buyers short of goods for immediate use, and they have sent in large orders for near-by delivery. A good business has been booked on tailor-made silk waists, and business in this end of the market seems to be improving steadily.

The cheaper lines of cotton dresses are selling well. Some manufacturers of higher priced lines are showing new styles and report satisfactory results. Children's and juniors' dresses are also shown, and the outlook in this branch of the industry is promising. Ginghams and percales are moving well, mostly in staple patterns. The gored skirt seems to be replacing the pleated style, and the general tendency is toward simple tailormade dresses.

PRINTCLOTH MARKET QUIET.

Twenty-seven-inch, 56-52s, 3 5-16c; 27-inch, 56-56s, 3⅝c; 27-inch, 64-60s, 3 13-16c; 28-inch, 64-60s, 3 15-16c; 28-inch, 64-64s, 4 1-16c; 38½-inch, 60-52s, 4¾c; 38½-inch, 64-60s, 5¼c; 38½-inch, 64-64s, 5⅝c; 39-inch, 68-72s, 6c; 39-inch, 72-76s, 6⅝c; 39-inch, 80-80s, 7¼c bid; brown sheetings, 4-yard, 56-60s, 6⅝@6½c; brown sheetings, 4-yard, 56-60s, 6⅛@6¼c; brown sheetings, 3-yard, 7¼@7½c; brown drills, standard, 8½c; denims, 9-ounce, 14@16½c; tickings, 8-ounce, 13@13½c; standard prints, 5½c, and standard staple ginghams, 6¼c.

CONSULAR TRADE NOTES.

According to an order of the Argentine Health Department, which went into effect June 25, 1912, each application for the inspection of food products must relate to a single consignment and to only one kind of food products. The boxes and packages in which the goods are imported must all bear the same marks, be of the same origin, and arrive on the same steamer.

In 1911 there were thirty-two cotton-oil factories in Russia, all of which were located in the cotton regions of Turkestan and the Caucasus, with the exception of one at Nizhni Novgorod. The total quantity of seeds used by the thirty-two concerns was 16,000,000 poods (288,890 short tons) per year.

An ordinance for the control of firearms, gunpowder, and the like, promulgated by the Government of Chosen, (Korea,) Aug. 21, 1912, provided that these products might not be imported or exported without the special authorization of the Government.

SIDELIGHTS ON SELLING.

White and black and white striped voile children's dresses are in strong demand for Spring. Voile is about the only lightweight material that is receiving much attention in the trade.

There is practically no call this season for white lawn and lingerie dresses for juniors.

AUTOMOBILE NEWS

Tire manufacturers up and down automobile row are preparing to make a marked display of rough-coated tires in the coming motor shows. Various new patterns are to be seen in the show windows, and yesterday the interested motorist could see not only tracks which the different corrugations would leave, shown in a miniature sand box, but even a moving picture show demonstrating the safety of the rough shoe in the matter of skidding.

A tendency to emphasize the rough tread of various patterns marked the tire exhibit at the Olympic Show just closed in London. American makers say the ratio of rough tread to plain round tires has been, roughly, one to three for some time, but leading tire firms are agreed that the non-skid variety is rapidly gaining on its smooth competitor here as well as in England.

Several reasons are put forward for the change, including safety in wet going and improved traction. The tire people believe owners have picked out knobbed and pattern shoes because their greater thickness and weight frequently give them more mileage than those of smooth tread, especially when used on limousines or other heavy models. The added amount of rubber embodied, although it tends to give this longer wear, also makes them more costly. The demand for them shows, however, that motor car users find long running an adequate compensation for first cost.

"Winter is the time to apply hot water jackets to the carburetor, if your car is not fitted with one," says Dr. Chas. G. Percival who, in his new book, "The Trail of the Bull-Dog," tells of driving the first car through Alaska and the Klondike. Says the author, "besides filling the radiator with a mixture of ethyl or denatured alcohol, be sure that your carburetor is hot water jacketed for cold weather driving. To those who make it a practice of shutting off the supply of hot water—of the circulating system to the water jackets of the carburetor, I would urge the opening of the petcocks and allowing the heated mixture to warm the mixture chamber. While the use of a water jacketed carburetor facilitates vaporization of the gasoline during the cold weather, it does not make starting any easier when the motor is cold. As it is possible that the joints of the water jacketing may leak, it is a good plan to start up the motor indoors and examine all connections, and thus all leaks that may develop can be remedied before going out of doors into the frigid atmosphere."

⁂

News comes from Buenos Aires that the motor bus is fast growing in popularity there. The South American city is outstripping New York and even rivaling London and Paris in its use of this street conveyance. The new 'buses which have just been put in operation on the Avenida Rio Branco are of advanced type, but there is a good deal of agitation in the Buenos Aires newspapers to have them provided with guards for the front wheels in the interest of safety.

CLOAK DEMAND UNBALANCED.

Lower Temperature Has Not Stimulated Business Generally.

In certain quarters of the local cloak and suit trade the cooler weather of the last few days has renewed activity to some extent, but business is quiet for the most part. Mild weather has hurt the trade considerably this year, but manufacturers seem optimistic regarding the future, and are looking forward to a satisfactory season to come. The larger houses have done a fair business this Fall, but complaints are heard from many of the smaller concerns.

Chinchilla garments have moved well generally, and stocks of these goods are low. Some manufacturers, however, say that imitation lambs' wool and astrachan full-length coats are gaining in popularity and that they are now almost as much in demand as chincillas. Boucles are receiving an excellent call at this time in some sections. The manufacturers are now working on Spring, 1913, lines, which will be shown generally in the near future.

SPRING DRESS GOODS BRISK.

Jobbers' Road Business Shows Gain—Producers Well Sold Up.

There is a fair amount of business being done on Fall lines in the jobbing end of the local dress goods market, but, while November sales have so far compared favorably with those of last season, it is feared that spot business will be unusually light in December. Spring business received from the road is comfortably in excess of that of last year, but it is contended that the orders booked have not been as large as the generally improved condition of the country warrants. Whipcords and serges have so far dominated this business in the staple weaves, but a distinct decline in the call for the latter in the last week or ten days is reported in one part of the market. The sale of novelty fabrics has not been very satisfactory.

The between-season lull is plainly evident in the primary market, and there will not be much doing there until Fall lines are opened, about the middle of January. In several instances the Spring production is entirely sold up.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

ANGELO IRACE.—A petition has been filed against Angelo Irace, wholesale grocer, 97 Elizabeth Street, by these creditors: Giuseppe Livote, $200; Arthur Canfora, $300, and Raffaelle Gori, $181.

C. A. BUFFA.—A petition has been filed against Calogero A. Buffa and Concettina A. Buffa, doing business as C. A. Buffa, importers of provisions, groceries, and Italian products, 356 Broome Street, by these creditors: Armour & Co., $242; Ludovico Afeltra, $174, and the German-American Provision Company, $146. Judge Mayer appointed Albert C. Bonaschi receiver, bond $500.

SAMUEL SILVERNAGEL.—A petition has been filed against Samuel Silvernagel, manufacturer of leather goods, 394 Canal Street, by these creditors: Sol. Barnet & Son, $285; I. Rairch & Sons, $450, and Thomas Garnar & Co., $67.

WESTCHESTER WOODWORKING COMPANY.—A petition has been filed against the Westchester Woodworking Company of Sterling Avenue and Sand Street, Westchester, by two creditors: Charles O. Christman, $400, and Herman Paul, $150. It is said that the liabilities are $50,000 and assets $10,000.

GEORGE G. PORTER of 611 West 187th Street has filed a petition with liabilities of $4,096 and no assets. Among the creditors are eleven department stores and dry goods dealers, and Etta G. Porter, $1,195.

DAVID AYD of 141 West Sixtieth Street, formerly a grocer, of 631 Columbus Avenue, has filed a petition, with liabilities of $1,529 and no assets.

THOMAS GINGOLD, salesman, of 541 West 163d Street, has filed a petition, with liabilities of $1,617 and no assets. Arthur W. Dimmer obtained a judgment against Gingold for $617, and yesterday Judge Mayer restrained Dimmer from taking further proceedings in the case for a year.

WOLF GELBAND, dealer in second-hand brick, of 897 Third Street, has filed a petition, with liabilities of $24,350 and assets of $142. There are five claims against him for damages for personal injuries, aggregating $18,350, for which suits are pending by Patrick Doherty, $5,000; William Savage, $5,000; Dave Fox, $5,000; Tillie Auerbach, $2,850, and Sam Langman, $500. Other creditors are Louis Sperber, $5,000, and Barnett Siegel, $1,000.

HERMAN AND IRVING DANZIG of 7 East Seventeenth Street have filed a petition, with liabilities of $3,730, to Karp Brothers of 7 East Seventeenth Street, for money loaned, and no assets. Herman Danzig has individual liabilities of $2,172.

JACKSON MACK MANUFACTURING COMPANY.—A meeting of creditors of the Jackson Mack Manufacturing Company, silk petticoats, 119 and 121 West Twenty-third Street, was held yesterday at the office of Macgrane Coxe, referee in bankruptcy, 50 Church Street. Many claims were filed, and Frederick W. Wakefield, the receiver, was unanimously elected trustee under a bond of $10,000. Mr. Wakefield said that he had about $70,000 on hand as receiver, consisting of accounts, $63,000, and cash, $7,000. The creditors authorized him to continue the business for twenty days to dispose of the merchandise on hand. None of the officers was present, and it was said that Sale J. Jackson, who disappeared, has not been located. The liabilities are about $1,000,000.

BLAIR BROTHERS.—A meeting of creditors of Blair Brothers, stock brokers, of 20 Broad Street, was held yesterday at the office of Macgrane Coxe, referee in bankruptcy, 50 Church Street. The election of a trustee was postponed to await the arrival of claims of $20,000 from Chicago and Milwaukee. The bankrupts were briefly examined in order to prepare for a composition. No formal offer of composition was made to the meeting, but Mr. Babcock, their attorney, said that a settlement would be made in full, on time. The liabilities are $135,667 and nominal assets $63,834.

ROSA ZINDEL.—A meeting of creditors of Rosa Zindel, formerly President of the Zindel Manufacturing Company, tortoise shell goods, 573 Fourth Avenue, was held yesterday at the office of N. A. Prentiss, referee in bankruptcy, 2 Rector Street. A number of claims were filed, and William Henkel, Jr., the receiver, was elected trustee under a bond of $5,000. Miss Zindel was not present, as she is still in the Tombs awaiting sentence on a charge of forgery of notes in the business. Her liabilities are $187,160.

SEAL RAINCOAT COMPANY.—Schedules of Abraham Gordon, trading as the Seal Raincoat Company, 110 West Twenty-sixth Street and 74 University Place, show liabilities of $56,434 and assets of $23,900. Among the creditors are W. Whitman & Co., $3,836; H. A. McKenney & Co., $1,723, and Hydol Plush Manufacturing Company, $1,479.

RICHMOND & MACHSON.—Schedules of Richmond & Machson, dealers in butter and eggs, 64 First Avenue, show liabilities of $35,520 and assets consisting of a half interest in 167 Allen Street, transferred to Sophie Richmond and Lizzie Machson to secure $1,000, value unknown; a half interest in 540 Sixth Street, mortgaged for $39,250, equity unknown, and $200 equity in stock.

MACHSON BROTHERS.—Schedules of Edward and Nathan Machson, trading as Machson Brothers, dealers in butter and eggs, 88 Stanton Street, show liabilities of $27,971 and no available assets. Among the creditors are the State Bank, $1,500; Rose Wasserman, $2,935, and Isaac Sobin, $2,900.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Harlem appeared to be the active section of the city in the realty market yesterday, although the deals there were not large in volume. The most important was the sale of a new six-story apartment house on the southwest corner of Fifth Avenue and 111th Street, known as 1,316 and 1,318 Fifth Avenue, the plot being 50 by 100. The building was sold by Charles I. Weinstein, who completed it about two months ago. The buyer is an investor. Jacob Rosenbaum acted as the broker. The building adjoins a new theatre lately finished facing the Circle on the Cathedral Parkway frontage, both improvements having been started soon after the sale of the block, which was formerly a portion of the Pinkney estate, at auction over a year ago.

A little further north a new six-story new law flat, at 106 East 121st Street, just east of Park Avenue, was sold by the Tilmil Realty Company, composed of Williams & Grodginsky, to George Silverhorn. The plot is 25 by 100.11. The selling company took in part payment the three-story private residence at 55 West 113th Street, on lot 18 by 100.11, between Fifth and Lenox Avenues. The brokers in the transaction were Levine & Silverman.

The two five-story flats at 5 and 7 West 107th Street, a plot 50 by 100, were sold by Arnold, Byrne & Baumann for Anna L. Wittmeyer to an investor.

The Jackson Co. Buys in Loft Zone.

The B. H. Jackson Company, which has been an active buyer in the midtown loft section for several weeks past, has purchased from the Intercity Land and Securities Company, 25 West Sixteenth Street, for investment.

The property consists of an old-fashioned four-story and basement brownstone dwelling, on a lot 26 by 100.

The Private Dwelling Market.

The three-story and basement dwelling, 250 West Seventy-fifth Street, is reported to have been sold to an adjoining owner by Arthur H. Lewis and others. The structure occupies a lot 20 by 102.2 between Broadway and West End Avenue.

Solomon & Greenbaum have sold the three-story dwelling, on lot 20 by 102.2, at 250 West Seventy-fifth Street.

Hotel Weston in $450,000 Lease.

The Hotel Weston, on the northeast corner of Madison Avenue and Forty-ninth Street, has been leased for ten years at an aggregate rental of $450,000 by George L. Sanborn to Samuel G. Clayton. The lease was recorded yesterday for ten years from Nov. 1, 1912, at $45,000 a year.

The lessee, who has been associated with the Hotel Lorraine, Fifth Avenue and Forty-fifth Street, for the last twelve years, took possession Monday. Matthew J. Ward & Co., in conjunction with the Taylor Sherman Company, negotiated the transaction.

Bronx.

The three-story private dwelling, occupying a plot 35 by 100, on the northeast corner of 199th Street and Valentine Avenue has been sold by Gustav Helfrich to M. Norton for occupancy. W. L. Varian negotiated the transaction. The same broker also sold to a client for G. Kingston the three-story brick dwelling 2,971 Perry Avenue.

Max Baron has sold 464 East 147th Street, a five-story triple flat, on lot 25 by 100. The purchaser gave in exchange six lots on Rochambeau Avenue.

Brooklyn.

Arthur H. Strong has sold to John A. Schaefer the English bungalow on the northeast corner of Foster Avenue and East Nineteenth Street, Flatbush, on a plot 56 by 101.

New Jersey.

The Mountain Lakes Company has sold on their development near Boonton a plot 600 by 350. The plot will be improved at once with a fourteen-room stucco dwelling.

The Stadium Motordrome in Newark has been sold at Sheriff's sale to William Gerth for $9,500. The motordrome was owned by the Eastern Motor Racing Association, and was sold to satisfy a judgment of $10,695.20 obtained by Zacker & Kurrie, the builders.

Acreage Deal in Westchester County.

A syndicate represented by the Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown Company has purchased from Otto H. Hartman, in the village of Armonk, Westchester County, a tract 225 acres adjoining the John Sterling place and abutting upon the Kensico Reservoir of the city's new water supply system. It has frontage on Kings Avenue and the main State road running north from White Plains through Westchester County.

304-Acre Farm for $60,000.

Realty men acquainted with suburban values in the vicinity of Orangetown in Rockland County, N. Y., just off the New Jersey State line, considered that Munroe Dyer of 49 Wall Street, got a bargain yesterday in getting the Stephen Rowe Bradley farm for $60,000, at auction. The sale was held by Joseph P. Day in the Vesey Street salesroom. Two small parcels went for $4,900 to other buyers, but Douglas V. Eskell, bidding for Mr. Dyer, got the 304-acre estate, known as Rockland Park farm, for $60,000, about $200 an acre. It lies in Orangetown. The property is assessed at $78,000.

Recent Buyers.

Commercial Leases.

Ames & Co. have leased the store, 420 Lenox Avenue, for S. A. Nelson to F. Rellaiss Manufacturing Company, and the store, 9 East Thirtieth Street, for N. J. Fitzgerald, to D. Botchman.

Realty Notes.

I. H. Kramer, of the Rockledge Construction Company, denied yesterday that Richard Trimble was the buyer of 992 Fifth Avenue.

The property at 60 Cliff Street recently sold to Henry Leerburger, is to be improved with a six-story commercial structure. The proposed building has been leased for a long period of years to the J. E. Linde Paper Company, now located on Beekman Street, which will occupy the entire structure. The lease was negotiated by William H. Whiting & Co.

The lease was recorded yesterday from the United Cigar Stores Company to the American Real Estate Company of the building to be erected on the Vanderbilt Avenue front, from the northwest corner of Forty-second Street, at $75,000 a year from the date of completion. The lease, as previously announced is for 21 years.

Mr. Arthur Brisbane

in an editorial in last Monday's Evening Journal, wrote of the possibilities of co-operative living and the opportunity presented in the sale of this great LAKEWOOD HOTEL to group a large number of families under one roof and REDUCE THE COST OF LIVING. If you have not read this editorial I would advise that you secure a copy. If you don't succeed in buying one, send to me and I will forward a copy to you.

I have been instructed by the owners to sell at ABSOLUTE AUCTION SALE to the HIGHEST BIDDER, WITHOUT RESERVATION, next SATURDAY, DECEMBER 7, at 3 o'clock P. M., rain or shine, on the premises, the Lakewood Hotel, with furniture, equipment and appurtenances, situated in the midst of the world-famous pine woods of Lakewood, N. J.

The property to be offered consists of a five-story brick modern hotel, fitted with every up-to-date convenience, containing 336 handsomely furnished bedrooms and 106 baths. There is a special building for the help, stable suitable for automobile garage, 'buses. A full installation of Hydrotherapy and Electric Baths. Complete ventilating system. Lawn Tennis Court, Squash Court, Bowling Alley; all in the building—in short, everything necessary to make a complete hotel, and the LAKEWOOD HOTEL is ready for the immediate reception of guests. Everything is in readiness, table linen, silverware, glassware, the rooms are ready, the beds are made up, and all a man has to do is to turn the key and take immediate possession.

Located, as it is, in the midst of healthy surroundings, in a high-class resort, noted for the mildness and health-restoring qualities of the climate, this property is particularly adapted for a first-class hotel or institution.

25% on taking title.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—The northeastern disturbance has disappeared and another from the Northwest is central to-night over Ontario, attended by snows in the lake region. Over the remainder of the country high pressure prevails, with generally fair weather, although there were light, scattered snows in Wyoming and West Colorado.

Temperatures have fallen in the Rocky Mountain region and the Northwest, and they are now generally below the seasonal average. In Wyoming and East Colorado the temperatures range from 10 to 20 degrees below the freezing point, and frosts again occurred Tuesday morning as far south as Central Florida.

There will be snow or rain Wednesday in New York and New England, followed by generally fair weather Thursday. Over the remainder of the country the weather will be generally fair Wednesday and Thursday.

Temperatures will remain comparatively low, except in the Northwest, where they will be rising by Thursday.

Winds along the New England Coast will be moderate to brisk southwest and west; Middle Atlantic Coast, moderate to southwest and west; South Atlantic Coast, moderate west, except northwest and north on the Florida Coast.

Steamships departing Wednesday for European ports will have moderate to brisk southwest and west winds, with occasional rains to the Grand Banks.

FORECASTS FOR TO-DAY AND THURSDAY.

Eastern New York and New England—Snow or rain Wednesday, with moderate to brisk southwest and west winds; Thursday fair.

New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania—Fair in south, local rains or snows in north portion Wednesday; Thursday fair, moderate west winds.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

EDUCATION NOTES.

The Committee on Buildings will make a report to the Board of Education at its meeting to-day relative to turning over to the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund the old stone and brick building known as Public School 15, Westchester and St. Lawrence Avenues, the Bronx, and so much of the site thereof as is required for the extension of St. Lawrence Avenue. It will be recalled that about six months ago the Principal of the school, Miss Elizabeth C. Rottger, and some of her pupils went before Bronx Borough President Cyrus C. Miller and asked that the stone and brick building be removed to an adjoining lot and be used as a public library. President Miller told them that he would take the matter under consideration.

City Supt. Maxwell will submit to the Board of Education to-day abstracts of monthly reports received from school Principals for October, 1912. He will also submit names to be added to eligible lists and report relative to licenses to teach in evening schools, &c.

The Committee on Finance will report to the Board of Education to-day in favor of requesting an issue of corporate stock to the amount of $825,425 for the erection of an addition to Public School 169, Manhattan, and new school buildings at 207th Street, Hull and Decatur Avenues, and Spofford Avenue, Coster and Faile Streets, the Bronx. The same committee will offer resolutions as follows:

Relative to the emergency appointment of Miss S. E. W. Davis as a stenographer and typewriter in the office of the Secretary, at $62.50 a month.

Relative to the resignation of Joseph F. Tiscl., a first grade clerk in the Bureau of Supplies, and the promotion of John J. Barry and Sol Hertzoff, clerks in said bureau.

The board at its meeting to-day will probably retire twelve elementary school teachers and one teacher in the Jamaica Model School.

Thomas P. Gorman will probably be appointed to-day as teacher in charge of Evening Elementary School 1, Queens.

THE CIVIL SERVICE.

City.

The Municipal Civil Service Commission has approved the following:

Request of the Department of Health for authority to employ as nurses Mrs. Emily Brown, Margaret A. Bee, and Edna P. Dickey.

Letter from Coroner Jackson of Richmond transmitting voucher for services of Alfred Bertoncinni as interpreter for one session at $5.

Request of the Commissioner of Parks, Manhattan and Richmond, for approval of the extension of the period of employment of Francis J. McCormack as school farm attendant. Approved for a period not to exceed six months.

Request of the Department of Health that the name of Miss Katherine Hagerty, who was appointed a nurse on Dec. 6, 1911, and resigned before completing her probationary period, be restored to the eligible list and recertified.

Letter from the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity transmitting voucher in the amount of $15 for veterinary services rendered by the Berns Veterinary Hospital.

Request of the Commissioner of Public Works, Manhattan, that the limitation of compensation ($750) in the case of the employment of Ernest Beaty, now serving as an expert Inspector of paving materials, be waived, and his total compensation fixed at $1,500.

Request of the President of Queens for authority to employ Alfred R. Glock as topographical draughtsman with salary at the rate of $1,200 per annum.

Request of the Deputy Controller for approval of the extension of the period of employment of John Joyce and Frank P. Ryan as temporary clerks for an additional three months.

United States.

The United States Civil Service Commission announces an open competitive examination, for men only, at the New York Custom House on Dec. 4 to fill a vacancy in the position of analyst in the Bureau of Soils, Department of Agriculture, at $1,440 a year, for duty at Reno, Nev., and vacancies as they may occur in positions requiring similar qualifications. The duties will consist of analyzing minerals, salts, brines, and similar materials which are suspected of containing potash, phosphoric acid, or nitrogen in such forms and quantities that they might have a value as raw products for the manufacture of fertilizers; and to assist in the preparation of reports upon these analyses, including such chemical, geochemical, and physical examination of samples and their occurrences as may be necessary to determine their importance commercially as well as scientifically.

Competitors will be examined in the following subjects, which will have the relative weights indicated: Analytical chemistry, 25; general chemistry, 25; soil, fertilizer, and geochemistry, 30, and education, training, experience, and fitness, 20.

At least one year's practical experience as a professional chemist or analyst is a prerequisite for consideration for this position. Applicants must have reached their twenty-first but not their fortieth birthday on the date of the examination, which is open to all male citizens of the United States who meet the requirements.

On the same day will be held an examination, for men only, to fill two vacancies in the position of inorganic chemist in the Bureau of Indian Affairs, Philippine Service, at salaries ranging from $1,400 to $2,000 a year and vacancies in positions requiring similar qualifications as they may occur in that service. Competitors will be examined in the following subjects, which will have the relative weights indicated: General physics, 20; general inorganic chemistry, 40, and education, training, experience, and fitness, 40.

An educational training equivalent to that required for a bachelor of science degree from a college or university of recognized standing is a prerequisite for consideration for this position. Applicants must have reached their twenty-first but not their fortieth birthday on the date of the examination.

The medical certificate on Form 2 must be filled in by some medical officer in the service of the United States. Applicants should appear before medical officers of the army, navy, Indian, or public health services. If such an officer cannot be conveniently visited a pension examining surgeon may execute the certificate. When it is impracticable, by reason of the applicant's distance from a Government physician or a pension examining surgeon, to have the medical certificate executed by such physician, it may be executed by any reputable physician. Such person may be required to undergo another examination in case of appointment.

Each applicant will be required to submit with his application a photograph of himself, taken within three years, which will be filed with his papers as a means of identification in case he receives appointment. An unmounted photograph is preferred. The name and date of examination, the competitor's name, and the year in which the photograph was taken should be indicated on the photograph. This examination is open to all male persons who are citizens of or owe allegiance to the United States and who meet the requirements.

Business Opportunities

RICH AS THE VALLEY OF THE NILE
We sell irrigated land in the beautiful Sacramento Valley in California. It is wonderfully rich, deep, fertile, and the water supply abundant.
This field garden will grow oranges, lemons, peaches, prunes, pecans, Bermuda onions, olives, figs, grapes, and sweet alfalfa; also any other crop grown in the United States.
Think of the enormous returns, where you can use land in this delightful climate 12 months in the year, while here you use it only 5 months.

ALIENISTS AID HYDE, FINDING ROBIN INSANE

Unite in Saying Chief Witness Had Paranoia at Time He Testifies To and Still Has It.

JUSTICES ON THE STAND

Four of Supreme Court and Appellate Division Say ex-Chamberlain's Character Was Beyond Reproach.

Although Justice Goff kept his extraordinary term of the Supreme Court in session until 8:45 o'clock last night, Charles H. Hyde, ex-City Chamberlain, on trial for forcing Joseph G. Robin to effect a $130,000 loan from the Northern Bank to the tottering Carnegie Trust Company, did not complete his defense, and court was adjourned until 10:30 o'clock this morning. Several days ago Justice Goff announced that he wished to release the jury for Thanksgiving, and if this be done now it will necessitate the completion of the case of the defense, the taking of testimony in rebuttal and sur-rebuttal, the closing addresses for the prosecution and defense and the charge of Justice Goff, all to be finished in time to-day to allow the jury opportunity for deliberation. It is highly improbable that the case can be completed to-night.

Yesterday was spent in the examination of character witnesses called in Hyde's behalf, and in the examination of alienists who testified that Robin, at the time he alleges Hyde forced him to make the loan, was suffering from paranoia and now is so suffering. The introduction of character witnesses provided an unusual spectacle, for four of the nine men called were Justices, three of them of the Supreme Court in Brooklyn and one the Chief Justice of the Appellate Division in Brooklyn. Each of them, as did the five others, testified that Hyde bore a reputation beyond reproach. The alienists agreed that Robin was a paranoiac. One or two other witnesses were called to substantiate points already made for the defense, and the session terminated with the defense of Hyde still uncompleted.

The commencement of the trial yesterday was delayed by the arraignment of the four gunmen—Herman Rosenthal's murderers—and their sentencing, and then Supreme Court Justice Samuel T. Maddox was called to the stand.

After him came Presiding Justice A. S. Jenks of the Appellate Division, and Supreme Court Justices Josiah T. Marean and William J. Kelly. All testified that Hyde bore a good reputation; that they had never heard a word said against him, though they had read criticisms in the newspapers. They made an impressive array of witnesses in Hyde's behalf.

The Specialists Condemn Robin.

Mgr. Patrick J. O'Hare, Simon F. Rothschild of Abraham & Straus, William Fleming, an eighty-two-year-old resident of Nova Scotia, where Hyde was born; George W. Chauncey, President of the Mechanics' Bank, and Julian B. Fairchild, President of the Kings County Trust Company, followed to say that Hyde was well known, and bore a good reputation. Then Max D. Steuer, who, with John B. Stanchfield, is counsel for Hyde, called the first of the alienists to prove Robin's insanity, and thus discredit his testimony upon which the direct case against Hyde rests.

Dr. Austin Flint was the first of these witnesses, and he was followed by Dr. Smith E. Jelliffe, Dr. Carlos F. MacDonald, Dr. William Mabon, Dr. M. S. Gregory, Dr. H. Valentine Wildman, and Dr. Max G. Schlapp. In the meantime, Mrs. Herman Rabinowich, said to be Robin's mother, was called, but Justice Goff excluded all of Mr. Steuer's questions concerning the parentage of Robin, and the little, old woman was excused. Following the alienists and the several other witnesses in corroboration of points made on Hyde's behalf, Mr. Steuer read to the jury a transcript of Robin's testimony before Judge Swann and the jury which ex-District Attorney W. T. Jerome termed the "ragbag" jury in his bankruptcy proceedings when Robin was declared officially sane.

It was evident that the lawyer intended to show that the former jury had been moved by the consideration that Robin had been a defendant when the question of his sanity was raised and that it would have been a victory for him to have been pronounced insane.

Mr. Steuer did the reading, and in so far as he could without making his effort too obvious he lent considerable histrionism to the wandering garrulity of the skyrocket financier. Many of Robin's animadversions on the stand that day were received yesterday with gusts of laughter from the jury box, laughter in which Mr. Moss and Mr. Clark joined from time to time, but without great heartiness.

Some of Robin's Illusions.

The record as Mr. Steuer read it to the jury showed Robin, in response to the prodding questions of Mr. Jerome, pouring forth a rambling story, in which he appeared as one directed by the Supreme Spirit, hearing frequently in his right ear a voice which directed all his actions to frustrate certain vast villainies in the world of high finance. His importance in this mission was emphasized by the fact that attempts on his life were as frequent as his messages from the Supreme Spirit. He pictured himself as arrayed against all the powers of the financial world, from J. Pierpont Morgan to Clark Williams and District Attorney Whitman. The record was full of vague accusations by Robin against men in high places, accusations which he urged the District Attorney to investigate.

All these passages received a sly emphasis from Mr. Steuer's elocution, as though he wished his hearers to see that the accusation of Hyde by Robin was just part of the fallen financier's entire plan to accuse many persons, under the delusion of Divine inspiration, a plan which he was sworn to carry out if his life were spared from the various attempts to assassinate him.

In this trial Robin is the accuser, the man on whose testimony rests almost the whole issue of Hyde's guilt or innocence, and Mr. Steuer evidently hoped that the jury, unbiased by what they might believe were Robin's personal interests, might be persuaded that Robin was insane by his very testimony, though it had resulted before in his being adjudged sane. The reading of this testimony completed the session of court. Mr. Steuer said he hoped the prosecution might begin rebuttal testimony to-day, and Justice Goff, apparently convinced that he could not complete the case by to-night, discussed with Mr. Steuer and Mr. Moss the advisability of holding court on Thanksgiving Day. He finally said he would determine to-night after consultation with the jurors.

Expert Testimony Unshaken.

The alienists agreed, to sum their testimony in a few words, that Robin was insane when they examined him in December, 1910, and January of 1911, that he was suffering from a form of insanity which could not have developed after Aug. 22, 1910, so that he must have been insane when he says Hyde forced him to make the $130,000 loan and that he was insane now. Assistant District Attorney Moss could not shake the experts on cross-examination. He endeavored to show that they had not tried to examine Robin before giving their testimony yesterday, and one and all they agreed that it wasn't necessary, that they had settled in their own minds the form of insanity from which he was suffering and that they knew his kind of insanity was incurable.

Dr. Flint said that in his examinations Robin had told him of being persecuted by J. P. Morgan and August Belmont, that detectives had trailed him for twelve years trying to shoot him, that he slept with his doors double bolted and with newspapers on the floor so that their rustle, were any one to enter, might arouse him, that his milk had been poisoned, and that he had frequently to change restaurants so that his food might not be poisoned, and that he lived in constant fear of his life.

The physician said that Robin believed himself to be a natural son of the Czar of Russia, and that he had a mission to perform on this earth, the mission being the "unification of the world." Dr. Flint said Robin wore rubber soled shoes in the Tombs to insulate himself against the electric shocks of Tesla, who, he believed, was in the employ of Morgan and Belmont, and was striving to kill him. Robin also told him, said the doctor, that some one in the Tombs had tried to brain him with a milk bottle by throwing it at his head from a higher tier of cells.

The other alienists had been led to their conclusions as to Robin's insanity by much the same observations. One point which Dr. Flint made was that Robin actually had taken poison in the District Attorney's office. Mr. Moss tried hard to bar out this testimony, but Justice Goff allowed it.

Dr. Max G. Schlapp, the alienist, gave it as his opinion that Robin had been and was yesterday a paranoiac.

CUTS CONKLING'S DEMAND.

Court Decides $7,641.54 a Year Is a Big Enough Allowance for Him.

Surrogate Robert Ludlow Fowler denied yesterday the plea of ex-Assemblyman Alfred R. Conkling for a larger allowance to himself as general guardian of his three daughters, heiresses of two-thirds of the residuary estate of their uncle, George Lorillard Ronalds. Conkling had protested against the awards allowed by Referee Wilbur Larremore, but the Surrogate confirmed Larremore's report.

Conkling represented himself as a man of dwindling fortune, to whom the Ronalds legacy was a windfall, enabling him to keep his daughters in their proper position in society, as he otherwise would have been unable to do. In the year before the children had the legacy, he said, he had been compelled to mortgage real estate, because he had been living beyond his means. This cut his income, he said, from approximately $15,000 a year to a little more than $10,000. He took advantage of the legacy, he said, to spend $30,000 on his own and his daughters' expenses the next year.

"Two or three years before this inheritance," he said, "I had been living beyond my income, and spending my principal. The children were born in brownstone houses, and had always been accustomed to horses, carriages, and riding ponies, but no automobile, although since the inheritance they had asked for one often."

"Did you purchase one?" he was asked.

"No," he replied. "I never bought one on account of the expense."

Among the things he did was to take his daughters to Southampton, which he characterized as a "dear, expensive place."

"I was among people I had known for thirty years," he said. "I joined the Meadow Club and the Southampton Club, and subscribed to the dances. I also subscribed $50 to the hunt—the Suffolk County Hunt."

The season at Southampton, he said, cost him $4,200.

He asked $4,000 a year for the eldest girl, and $3,000 each for the two others. Referee Larremore allowed him $2,475.55 for Muriel, $2,689.77 for Olga, and $2,476.22 for Vivian.

A Big Change
LOTS of men who have always had their clothes made to order are now wearing Hart, Schaffner & Marx clothes—
Because they find that Hart, Schaffner & Marx clothes fit as well and often better than those custom made and cost a great deal less,—then, too, think of the time and trouble saved in not having to be fitted four or five times.
Just ask a man who has worn Hart, Schaffner & Marx suits or overcoats what he thinks of them—or, better still, come in and try on as many as you want. Then you will be able to judge for yourself—and, really, you'll be surprised at the prices, they're so low compared with the quality.
If you wish to have us do so and will furnish the usual references, we will gladly open a monthly charge account for you.
